GERMANS FIGHT AT HANKOW

IMPERIAL TROOPS ARRIVE

Rebels Move Toward Them Near Hankow and an Engagement Is Expected—More Soldiers Desert.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 18.—A telegram from Hankow to The Daily Mail, dated Tuesday, 4 P. M., says:

"The revolutionists are carefully fortifying their positions here and are enrolling enthusiastic volunteers.

"Numbers of the troops who have been sent from the north to suppress the rising are leaving the Government forces on their arrival and joining the rebels.

"Non-combatants are departing from Hankow in thousands, and arrangements have been made for the evacuation of the foreign concessions if that step is considered necessary for the safety of the foreign residents.

"Admiral Sah Chen-Ping, the commander of the Government's Yang-tse squadron, has arrived with eight warships, and hostilities are expected immediately.

"The British and Japanese Admirals are defending the foreign concessions, and have at their command thirteen foreign warships.

"A Red Cross neutral camp has been formed with the consent of the Consuls, under the Presidency of Dr. MacWillie, an American missionary.

"The Government troops at the disposal of Yuan Shi-Kai are reported to be disaffected and unreliable."

PAO-TING-FU, Oct. 17.—Kai-Fong, the capital of Ho-Nan Province, a city with a population of 100,000, is reported to have fallen before the revolutionists.

Fall of Nanking Imminent.

PEKING, Oct. 17.—The acting American Consul at Nanking, Alvin W. Gilbert, telegraphed to the American Legation here to-day that the fall of Nanking was imminent. He asks that a gunboat be sent there.

The Foreign Board to-day issued the following optimistic communiqué to the Legations and press:

> Admiral Sah Chen-Ping arrived at Hankow to-day with eight ships of war, and troops from the North and East are arriving there. It is expected that the recapture of Han-Yang and Wu-Chang will be a matter of only a few days.
>
> Dispatches from Nanking, Chang-Sha, Canton, An-King, Mukden, Kai-Fong, Tien-Tsin, and Foo-Chow state that everything is quiet and that there is no fear of any disturbances.

The information of the legations indicates that only the first statement of the official communication is strictly accurate.

The Minister of War, Gen. Yin-Tchang, is at Chang-te-Nan, the home of Yuan Shi-Kai, with whom he is in concerence. Yuan, according to the official announcement, has accepted the post of Viceroy of Hu-Pe and Hu-Nan and responsibility for restoring order there. A decision as to Yuan's next move, however, has not yet been reached, but it is expected immediately.

Nine troop trains left Pao Ting-Fu today. All the soldiers are in excellent spirits.

Late advices from Hankow say that 8,000 Government troops are encamped outside that city.

So far as can be learned, the situation at Wu-Chang for the past six days has remained absolutely unchanged. There are no indications that the rebels possess any allies at points elsewhere, and, considering all the circumstances connected with the uprising in the provinces of Hu-Pe and Hu-Nan, the revolutionists do not appear to be making much progress.

It is now said that the insurgents number at the most 6,000 drilled men, together with a few thousand armed auxiliaries. It is asserted by Chinese officials that the rebels' success at Wu-Chang was a pure coup de main, following the seizure and decapitation of some civilian revolutionaries. With these civilians were associated many of the Wu-Chang soldiers. Strong detachments of troops from Ho-Nan have united with the Government troops from the north, and a joint naval and military bombardment of the city will probably take place on Saturday. This will be followed by an assault.

It is predicted that the collapse of the revolution is only a matter of days. It will, however, have had the effect of intensifying the agitation for the immediate assembling of a National Parliament, and for radical reforms in the provincial administration system, which the throne will be obliged to accept.

Chinese Warships at Hankow.

Admiral Sah Chen-Ping, according to an official announcement, arrived at Hankow to-day with eight warships, and there are not fewer than a dozen foreign warships lying in the harbor. Vice Admiral Sir Alfred L. Winsloe, commander of the British China Station, arrived at noon today in the dispatch boat Alacrity. As he is the ranking officer, he may assume command of the combined forces.

The desertion of Gen. Li Yuan-Heng from the rebel leadership is reported, but this is believed to be a Government story

NEW TIMES SQUARE THEATRE

Old Church in Forty-second Street to be Supplanted by a Playhouse.

Another Times Square landmark is about to give way for a new theatre. The old Central Baptist Church, on the south side of Forty-second Street, a few doors west of Seventh Avenue, was sold yesterday for about $500,000. It has been purchased by Harry H. Frazee of the theatrical firm of Frazee & Lederer and P. Chauncey Anderson. Mr. Frazee said that the structure will be torn down about Dec. 15, and on the site will be erected one of the handsomest amusement houses in the city.

The property covers the premises from 220 to 226 West Forty-second Street, having a frontage of 78 feet and a depth of 98.9 feet. A. C. and L. A. Marks were the brokers in the transaction.

The church is one of the oldest buildings now remaining in the Times Square vicinity. It was erected in 1841, being virtually a pioneer in what was then regarded as an out-of-town section, and it was one of the first Baptist edifices built north of Thirty-fourth Street and below the Harlem line.

Changing conditions in the last few years led to a transfer of the membership a year ago to the West Park Baptist Church at Amsterdam Avenue and Ninety-second Street, the two churches consolidating with the Rev. Dr. Frank S. Goodchild of the Central Church as pastor.

The Trustees of the church have reserved the right to the contents of the old cornerstone, which will be carefully removed during the work of demolition.

The new theatre to be erected on the church plot will make the ninth on the block between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, not counting one or two moving-picture houses.

Mr. Frazee said that he was building this new theatre for his own productions without reference to the firm of Frazee & Lederer. The firm, he explained, would continue with their projected playhouse in West Forty-eighth Street, details of which were published some time ago, but he would reserve the Forty-second Street theatre for his personal ventures. He did not say what type of attractions he expected to put into the new house, but people interested in theatrical affairs stated that it was probable he would try the experiment of a popular-priced musical comedy house, giving two performances a day, such as he conducted in Chicago with success.

It is expected that the new house will be ready for opening almost as soon as the Julian Eltinge Theatre, now in the course of construction for A. H. Woods. This latter made the eighth theatre to be erected in Forty-second Street, and the Lederer playhouse will be number nine. The others are the New Amsterdam, Liberty, Harris, American, Lyric, Republic, and Victoria.

HURLS BOY TO HIS DEATH.

Peddler Breaks Annoyer's Head Against a Telegraph Pole.

A crowd of school boys raided a fruit and vegetable peddler's wagon at Second and Monroe Streets, Hoboken, N. J., yesterday afternoon, and James Depillo of 404 Madison Street, in charge of the wagon, gave chase. Persons in the street stopped to laugh at the peddler's efforts, for the small boys dodged and slipped away from him with ease.

Only thirteen-year-old John Lisa of 423 Monroe Street seemed unable to elude the angry peddler, and the crowd's laughter turned to indignation and rage as they saw the peddler grab the boy and fling him headlong against a telegraph pole. Blood poured from the boy's nose, mouth, and eyes, and he lay unconscious.

Depillo, terrified by the spectacle and by the rush of angry men who sprang at him from every side, took to his heels and disappeared down Second Street, finally losing his pursuers in an alleyway in Second Street.

Charles R. Ruff and Philip Gulden, who had seen the boy fall, picked him up, and, placing him in a painter's wagon, which stood near by, got the painter to rush him to St. Mary's Hospital, only two blocks away. As the boy was carried inside the hospital he died. The physicians said his skull had been fractured.

Detectives Garrick and Weinthal set out to look for Depillo and found him some time later hiding in a shed in the alley into which he had disappeared. He was locked up at Police Headquarters charged with murder.

IN COMMAND ON STRETCHER.

Skipper, Though Disabled in Auto Smash Brings His Liner Into Port.

A steamer came into port yesterday from a voyage which was directed by a skipper who had to be carried about the ship on a stretcher and who was still unable to move of his own accord when the liner docked. The vessel was the Coppename of the Royal Dutch West Indies Service, and the skipper was Capt. Dirk Hassnott, who was injured in an automobile accident near Port au Spain, Trinidad, a few days ago.

There were four in the automobile at the time of the accident. One of the passengers was killed, while the three others were all badly injured. The survivors were taken to a hospital. The doctors told Capt. Hassnott that it would be at least three weeks before he would be in condition to take command of his ship again.

The skipper shook his head and told the doctors that he was compelled to disagree with them.

"I will be in command of the Coppename when she sails for New York," he said; and he was.

The next day the skipper was taken to his ship on a stretcher, his arms and legs in bandages, one of the legs also being in splints. True to his word, he directed the progress of his ship to New York.

Capt. Hassnott said that the automobile struck a barrel in the road and then ran into a tree.

"I will never ride in an automobile again," he said yesterday. "Hereafter I will do my riding on ships. I shall be in command of the Coppename when she sails for Trinidad, a few days from now."

FORBIDS PRIZE EUCHRES.

Elizabeth Card Players Get a Shock from Prosecutor Adams.

Special to The New York Times.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Oct. 17.—Many Elizabeth men, prominent in county and city affairs, who are not averse to playing a little game of poker after business hours, are in a quandary because of an order issued to-day by C. Addison Swift, Prosecutor of the Pleas of Union County.

Under the direction of the Grand Jury, which is now in session here, the Prosecutor has ordered the police to prevent the holding of bridge whist parties and prize euchres, as well as all private card games for stakes.

The Young Men's Catholic League of St. Patrick's Church had advertised a prize euchre for to-night, but the members were notified by the police that the prize-giving would have to be eliminated.

OLIVE FREMSTAD GETS A DIVORCE

$50 A MONTH ALIMONY

Referee Found That Singer Had Been Supporting Mining Man She Married After San Francisco Earthquake.

The arrival of Mme. Olive Fremstad, one of the leading dramatic sopranos of the Metropolitan Opera Company, yesterday on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse disclosed the fact that she had obtained divorce from her husband, E. W. Sutphen, on July 11 in this State.

The divorce was granted by Supreme Court Justice Lehman on the report of Robert L. Luce, referee. Mrs. Sutphen accused her husband of infidelity at the Hotel Imperial and the Hotel Werner last January and February.

Referee Luce found that the evidence of Sutphen's misconduct on at least one occasion at the Hotel Werner was conclusive, and also that Mme. Fremstad had supported her husband for the last two years. The court ordered Sutphen, who is six feet tall and 45 years old, to pay his wife $50 a month alimony.

Mme. Fremstad testified that when she met her husband in Salt Lake City in 1906 he told her he was the owner of many million dollars' worth of property in South America, including several gold mines, and that he had $200,000 in cash, with which he was going to speculate. When she advised him, she said, not to use this money in that way, he silenced her with the remark that he had plenty to spare if he should lose it. Sutphen was formerly an officer in the United States Navy. The ownership of gold mines, she said, had been his principal occupation recently.

The singer was married to E. W. Sutphen shortly after the San Francisco earthquake in Salt Lake City. On the night the earthquake occurred Mme. Fremstad was singing "Carmen" in San Francisco. She started East as soon as possible after the disaster, and was married on her way back.

It is generally understood that Mme. Fremstad gave up the idea of singing "Mona," the prize American opera to be produced at the Metropolitan this season, on account of her domestic difficulties. She is said to have had no desire to study a new rôle this Summer, and preferred to take a complete rest.

She came in accompanied by her companion, Miss Watkins, and a Pomeranian dog. Mme. Fremstad was wearing a purple suit of the latest cut. Her hat was of black felt, with white feathers. She paid that she would probably make her début as Brunnhilde or Armide. She intends to have an apartment, but at present she will stay at the Hotel Astor.

FELL ON CIRCULAR SAW.

One Arm of Mill Hand Cut Off and His Body Cut.

George T. Klitz, proprietor of a sawmill and planing mill at 246th Street and Waldo Avenue, in the Kingsbridge section of the Bronx, was in the engine room of the mill yesterday afternoon when he heard a scream from the planing room, where Tony Poness, his assistant, had been guiding big logs against a whirling circular saw. Klitz rushed into the planing room and saw Poness, practically held by the swiftly moving saw, which had amputated his right arm just below the shoulder. The teeth were already entering his right side, and in an instant more he would have been cut in half.

Klitz sprang forward to drag Poness away when some of the teeth caught in the victim's clothing, and his body was snatched up almost from Klitz's hands, flung around in the air, and sent spinning to fall in the sawdust pit behind the saw, and five feet below the floor level.

Horrified, Klitz rushed out and found Policeman Gillespie of the Kingsbridge Station. Gillespie told Klitz to telephone to Fordham Hospital for an ambulance. Then he ran for the sawmill.

He found Poness almost buried in the heap of sawdust in the pit. His groans showed that he was alive, and Gillespie jumped into the pit, sinking to his armpits in the soft sawdust. Clouds of the dust choked him whenever he moved, but, gasping and almost strangled himself, he finally lifted Poness to the floor and scrambled out.

Poness, now unconscious, was bleeding fast from the stump of his severed arm and from the wound in his side. Gillespie, with his nightstick and a couple of handkerchiefs, made a tourniquet around the arm, but he could do nothing to dress the wound in the side, and when Dr. Donohue arrived from Fordham Hospital he said the man would almost surely die.

It is supposed that Poness must have slipped on the sawdust-strewn floor and fallen against the revolving saw.

ENDS HER LIFE WITH FIRE.

Discarded Wife Burns Herself to Death at Springfield, L. I.

Lying in a clump of still blazing bushes, charred almost beyond recognition, the body of Mrs. Harriet E. Schneider was found yesterday afternoon near her husband's hotel at Gherry and Springfield Avenues, Springfield, L. I. The police said the woman committed suicide by setting fire to the bushes and then jumping into them.

The woman's act is said to have been caused by the refusal of her husband to take her back. They had been living apart since last Christmas. He sued her for divorce, and obtained an interlocutory decree recently, but she had it set aside.

About a month ago Mrs. Schneider attempted suicide at Rockaway Beach by drinking carbolic acid. A Magistrate released her when she promised never again to make an attempt upon her life. She said then that she had tried to die because, without the companionship of her husband, life was not worth living.

After the body had been removed to a Jamaica undertaking establishment, Schneider went to the Coroner's office to claim it just as a sister of the dead woman telephoned that she would take charge of the burial. Each insisted on taking the body. Finally Coroner Schaefer decided that the husband had the best claim, and ordered it turned over to his undertaker.

CROWD THREATENS TO LYNCH NEGRO

With Loud Cries, They Attempt to Take Him from Policemen After He Fired Two Shots.

FIRST OFFENDED ONE MAN

And Sent a Bullet at Him as He Ran from Punishment—Negro Run Down and Beaten After Clamorous Chase.

Charles H. Kromer of 289 West 142d Street left his home about 8:30 o'clock last evening and had started to walk toward Seventh Avenue when a negro bumped into him. Kromer made some remark of remonstrance, to which the negro replied angrily and reached for his hip pocket. Kromer is a large man, more than 6 feet in height and heavy in proportion. Assuming that the negro meant to draw a revolver he sprang at him. The negro turned and ran.

Kromer, shouting for him to stop, started in pursuit, and before the negro had reached the corner of Eighth Avenue a crowd of nearly fifty men and boys was at Kromer's heels. All were shouting threats against the negro, and he, apparently frightened out of his wits, whirled about as he reached Eighth Avenue, and drawing a revolver from his pocket, fired point blank at Kromer, who was nearest to him, not more than fifteen feet away.

The bullet tore a hole through Kromer's left trousers leg, but did not even bruise the skin. Simply angered by the shot, Kromer redoubled his pace to catch the negro. The crowd, too, though it hesitated for an instant, was behind Kromer in resuming the chase, and into Eighth Avenue pursued and pursuers ran, those behind shouting "kill the nigger. He's got a gun. Lynch him."

The negro swung into 141st Street and started toward Seventh Avenue. He was short and stocky, but his legs were fast. Kromer, bigger and faster, was overtaking him rapidly. Behind him came the yelling crowd, and at last the negro stopped once more to whirl about and take a shot. His bullet flew wide of his mark and embedded itself in the door of a tenement house between the entrances of a tailor's shop and a barber's shop at 267 West 141st Street.

In a chair in a barber's shop Policeman Joseph Goldstein of the West 100th Street Station sat being shaved. Awaiting his turn was Policeman John Higgins of the same station. Both heard the report of the revolver shot and the shouts of the crowd. Goldstein sprang out of the chair, his face partly lathered, and, with Higgins beside him, took up the chase. The crowd, somewhat winded, made space for the policemen, who soon had overtaken Kromer and assumed the lead. Ahead of them, perhaps twenty feet, ran the terrified negro.

Higgins and Goldstein had their revolvers in their hands. They shouted to the negro to halt, and when he failed to obey fired their revolvers into the air. Instead of stopping the fugitive the sound of the shots seemed to electrify him into greater action, and he ran ahead even faster than he had been going before.

At the corner of Seventh Avenue he started north as though to turn back into 142d Street. As he rounded the corner he plunged headlong into Frederick Miller of 229 West 149th Street. The negro had his revolver in his hand and instantly he thrust it into Miller's face. The latter swung with one hand, knocking the revolver spinning into the air, and with the other he caught the negro a crashing blow on the jaw. The exhausted man fell to the sidewalk, and before either Goldstein or Higgins could reach him a dozen men who had gathered as though by magic at the corner kicked him in the head and face.

The policemen scattered the crowd around the fallen negro with blows of their fists and the butts of their revolvers, and then dragged him over to the foot of a fence in Seventh Avenue, near the corner. There they stood over him, threatening the crowd with their revolvers and nightsticks. From the crowd came shouts and yells.

"Give him up! Let us get at him! We'll fix him. He tried to shoot us. Give us a chance. We'll kill him!"

The negro groveled against the policemen's knees. The crowd pressed closer each moment till Higgins and Goldstein held their revolvers threateningly, declaring:

"The first chap who buts in here'll get his."

With each moment the crowd became more eager and more threatening. They did not believe that the policemen would shoot, and were closing in closer and closer about them when there came a shot from down the avenue. Coming on the run were half a dozen policemen. Autoists who had seen the crowd about the two policemen had cautioned every other policeman they encountered as they sped down the street.

The reinforcements went at the crowd with their nightsticks, and the would-be lynchers ducked and ran before them. Then there came another rush of feet and the reserves of the West 125th Street Station came up on the run, having been summoned by some cool head by telephone.

With an escort of a score of policemen the negro was led to the West 125th Street Station. His face and head were cut in a dozen places. Both eyes were blackened.

"The gang up there were out after me and they got me. That's all there is to it," he said, when he reached the safety of the station house.

He said he was Harry D. Garya, vaudeville performer, living at 241 West 142d Street. He denied that he had intentionally bumped into Kromer. He was locked up for having had a revolver and for having used it.

According to persons in the neighborhood there are three flat houses in 142d Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, occupied exclusively by negroes, most of whom are singers or performers of some kind. Their continued practice of their talents at night which frequently has prevented the rest of the neighborhood from sleeping is said to have created considerable hard feelings between the whites and the blacks.

WRIGHTS IMPROVE GLIDER.

Changes in Steering Gear Bring Machine Under Better Control.

MANTEO, N. C., Oct. 17.—Light winds prevented any extensive experiments today with the Wright glider. Orville Wright made changes in the steering apparatus which in actual demonstration proved valuable.

With a broader steering surface the glider soared more steadily, settling as lightly as thistledown, and Wright and his assistants expressed their delight.

Five flights were made, varying in distance from 120 to 150 yards. The machine was under much better control than during the first day's experiments.

STATES MAY FIGHT TOBACCO TRUST PLAN

Attorneys General of Virginia, North and South Carolina Are to Meet Here.

CONSIDER FILING PROTEST

Course of Action Depends on Whether They Find That Proposal Will Really Disintegrate the Combination.

The Attorneys General of North Carolina, South Carolina, and Virginia are to meet in this city on Thursday to discuss the plan of the American Tobacco Company for its disintegration, as filed on Monday in the United States Circuit Court. Should they reach the conclusion that it will not result in the restoration of competitive conditions they may file protests with the court. The first news of this move to reach this city came in a telegram yesterday from Attorney General Bickett of North Carolina to Charles R. Carruth of 2 Rector Street, counsel for the R. P. Richardson, Jr., Company, Incorporated, of Reidsville, N. C. This is the trust subsidiary which already has objected to the proposed plan and is to file an amended petition for its rejection in the next few days.

Attorney General Bickett's message was as follows:

> Raleigh, N. C.
>
> The Attorneys General of Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina desire to have time to study plan of dissolution filed by American Tobacco Company, and to submit a protest if they conclude it advisable. Please wire me when public hearing will be held by court and how long continued.
>
> T. W. BICKETT,
> Attorney General of North Carolina.

Mr. Carruth replied, offering every assistance in his power. He said he knew nothing of the contemplated action of the authorities of the three States beyond the information contained in the telegram.

To THE TIMES correspondent in Raleigh, N. C., last night Mr. Bickett said that he and the Attorneys General of Virginia and South Carolina had agreed to go to New York for a careful examination of the plan with a view to determining whether or not they will file protests and resist its approval by the court. Their protests, if made, will be in the interest of the tobacco planters of the three States, which constitute the bright tobacco belt. Mr. Bickett said he and the other Attorneys General did not yet know whether they would fight the plan or not, this depending entirely upon what inspection of the details of the plan developed. Mr. Bickett said that he and Gov. Kitchin had been conferring for several days as to this course, and that the Governor was co-operating in the movement.

From Columbia, S. C., came word that Attorney General J. Frazer Lyon will leave to-day for this city to confer with Mr. Bickett. Mr. Lyon said he had decided to go to New York, and would attend the conference, although he was not fully informed as to the precise purpose of the conference nor as to the plan of procedure that might be adopted. Mr. Lyon said he had not yet decided what part, if any, South Carolina would take in any concerted action against the adoption of the Tobacco Trust's plan of reorganization.

Attorney General Samuel W. Williams of Virginia said last night in Richmond that he had received a message from the Attorneys General of North and South Carolina asking for a conference on what steps to take in opposing the reorganization plan of the Tobacco Trust.

All three of the States are large producers of tobacco leaf. North Carolina is the home State of the Richardson company, which is located at Reidsville, and there are many factories in the other States.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 17.—Attorney General Wickersham denied this evening that he had given out any statement indicating what action the Department of Justice might take relative to the reorganization plan filed by the American Tobacco Company. He said the matter had not come to him in an official way.

"I will not be responsible for any statement that is not made over my own name," said the Attorney General. "I have not gone over the proposed plan of reorganization of the American Tobacco Company, and know of it only as I have seen extracts printed."

AEROPLANE WITH WINGS.

Dayton Inventor Flies Successfully Without an Engine.

Special to The New York Times.

DAYTON, Ohio, Oct. 17.—Farmers residing south of Dayton were astonished late to-day to see an aeroplane like a bird, without an engine, soar over their heads and then gracefully settle to earth.

The airman proved to be Charles E. Stacy, a local inventor, experimenting with his new aeroplane with wings, which he believes has solved the perplexing problem of aerial navigation without the use of artificial motive power. The aviator made six short flights to-day, and said that while the invention is not entirely perfected, he believes that it is sufficiently well advanced to assure ultimate success.

"The machine is of the soaring type," said Mr. Stacy. "It is an arnithopter, which means that it soars like a bird. We have been attempting to complete an invention that had been abandoned many years ago."

Mr. Stacy said that the flights to-day were made at the rate of about twenty-five miles an hour. He would not discuss the character of the propelling force, as he declared this to be a secret.

GOODWIN-GOODRICH SUIT UP.

Actor Wants Property He Gave to Former Wife Reconveyed to Him.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 17.—Nat C. Goodwin's pre-nuptial agreement with Edna Goodrich, made in May, 1908, six months before their marriage, of which Mayor T. C. Dudley of Ocean Park was named as trustee, was the basis of an argument in a suit begun by Mr. Goodwin in the Superior Court to-day to have the agreement declared null and to reconvey to Mr. Goodwin various shares of stock and bonds and 190 acres of land.

The consideration received by Mr. Goodwin for turning over to his prospective bride the income from half of his personal and real property was her promise to marry him, but in his complaint he declares, as a reason why the agreement should be voided, that the agreement was made while he was still the husband of Maxine Elliott.

PRINCE TROUBETSKOY SLAIN.

Assassinated in Private Car by Student Said to be a Kinsman.

NOVO-TCHERKASK, Russia, Oct. 17.—Prince Troubetskoy was assassinated today. A student entered a private car in which the Prince was traveling to this town, and shot him several times with a revolver.

The Prince died a few hours later. The murderer is said to be a relative of the Prince.

The Prince Troubetskoy, assassinated by a student, is described in the records as a member of the Council of the Empire, and is, therefore, believed to be Prince Peter, the only member of the Troubetskoy family who has been elected to that body.

The Troubetzkoy family is one of the most famous in Russia. A member of this family, Prince Pierre, married the American authoress, Amelie Rives, who had divorced John Armstrong Chanler, now known as Challoner, and Prince Pierre has since made his home in this city. He is best known as a painter, but he has also written a novel, "The Passerby," in which he portrayed some of the vagaries of social leaders in this country.

Prince Paul Troubetzkoy, a brother of Prince Pierre, visited America in the early part of the present year. He is one of the foremost European sculptors of the present day and has carried away prize after prize at expositions and the like. He has also shown marked skill as a painter. An exhibition of his work was given in the building of the Hispanic Society, where the paintings of the Spaniard, Sorolla, had earlier won popular approval.

The mother of Prince Pierre and Prince Paul Troubetzkoy was Ada Winans; their father was Pierre Troubetzkoy.

Perhaps the most prominent member of the Troubetzkoy family in recent years was Prince Sergius Troubetzkoy, who died in 1905. He was regarded as the leader of the Russan constitutional reformers. This Prince was Marshal of the Nobility, and he presided over the Zemstvo Congress at Moscow in 1904 and headed the delegation which presented the petition of the congress to Emperor Nicholas.

Another member of the family has been an attaché of the Russian Embassy in London.

BOY KILLED IN A DUEL.

Is Shot Dead by a Classmate, Who Then Shoots Himself.

RUDOLSTADT, Germany, Oct. 17.—Hans von Necker, a schoolboy, 16 years of age, was shot dead to-day in a duel with a classmate of about his own age.

The boys were rivals in a love affair, which culminated in a challenge and prompt acceptance while the two and the girl were at a dancing lesson.

After the duel the dead boy's opponent shot himself twice. His condition is said to be hopeless.

BAN ON YALE FRESHMEN.

Sheffield Students Deprived of Privileges for Trying to Burn Bridges.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 17.—The freshman class in the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale University has been placed under severe bans for an indefinite period for rowdyism and vandalism on Friday night last, when the old custom of attempting to burn bridges over the railroad in the college section was revived.

Director Russell H. Chittenden to-day deprived the class from all athletic and musical representation, either for the class, school, or university, for an indefinite period.

DEATH KNELL OF MONOPOLY.

Wickersham So Terms the Supreme Court Trust Decisions.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 17.—The recent trust decisions of the Supreme Court have practically sounded the death knell of monopolistic combinations in the United States, but have not injured legitimate business, according to Attorney General George W. Wickersham. He said:

"And by that I mean large, healthy, legitimate business. It is hard to say yet what the popular effect of the decisions will be, there has been so much talk one way and another. Popular sentiment will wait on the effect of the decision on business, but finally, I believe, the country will understand that a very great step has been taken in checking artificial business growth without interfering with normal healthy growth."

PRIVATE BANKER MISSING.

He Was Out on Bail Under a Charge of Forgery.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Oct. 17.—Emil Sameth, a Hungarian private banker, is missing from his home and office, and many persons who say they had deposited money with him are making inquiries as to his whereabouts. Sameth was arrested last night on a charge of forgery and released on bail. He has not been seen here, so far as can be learned, since early this morning.

Sameth had made application to the Banking and Insurance Department of New Jersey for a certificate permitting him to do business as a private banker. Joseph M. Conklin, who is connected with the department, came here to make an investigation. Subsequently, on the recommendation of Conkling, a warrant was sworn out charging Sameth with forgery.

It is alleged that he had made no mention in his application of $15,000 which he is said to have been holding on deposit for clients and which he had no legal right to hold, not having a certificate to do a private banking business.

CANADA CENSUS DISAPPOINTS

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 17.—The figures for the decennial census of Canda taken in June last are sorely disappointing the Canadians. The census of 1901 gave a total population of 5,371,315. The late Government promised that the 1911 count would reveal a total of eight millions. The official statement issued to-night gives a population of only 7,081,869, with four electorial districts to hear from. These four districts will probably add 70,000.

The totals by Provinces are: Alberta, 372,919; British Columbia, 362,768; Manitoba, 454,691; New Brunswick, 351,815; Nova Scotia, 461,847; Ontario, 2,519,902; Prince Edward Island, 93,722; Quebec, 2,000,697; Saskatchewan, 453,506, and Northwest Territories, 10,000.

Montreal leads the cities with a population of 466,197. Toronto comes next with 376,240.

The principal increases are shown in Western Canada. Winnipeg has grown from 42,340 to 135,430 in the decade.

ELEVEN-INNING CONTEST

GIANTS' BATS INEFFECTIVE

Coombs Outwits Their Hardest Hitters to the Last with His Puzzling Swift Curves.

The mighty Mathewson, whose strong right arm and steel nerve have carried the Giants through the tumultuous strife of half a score of baseball seasons, cracked before the battering of the sturdy youths of Philadelphia in the third game of the world's series at the Polo Grounds yesterday, and after bearing the brunt of the fight on his shoulders for ten innings, the Athletics—the youthful, mild-mannered batsmen of Connie Mack—fell upon him in the eleventh and batted out a victory by the score of 3 to 2.

When Matty faltered the whole Giant outfit lost its grip and glaring errors stripped the boxman's work of its necessary support, and when darkness was gathering about Coogan's Bluff the American Leaguers rushed to the front triumphantly with the first victory they have ever gained over the National League's superior pitcher.

It was Matty's game up to the ninth inning. At times the Athletics crowded close to victory, but each time when danger threatened, the cool veteran held the ball with a firmer grip and spun it over the plate at angles and tangents which could never be straightened into base hits. Twice it looked bad for him, in the fifth and the eighth, but both times his skill and generalship carried him through.

In the ninth inning, when the Giants were in the lead, 1 to 0, with one out, Frank Baker, the youthful Maryland farmer with the eagle eye and vicious swing, outguessed the veteran and tied the score with a tremendous home-run drive into the right field grand stand.

Matty's Confidence Shaken.

The stunning surprise of this Titanic blow, the spontaneous outburst of deafening enthusiasm, the sudden turn of victory into the uncertainty of a deadlock—all these tended to break Matty's confidence and put him on the defense.

He had been warned against this youth Baker, but each time he faced him yesterday he found him an easy victim to his curved ball. Matty's great trick is in outguessing batsmen. He thought he would outguess this one. Confident that he would look for a wide bender, he thought he could cross him with a fast straight shoot.

Baker thought just as quickly as the pitcher. As soon as the ball left the Big Train's hand Baker gauged it accurately. It was to his liking and, with feet firmly planted on the turf, he swung with all his might, propelling the ball out of reach of the fleetest fielder.

Then came a tense tenth inning with both teams tightened like drum heads. The nervous strain was too much for the Giants, and when in the eleventh Collins slashed out a hit the Giants began to totter. The left wing of the infield, Fletcher at short and Herzog at third, became shaky under the gruelling test. Their errors, dove-tailed with the sturdy blows of the Athletic batsmen, shoved two runs over the tray with a glorious up-hill victory.

The Giant batsmen were a disappointment. Iron Man Jack Coombs was uncertain for a time in the third inning and two hits and a mussed-up play by Jack Barry gave the Giants a run. After that Coombs pitched the game of his life. Not a single hit did he allow the Giants until the eleventh when Herzog crashed out a two-bagger which with Collins's error gave them a second run.

Coombs Always Effective.

But Coombs didn't crack. His flinging was just as deadly in the eleventh as it had been in the first. He showed no emotion, no strain, but delivered the ball to his catcher with accuracy and speed, which completely baffled his enemies.

Connie Mack sent a new catcher against the Giants yesterday. The veteran, Thomas, had proved his worth and his throwing reputation was enough not to permit the Giants to attempt to run the bases wild. With Lapp behind the bat the Giants looked for a base-running carnival. Five times Giant runners attempted to race the sacks and five times Lapp's supple arm whipped the ball to the bag and cut their careers short.

The contest was played in a setting appropriate to the nerve-racking struggle. Rows of enthusiasts banked solidly rose tier after tier in the cement amphitheatre. The wooden bleachers in the outfield were jammed.

Like a barometer, the emotions of the crowd rose and fell. First it was all for Matty. When he mowed the Athletics down for eight innings, pitching himself out of holes with the skill of a master of his craft, his short trip from the pitching mound to the bench was a march accompanied by a roar of vocal approval which could be heard for blocks.

The Mighty Doyle.

Again it was for the great work of Capt. Larry Doyle at second. The fleetness with which he skimmed over the lawn gathering up the ball with no uncertain touch stirred the blood of those who know the perfect performance of physical skill. Then, also, the crowd was on its feet, yelling, howling, and calling him hoarsely by his first name.

At another time it was for the Indian, Meyers, in that awful eleventh inning. War-whoops, yells, Indian talk, filled the air as they pleaded, begged, yes, implored the Redman to tear the cover off the ball and drive it to the wilderness and win the game.

The baseball fan is fickle. These thousands gave vocal and moral support to the Giants inning after inning, paying no attention to the raucous shouting of Athletic fans. Toward the end of the game, the sentiment seemed to change. Snodgrass, instead of being applauded, was greeted with jeers because he tried to slide into second with an aggressiveness which the fans believed was unsportsmanlike. The nervous errors of the infielders were not greeted with forgiveness, but rather with yells of derision.

A roar of approval for the Athletics' achievements on the diamond gradually grew stronger. Strong-voiced and deep-lunged men did not restrain their admiration for these clean-cut, youthful appearing athletes, who were fighting their way from almost certain defeat to victory. There were many women at the game—far more than at the first tilt on Saturday, and they too, thrust aside their usual quietness and joined in the paean of joy which greeted the Athletics when the fight was done.

The scene at the bench of the Philadelphia players after the game was one of unrestrained happiness. They had beaten Matty. The great pitcher who blocked their path to the highest baseball honors in 1905, the pitcher who humbled them with his skill on Saturday, the man who in all the world they feared most was at last beaten.

No, they were not afraid of Big Six now. They tossed their bats, gloves, and sweaters in the air. They hugged each other like long-lost brothers, and raced away out of the way of the surging mob which crowded about the bench.

New York fans were disappointed, sorely so, but the prominent note was one of joy. There were enough there who were glad to overshadow those who were sad. Matty and the other Giants passed to the clubhouse unnoticed. No one barred their way.

THE GAME BY INNINGS.

How the Athletics Won Their Second Victory Over the Giants.

FIRST INNING.

The opening skirmish presented Lord standing in a drizzling rain waiting for Mathewson to serve the ball. He spattered a grounder to the infield which Matty was just able to touch. Doyle harvested it and threw him out at first. Oldring's grounder was delivered safely at first by Fletcher before Rube arrived, and Merkle fielded Collins's grounder while Matty covered first and did the retiring. Devore, who struck out four times in Philadelphia on Monday, made it five in a row when he fell victim to Coombs's slants. Doyle grounded out to Davis and Snodgrass whiffed.

SECOND INNING.

When Baker stepped to the bat in the second he was loudly cheered. Doyle threw him out to Merkle. Murphy jammed a red hot liner at Herzog and Snodgrass caught Davis's high fly in centre. Lord was waiting for Murray's fly to left long before it dropped. Merkle's slow roller to Barry was quickly shot to first and Herzog struck out.

THIRD INNING.

Jack Barry laid his bat against Matty's fadeaway in the third and rocked the ball to deep left. Devore fielded it smartly and held Barry at first. Barry took Meyers by surprise and stole second. Lapp had every intention of making a hit, and came as close to it as anybody can without delivering the original package. He hammered a steaming liner which Doyle lunged after and grabbed. He winged the ball to Fletcher in time to double Barry off second. That quick play woke up the crowd. Coombs popped to Doyle.

Fletcher pummeled a liner to Murphy, and Meyers soaked a grounder at Baker's feet which rug up the earth, and the ball bounded high over the third baseman's head. Mathewson slapped a delightful hit to right field and Meyers galloped to third. Devore pushed an easy roller to Barry, but Jack fumbled the ball when he saw Meyers racing home. Barry recovered in time to throw to second and force Mathewson. Devore undertook to steal second, but was nipped in the attempt, Lapp to Barry. Well, the Giants are in the lead anyway, now, for goodness' sake, hang on to that run and don't let them get it back.

FOURTH INNING.

Snodgrass ran into right field and got Lord's rocket in the fourth. Oldring raised a high fly to Fletcher and Collins jarred a grounder at third a mile a minute. Hergoz made a fine stop, but Collins beat out his throw to first. Edward stole second much to the Giants' dismay. The burglary brought no loot, for Matty promptly tossed Baker out at Merkle's corner. Coombs swept the Giants down in order in their split of the inning. Collins hurled Doyle out at first, Snodgrass poled a high fly to Devore, and Murphy tucked away Murray's monoplane to right.

FIFTH INNING.

Mathewson pitched himself and his team mates out of trouble in the fifth. Murphy was safe when Herzog fumbled his easy grounder. Davis slapped a hot one through the infield which shaved some skin off Umpire Connolly's shins before he could sidestep. Barry laid down a sacrifice and the runners progressed a corner. Lapp hit a grounder at Matty, who tossed the ball to Meyers to cut off Murphy's trip home. Murphy saw his predicament and tried to get back to third. Herzog took the ball and ran him down close to the plate. Coombs ended the trouble with a high pop to Fletcher.

New York's portion of this round wasn't the least bit productive. Merkle poled an easy one into Lord's hands, and Herzog drew the first pass of the afternoon. He sped down to second, and had the bag annexed, only he overslid the canvas, and was tagged by the alert Collins. Barry gracefully threw Fletcher out at first.

SIXTH INNING.

Matty was going at top speed in the sixth. Lord jammed a liner into Murray's hands, Oldring fanned, and Snodgrass squeezed Collins's fly. Coombs disposed of the Giants in this session just as easily. Meyers lifted a high foul to Lapp, Mathewson lobbed one to Collins, and Baker gathered Devore's grounder and chucked him out at first.

SEVENTH INNING.

This chapter very barren also. Baker was laying for one of his big wallops and swung at a wide one. It was too wide to go to the wilderness so Murray speared it. Murphy hoisted a fielder's delight to Doyle, and the veteran Davis fanned.

The elimination of Larry Doyle was mere play for Collins and Davis, and Coombs then fanned Snodgrass a second time. The Athletics iron man lost his grip for a moment then and gave Jack Murray a pass without putting over a single strike. Merkle was a victim of the Collins-Davis combination, so that's all there was to that.

EIGHTH INNING.

Keep your seat for this eighth and you will see Christy Mathewson in a death grapple with danger, and you will also see him come out of the fray with flying colors. Jack Barry jarred Matty's feelings with a stout two-base drive to the left field corner of the scenery. Lapp rolled a slow one on the lawn to Fletcher and by fleet sprinting beat out the throw to first, Barry going to third. Connie Mack sent a courier from the bench to whisper in Barry's ear, and Harry Davis gave Coombs some good advice as he stepped up to bat.

Coombs pushed a grounder to Doyle who shot the ball home to Meyers who speared Barry as he tried to slide under him at the plate. Barry was disappointed when he was called out, and told Umpire Brennan so. Lord smashed another grounder to Doyle, who tossed the ball to Fletcher to force Coombs. Fletcher dropped the ball and Coombs was safe. Lapp, who was dashing to third, thought that he could sneak home and over-ran third, foolishly stopping in his flight.

Doyle soaked the ball to Meyers, who relayed it back to Herzog, who snuffed out a gorgeous chance for the Athletics by tagging Lapp. Oldring fanned for the second time.

The loudest outburst of the Giant fans greeted Matty when he walked back to the bench. It was great work by the Giants and cool, deadly pitching by "Big Six" under the severest kind of a strain.

Coombs insistently refused to let the Giants get a safe hit. Herzog flied to Lord, Fletcher jammed a grounder between short and second which looked good but Barry sidestepped to the ball's presence with wonderful agility and, after making a wonderful stop, threw "Fletch" out at first. Meyers was a victim of Coombs's wily pegs.

NINTH INNING.

Just by way of comment it might be inserted here that both Matty and Coombs were pitching such great ball that a chance of either of them cracking seemed very remote. The Giants' single run looked as large as a telegraph pole. Many folks were ambling slowly toward the exits so as to avoid the rush after the game. Mathewson lorded it haughtily over the Athletics as he made them eat from his hand. Collins was the first man to face him in the ninth.

Eddie hit a grounder to Herzog, who ate it up quickly and fired the star second baseman out at first.

Matty had evidently not soliloquized seriously enough about John Franklin Baker, the Maryland fence-breaker. He knew well that this slugger had spilled the beans on Marquard, but was the Big Train afraid of him? Not at all. He fooled him for two strikes on curved balls and might have fooled him again with a curve, but Mathewson evidently guessed that Baker expected a curve so he decided to peg him a fast straight one, just as Marquard did in Philadelphia on Monday.

Baker leaned against the ball with the gentleness of a battering ram. The ball went high and dry into the right wing of the new Brush stadium and Baker cantered around easily, touching each base with his spikes on his journey of joy. The score was tied.

A frown clouded McGraw's face. Matty shut his teeth with a snap and tried to forget the roar that was shaking Manhattan Island. Murphy shot a grounder at Herzog which Charles fumbled for a minute and then threw miles out of Merkle's reach at first, Murphy going to second. Davis tried to nail the ball hard but it spilled in front of the plate and Meyers threw him out at first. Herzog retired Barry by the same route.

Matty was the first man up in the last of the ninth and he struck out. Devore popped to Baker and Doyle was sadly fooled by Coombs's repertoire of spins.

TENTH INNING.

The tenth had nothing encouraging in store for New York or Philadelphia. Fletcher hurled Lapp out at Merkle's pier, Coombs pumped an easy fly to Doyle, and Lord was out when Fletcher briskly picked up his grasser and floated it to first.

Snodgrass up. "Snoddy" tried his old trick of sticking his elbow in front of the ball and thereby gaining his base. Umpire Brennan was too observant for the batsman, and when he crowded the plate and was nipped by one of Coombs's shoots he refused to allow him to go to first.

Snodgrass fiddled around the plate until he worried Coombs into giving him a base on balls. Snodgrass then jumped up and down and threw his bat in the air with much joy, evidently intending to disconcert Coombs. He might as well have tried to make the Sphinx nervous.

Murray sacrificed Snodgrass to second. With Merkle at the bat, Lapp dropped a wide shoot from Coombs and Snodgrass dashed for third. The ball was only a few feet away and Lapp quickly recovered it and threw to Baker, who held the ball waiting for Snodgrass to come into the base. Snodgrass must have seen that he was nailed by a whole city block and yet he jumped into the air and came into Baker spikes foremost.

Baker saw the unnecessary leap and held his ground gamely. Snodgrass struck him feet first, spikes and all, but Baker held the ball. His leg was spiked and his trousers badly ripped by the sharp steel.

This is the second time in the series that Snodgrass has jumped roughly at Baker, and the crowd immediately broke into a storm of hisses and cat calls. The endangering of Baker by such a move seemed unsportsmanlike and out of place. When Baker's bumps and scratches were mended and he went back into the game, the crowd showed further resentment of Snodgrass's slide by cheering him to the echo.

Merkle was patient and walked. He tried to steal second but was nailed, Lapp to Collins. Umpire Connolly was right over the play when he called Merkle out, and in the best position to see it. The New York players made a kick, and loudly argued that Merkle was safe. The decision was close, as many of the decisions of the game were, and in the heat and closeness of the contest the Giants' protest was taken up by many of the rabid fans in the stands.

ELEVENTH INNING.

The Athletics faced Matty in the eleventh with unshaken confidence. Oldring grounded to Herzog, and was promptly cut down at first. Collins caught one of Matty's curves where he wanted it, and sent a liner safely to the left terrace. Baker banged a sizzling hopper at Herzog, who made a lurid throw out of Merkle's reach at first, and Collins went to third and Baker to second. The Giants were nervous, and up in the air.

Murphy spilled an easy grounder at Fletcher's feet, but the Giant short stop got a bad case of rattles and fumbled the ball, allowing Collins to score. Davis hit the first ball Matty served him on the nose, and sent it whistling into right field, while Baker raced around to the plate.

Murphy tried to get to third on the play, but was nailed by Herzog after Murray had made a great throw from right field. Davis tried to steal second, but Meyers threw him out so quickly that Doyle was waiting for him with the ball.

New York made a desperate effort to regain its lost ground in the last half of the eleventh. Herzog broke through the mysterious maze of twists and hops which Coombs was serving, and larruped a two-base drive to left field. Fletcher rocketed to Lord, and while Meyers was being thrown out at first by Collins, Fletcher went to third. Becker was sent in as a pinch hitter in place of the battered Mathewson. He rolled a grounder to Collins, and the star second baseman dizzily fumbled the ball, allowing Herzog to score. Becker raced down to second at the first opportunity, and found Collins waiting for him with the ball.

GIANT DEFENSE FINE, SAYS RUBE MARQUARD

Greatest Exhibition of the Kind Seen This Season, Declares the Famous Pitcher.

BAKER'S HOME RUN FATAL

McGraw's Men a Beaten Team and Knew It the Moment the Score was Tied.

BY RUBE MARQUARD
Of the Giant Pitching Staff.

It was the hardest game to lose I ever saw, and Matty lost it the same way I lost the second game in Philadelphia. When he came back to the bench, after Barry had been thrown out in the ninth inning, I asked him what it was.

"The same thing you did, Rube," said Matty. "I gave Baker a high, fast one. I have been in the business for a long time and have no excuse."

That is the story of the third New York game as it was of Monday's game. Matty had confidence that he could cross Baker because he had fooled him all through the game into grounders and flies. Furthermore, he was fairly certain that the signals were all right, for he was giving them to Meyers instead of receiving them from him, as we have been doing all the season.

The reason for this was that we had just discovered how the Athletics were getting the signals. The little hunchback is the white-haired boy. He comes out with the batter to take back the bat he discards, and he is in a position to get a view of Meyers's bent knee into the glove. He then tips it to the coacher on the third base line, who gives it to the batter.

Matty framed up his own signals yesterday and used them in the game. Meyers kept right on giving his, though, so that the move would not be detected.

Matty had been going along finely, and the boys gave him great support almost the entire time, but especially in the pinches. When Baker came up in the ninth Collins had already been retired, and we all figured that the game was all but won. The first ball pitched was a slow ball the fadeaway. When Baker hits this ball he seldom knocks it out of the infield. Baker let the first strike pass.

The second ball was a low in-curve with a sharp break. Baker had to jump away from it. He also waited on the next ball, which was a slow out-curve, but too low. Then Matty decided to try the trick I tried in Philadelphia—to cross him on his favorite ball, and he gave him a high, fast ball over the inside corner. Baker eats this kind, and he ambled home with the run that beat us. The drive steamed up into the right field stand. It was an exact duplicate in every way of the hit he got off of me.

That home run beat the Giants yesterday. They were a beaten team and they knew it when the score was tied.

Coombs was in fine form and must have surprised even himself. He was using his curves almost all the time and took advantage of the bad light by using terrific speed, which he mixed up with a beautiful fast drop. He saw to it that the ball was dirty and kicked on using a new ball. When he had to, he soiled it as much as possible before he delivered it. He never pitched a better game.

The Giants put up the best exhibition of defensive ball that has been seen at the Polo Grounds all season. Baker came up first in the second inning and Matty gave him a fadeaway. He caught the second ball, also a fadeaway, on the nose and Doyle made a fine stop. Murphy drove the the first ball pitched to him, a fast inshoot on a line over third. Herzog jammed in the air and speared it.

It looked bad in the third when Barry was on second with nobody out. But Lapp drove into Doyle's hands and by a quick throw he caught Barry.

In the eighth Barry got a single which Devore was slow in getting and Barry took second. Lapp singled and Barry went to third, Doyle made a perfect throw to Meyers on Coombs's grounder and the Chief tagged Barry out. There was a chance for a double on the next play, but Fletcher dropped Doyle's throw to head off Coombs. Doyle recovered the ball and stopped Lapp at the plate by another perfect throw. The Chief and Herzog then did a war dance with Lapp, and Herzog ran him down.

Matty almost got Coombs at this point off second base. Fletcher gave Meyers the signal and ran over to the bag. Matty turned like a flash and threw to Fletcher, but did not put Coombs out. Matty decided to get Oldring at any cost and struck him out on two fouled balls and a beautiful fadeaway. It was a great exhibition of defense and Matty deserved to have won the game.

TOTAL OF 243 BALLS PITCHED.

Matty Took 115 for His Share—Coombs Had to Use 128.

Coombs and Mathewson pitched a total of 243 balls in the eleven innings which made up yesterday's game at the Polo Grounds. Of this number Coombs pitched 128, an average of almost 12 an inning, and Matty got away with less work than his opponent, pitching only 115 balls, an average of about 10 an inning.

Matty's easiest inning was the tenth, when he retired the Mackmen on 6 pitched balls. In this frame Lapp hit the third ball pitched to Fletcher and was out at first, Coombs flied to Doyle on the second pitched ball, and Lord grounded out on the first. Matty's busiest inning was the fourth, when he pitched 14 balls to four Philadelphia batsmen.

He pitched 13 in the ninth inning, when Baker cracked out his home run, the drive being on the fourth ball served up to him, the same as against Marquard on Monday. In the eleventh, when the Athletics picked up the two runs which decided the game, Matty pitched only 10 balls. The style of the Athletics is to go after the first ball, as was plainly shown in this inning, when four of the six batsmen who faced Matty hit the first ball pitched to them.

Coombs had an easy time with the Giants in the first and third innings. He retired the side each time on 7 pitched balls. In the first Devore and Snodgrass fanned on three pitched balls each, and Doyle went out on the first ball pitched to him. In the third Fletcher went out on the first pitched ball, Meyers hit safely on the second, Matty singled on the first, Devore forced Matty on the second, and then, after one ball had been pitched to Doyle, Devore went out trying to steal.

Both teams showed a strong tendency to hit the first ball yesterday. The Giants hit the first ball that Coombs pitched up on six different occasions, and the Athletics went after Matty's first one no less than thirteen times.

When Matty served up 8 balls to Coombs in the third inning before Jack flied to Larry Doyle he reached the top figure in the number of balls pitched to any one batsman. Only three times during the game did Mathewson pitch more than five balls to one batsman, and Coombs made a similar record.

The balls pitched per inning are as follows:

Coombs—7 11 7 9 15 15 15 11 10 11 17—128.
Mathewson—10 11 13 14 12 8 10 9 13 6 9—115.

38,000 ROOTERS SEE THE GIANTS BEATEN

NO EARLY RUSH FOR SEATS

Police Suppress the Speculators and Arrest Half a Score—Sentiment Turns to Athletics.

Gloomy, forbidding skies overhung the Polo Grounds all of yesterday and the ever-present threat of rain kept many baseball folk downtown until the last hour under a lurking conviction that the third game of the world series would be postponed until to-day.

Just before 1 o'clock there was a disheartening little spatter from the clouds, but it came to nothing. So there was less of a tumultuous rush to 157th Street, and even as the game started, it was possible to buy seats at the entrances for both bleachers and grandstands. But the crowd, when it finally assembled, was only a shade smaller than the one that saw the game on Saturday, for it numbered 38,000.

The hostility of the heavens helped to dampen a little the holiday spirit of the fans, and, anyway, the third game lacks the boom and glory attaching to the opening of the series. Besides, the race was tied, and the rooters were, some of them, just a little grim. Those who had their money on the Giants, and those enthusiasts, the eagerness of whose partisanship needs no mercenary incentive, had business in their eye as they glanced over the shadowed diamond. Matty was to pitch. They hoped that he meant business, too.

But to more than one watcher of the crowd it seemed that the heart of the gathering was with the team from Philadelphia. This was increasingly evident as the battle was fought out.

The game, far more prolific of thrills than the one of Saturday, inspired a very riot of yelling, cheering, and stamping, but the noisiest noise broke loose for the Athletics.

One Honest Shout.

There was only one point in the game when the supporters of the Giants opened their mouths and lungs, and really let it rip in good, old-fashioned style. That was when their own Matty did himself proud in the eighth by pulling the home team out of a tight place. To the loyal ones in the stand it was the signal for an uproariously happy "testimonial," and they gave it with a will.

But with that exception, the crowd by a perceptible majority was rooting for the Athletics. Trains from Philadelphia had brought over local rooters in shoals, and every man seemed leathern-lunged. When the first chance came for expressing approval of Mack's men it was lustily expressed, and the whole grand stand seemed to bristle with red pennants.

Particularly in the upper grandstand to the left was the Athletic enthusiasm concentrated, and at the successive triumphs of the closing innings this delegation made itself heard. It had along a contraption for noise creation that sounded as though a train from the elevated had caught the fever and taken to the grandstand.

But if the greeting to the work of the Giants in the eighth was noisy—there are no words for the deafening outburst of sound that came when Baker made his home run in the ninth. The whole great crowd went mad.

More than one observer thought he saw in all this the boomerang of the ticket speculation.

"I tell you what it is, my friends," said one old fan whose seasons have been many, "you want to know where the rooters for the Giants are? Well, a whole lot of them aren't here because they couldn't pay fancy prices. That's one reason, and some of those who did go down in their pockets rather than miss the series were soured a little in the process, and they get a certain gloomy satisfaction out of seeing the Giants spanked. When you add to this the fact that the enthusiasm of many fans is strictly non-partisan, you may understand why the yelling to-day leans ever so little toward the visitors."

In conspicuous contrast with the conditions of Saturday, the grand stands yesterday did not begin to fill up until after 1 o'clock, and as for the bleachers, the last and least liked patches of seats that were covered over at 12 o'clock at the first game were bare until after 1:30 yesterday. There was one block of 100 seats in the upper grand stand left unoccupied after the game started. Some of these were taken during the first inning, possibly by patrons changing from less desirable points, but more than half were unused throughout the game. Had they been bought by some speculator, the crowd wondered. Had they been left profitless on his hands? The crowd hoped so devoutly.

The Mayor Not There.

As for the personnel of the gathering it was much the same. A few important persons were kept away from the game, but they were few. Again, the crowd looked in vain to see Mayor Gaynor in the box reserved for him, but there was a goodly representation of city officials, and to judge from the number of lawyers who showed up there must have been many a postponement yesterday, or else cases went by default.

Courts are courts, of course, and some Judges devoted to the game were left reluctantly on the bench, but this time there was no matinée to interfere with the theatrical world moving out in a body. And they all did except the Scotch players, who had gathered an audience at the Comedy Theatre, but with them it didn't matter, for Tammas Biggar and the beadle of the kirk haven't been in these parts long enough to know what they were missing. Of course George Cohan was there rooting in his own style for his pal, McGraw. Cohan says he's his pal, and it's very likely. Perhaps, said some one, the score went as it did because Louis Mann and De Wolf Hopper, those ancient fans, are on the road.

But there was A. L. Erlanger, Eddie Leonard, Paul Armstrong, Foxhall Keene, Harry Payne Whitney, William Hepburn Russell, Timothy D. Sullivan, Edward Lauterbach, "Big Bill" Edwards, "Joe" Johnson of the fire fighters, Alan Pinkerton, "Diamond Jim" Brady, "Silent Mike" Tiernan, who played right field for the Giants when George Cohan was in kilts; James Mutrie, who managed the Giants quite as long ago; A. G. Spalding, Frank Farrell, and so on till the list of notables and near notables goes into the hundreds and includes men of every stripe.

Baseball makes strange seat-fellows. Of course there was the usual group of baseball heroes, whose names were names to conjure with in the eighties and the nineties, side by side with latter-day stars of other teams in other cities. And in the little handful that was waiting in line at the crack of dawn was a man from Brockton, Mass., who said that he was the son of William McGonnigal, manager of the Brooklyn team twenty-one years ago.

No Rush for Seats.

There was nothing like the early rush for seats that, in the case of Saturday's game, kept the police and the officials busy from sundown of the night before. There was none of the all-night waiting at the gates, and a young financier in knickerbockers who drove up after midnight with a load of soap boxes, drove indignantly away again, loudly deploring the lamentable waning of enthusiasm.

The first bleacherites began to assemble at the gates at 6:30 in the morning. At 7 the men in the line were seven. Three of these were Japanese fans. When the bleachers were opened a little after 9:30 about eight hundred persons were ready to go in. They got in easily in fifteen minutes, and after that no line had to be formed for the further sale of tickets. There was work for only a dozen policemen at that time, and the rest of the two hundred and fifty men were held in reserve till the real crowds got there.

Then their work under Inspector McCluskey was as efficient and thorough as on Saturday. The thousands upon thousands went in and out without a particle of trouble. The same arrangements were made for the automobiles, which seemed to arrive in even greater numbers. They were parked near by in the vacant lots and on the side streets they stretched as far down as 148th Street.

And the police had their eye on the speculators. These gentlemen resorted to every device in their catalogue, but the police sat on them with gusto. Every now and then they would hang out signs in neighborhood stores. They did this several times and as many times the police made them take them down.

A few hardy specimens, uncomfortably overstocked with tickets, ventured on the streets to solicit patronage. They were promptly arrested, but the police could get no evidence of actual selling. There were ten arrests. Six of the speculators were arraigned before Magistrate House in the Harlem Court, where three were fined $10 each and three were fined $3 each.

The work of the police dovetailed with that of the force of attendants inside the grounds. Groundkeeper Murphy had his large corps on duty long before there was anything for them to do, and they got the crowds out of the huge stadium in good order.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE GAME.

Politest Man's Vulnerable Point—Priests in Crowd—A Brush Picture.

"Is my head in your way?" asked one polite person, turning to the man back of him.

"If Meyers hits a home run, it isn't," said the man behind, and added grimly, "If he strikes out, I'll punch it off you."

Anyone watching the crowd as it streamed into the stadium could not help noticing the fondness of priests for baseball. Three came arm in arm. They were venerable and in high good humor.

"Of course there are clergymen of many churches here," some one explained, "but they are dressed like the rest of us, so you don't notice them. Still, there are a lot of fans in the priesthood. Why shouldn't there be? You've heard it said, the better the day the better the deed, haven't you?"

His companions confessed to having heard some such observation before.

"Well," said the other triumphantly, "the better the man, the better the fan."

Besides, they have a right to a special interest, for Barry of the Athletics took a course in baseball at Holy Cross, and it is said that Connie Mack seeks advice from many a teacher in the Catholic schools and colleges, in his quest for team material.

⁂

Something of the real right of this contest to assume the title of world series can be gathered by a little examination of the press stand. There were men there from European countries, who were noting down every move that Matty made, because there are people in Paris and in London who will want to know about it. And one man was devoting his energies to preparing a report for Cuba.

⁂

Just as John T. Brush's car is the only one to adorn the field while the game is in progress, so his portrait is the only one to adorn the cover of the official score card. In that picture, he wears an inscrutable expression. He appears to be think deeply on some problem. Below his photograph, the artist has drawn a conventionalized picture of the grandstands. And all the seats are empty!

So excited have some of the fans grown on the question of the world championship that they have all but overlooked the fact that the Giants brought the National League championship to New York anyway. By way of patting them on the back for doing so plans are afoot for a dinner to Mr. Brush, McGraw, and all the club members. It is to be held Saturday evening at the Hotel Imperial, with Job Hedges as toastmaster. With him on the committee having the dinner in charge are Commissioner Edwards, Fred Zimmerman, Jr., E. E. Smathers, E. E. McAlpin, Herman A. Metz, and Robert Adamson.

⁂

The skies that stretched, dull drab, above the Polo Grounds seemed to lower and darken when the Giants were whipped. From the beginning of the first inning they were ominous, and perhaps it would have been kinder to the home team if they had opened and poured a cleansing torrent on the diamond. In the great eighth inning almost every eye was on the players, but if any had looked up he would have seen that just as the New York nine extricated itself from its harrowing situation the gray clouds parted, for the first time that afternoon, to show a bit of blue. And which team has that color for its own? When the ninth inning began the clouds closed in again and all was gray.

DENY WETTING BASE LINES

Philadelphia Ground Keepers Say Mathewson's Charge Is False.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—Joe Schroeder, groundkeeper, and Joe Smith, assistant groundkeeper at the Athletic's park here, are about the angriest men in town to-day after reading the charges of Christy Mathewson that the Athletics had resorted to the trick of wetting the base lines prior to yesterday's Athletic-Giant contest to slow up the Giant base-runners.

"Mathewson is saying what is not true," said Schroeder, "and he is doing it to find some excuse for the Giants losing the game. If we had attempted to wet the base lines any more than the rain did they would have been plain mud. After the rain we put black sand on the base lines, and that is what made it look muddy. The black sand absorbs the moisture. It is one of the best remedies we have found for wet grounds.

"The truth of the matter is that the Giants think Snodgrass is a faster man than Eddie Collins and they don't like to see their favorite have to take a back seat. When Collins got a hit like Snodgrass he had no trouble in stretching it into a double. Snodgrass had no more trouble on base lines than Eddie, but he got a poor start from home, and that is his own lookout."

HOT TIME IN QUAKER TOWN.

Baseball Enthusiasts Make Merry Over the Athletic Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—Within five minutes after the flash had come over the wire late this afternoon announcing the victory of the Athletics, frenzied fans here had hired three bands to welcome home the victors. The whole city went baseball mad. Business was at a standstill. The fans who were unable to get to New York for the game crowded the streets in front of the newspaper offices awaiting the returns from the game.

Market and Chestnut Streets in front of newspaper offices were so crowded it was impossible for street cars to make progress on either street. Mounted policemen were forced to ride through the crowds to clear the way for cars and stop blockades.

Even money is being offered here to-night that the Athletics will make it four straight. The belief here is that Bender will do the trick to-morrow and Plank on Thursday, and Philadelphians cannot see why both shall not repeat.

MOB WELCOMES ATHLETICS.

Roaring Especial Approval at Coombs and Baker.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—The conquering Athletics stepped from a train at the North Philadelphia station to-night into a mob of cheering men and women fans. "Home Run" Baker and Coombs were the especial heroes, but every man on the team was cheered lustily.

As Coombs, Baker, and their fellow-players, many accompanied by their wives, moved forward a blue flag with a white elephant upon it and an American flag were raised, and the procession of players passed between the flags. The players looked a bit worried by the ovation. They quickened their pace and made for the Fifteenth Street cars, while they were greeted by such remarks as these:

"Hey, Baker, what do they look like when they are sailing over the fence?"

"How about Mathewson? Is he really a pitcher?"

"To-morrow's another day," said John McGraw as he and his squad of Giants scrambled through the Reading Terminal for the taxicab station to-night. The New York team came back for more on the 10:25 train to-night. Mathewson and Marquard walked along with McGraw. Behind them came Ames, Crandall, and Snodgrass. The appearance of Snodgrass was the signal for a chorus of jeers from the crowd that lined the Market Street stairs and sidewalk. Some one remarked that Baker would wear a suit of mail hereafter. Snodgrass stopped and faced the crowd. He appeared about to say something, when "Josh" Devore grasped his arm and yanked him along.

"To-morrow's another day," said McGraw when asked if he still had hopes of winning the world's championship banner. "Just because we lost to-day is no reason why we should be considered dead ones. Hock your clothes and bet the proceeds on the Giants to win. I'd like to see you prosper."

McGraw hustled along the line of taxicabs, and after seeing that all his players were safely inside gave the order for a hurry-up trip to the Majestic.

THRONGS AT THE BULLETINS.

Stay-at-Homes See the Game at Long Distance in Many Places.

The throngs that packed Times Square, Herald Square, Park Row, and other places where bulletins of the games were displayed on Saturday and Monday were out in force again yesterday, and just as noisy as ever.

As was the case on previous days, the sympathies of the crowds seemed to divide at a ratio of about three to one in favor of the Giants. The Giant rooters were full of confidence when it was announced that Matty was the pitcher, and they had all the chances they wanted to show their partisanship up to the time Baker came to bat in that fateful ninth inning.

That home run acted like a chill on the Giant followers, and they subsided entirely so far as noise was concerned while the Athletic rooters took up the cheering. In the eleventh inning both sides had a chance to make noise, but the Athletic followers had the best cause.

When the Athletics began to pound Matty in the eleventh, even the Athletic rooters seemed dazed.

The bulletin board crowds were orderly everywhere, and the police confined their activities principally to keeping pathways open through which pedestrians might make their way.

"Well, if it wasn't for that fellow Baker we'd have won, alright," said a heart-broken Giant rooter when Becker was bulletined for the third out for the Giants in their half of the eleventh by THE TIMES bulletin machines.

"Yes, if—" an Athletic admirer retorted as the crowd began to disperse.

PURELY FEMININE.

Information of Interest to Baseball Enthusiasts, Heard by Only a Few.

Two girls, both fair to look upon, but each acting as the other's escort for all that, arrived late at the Polo Grounds and rushed breathless to their seats far forward in the lower grandstand.

One of them: "There, those are the Giants. That's our side and we must scream just as loud as we can every time they rush around or seem to be doing anything. I'll explain all the difficult points about the game to you, for I know all about baseball. You see, I was here Saturday with Jack, and I asked him lots of questions, and he said I took such an intelligent interest in the game. He couldn't come to-day, and you're in his seat. Or am I? Well, it doesn't matter.

"Yes, those are the Athletes. My dear, that's a love of a hat you have on, so quaint and sort of suited to your personality. What? Oh, yes, they're from Philadelphia. I am afraid that helps them a little, for Philadelphians are such quiet, homey people, with lots and lots of training, and so good, and Auntie says she's sure the New York team must be awfully dissipated. Who? Oh, that's the director of the Philadelphia team. They call him Connie Eddis, but that isn't his real name at all. It's Connie McGraw, I think, or something like that. There he goes over to fourth base. Or is it fifth base? No, there are only four on the gridiron. How silly of me.

"Oh, Clarisse, now's the time to scream. See everybody getting up. Hurrah for the Giants! What—why, Clarisse, it's one of the Athletes running. Isn't that just too agonizing? I don't see what makes all these disagreeable people cheer so. I think they are perfectly horrid. Oh, some one touched him. It was Myrtle, I guess. Isn't that a sweet name? If he hadn't done that, the Athletes might have had a touchdown and scored I don't know how many honors. I just knew Myrtle could play ball.

"Now, I do hope that Mr. Oldring isn't going to strike out again. Why? Yes, I know he isn't a Giant, but he's so fearfully good looking, and when he strikes out he looks so sort of sad and dignified. I wish he were on our side."

And so on to the eighth inning. There are then two men on bases. For a moment 38,000 breaths are held, with one exception.

"Oh, Clarisse, see down there, it's George Cohan. I'm so glad I came. And there is Arnold Bennett, the actor. He's playing in the 'Passers.' He's very handsome and wears perfect evening clothes, and he goes down on his doorstep and finds—. Oh, they're all yelling. Which side did it? My! what a noise. I am just too excited! Aren't you? Now let's go down to the Plaza and I'll treat to tea. Oh, I know the game isn't over, but—well, you're mistaken if you think I don't perfectly adore baseball; but I don't propose to be caught in that crowd getting out. I'd be all crushed, my dear, for I forgot to wear my nice long hatpins. These don't stick out at all."

JOHN F. CLARKE STRICKEN.

Brooklyn District Attorney, Who Seeks Re-election, Ill with Appendicitis.

With his campaign for re-election as public prosecutor of Kings County well under way, District Attorney John F. Clarke was stricken with appendicitis yesterday afternoon and collapsed in his office at Court and Livingston Streets, Brooklyn. He was taken at once to his home at 149 Ross Street.

After an examination his physician announced that Mr. Clarke is suffering from a recurrence of a former attack of catarrhal appendicitis. He said he believed it unlikely that an operation will be necessary. It is not thought probable, however, that Mr. Clarke will be able to do active campaigning.

The District Attorney was seated at his desk in his private office when taken ill. Those in the outer offices heard him cry out, and several persons rushed in. They found him lying against the desk, with a hand pressed to his side. His brother, Joseph F. Clarke, who is employed in the Borough President's office, was called by telephone. He took the District Attorney home in a taxicab. When they reached there Dr. Edward J. Carroll of 280 Hewes Street, the family physician, was awaiting them. The District Attorney was immediately put to bed and an examination begun by the physician.

Dr. Carroll appeared to be hopeful last night that, as was the case when Mr. Clarke suffered the first attack seven years ago, he will recover without having to undergo an operation. The physician said that Mr. Clarke's nervous condition was largely due to worry over the campaign.

Ex-Police Commissioner James C. Cropsey, who has taken a prominent part in the Union Bank investigation, has been nominated for District Attorney on the Republican-Independence League ticket, and the race between him and Mr. Clarke is being watched with deep interest on the part of local politicians.

Mr. Clarke, who is 51 years old, has held the office of District Attorney of Kings County for three terms.

MAKING THE CITY PAY.

Citizens' Union Finds That the Legislature Added Useless Salaries.

The Citizens' Union issued yesterday a report on the legislative session of this year. Regarding the effect of the legislation upon the cost of city government report says:

"At least $350,000 will be added each year to the payrolls of New York City. This is despite the fact that the Governor vetoed other bills whose annual payroll cost to the city would probably have been as great as the cost of those which he approved. When there is added the cost of the unsound pension legislation and the special claim laws, it will be seen that during the next few years the city will have to pay millions to defray the expense loaded upon it by the Legislature this year.

"It would not be accurate to state that none of the increases were needed. Many, however, were not justified, and practically the entire problem might have been solved by home rule laws giving the Board of Estimate power to fix the salaries affected. Light is thrown on the real purpose of much of this legislation by one instance. Assemblyman Hoey succeeded in passing a bill providing for a Commissioner of Records in the office of the Surrogates of New York County. Mr. Hoey's district leader, John J. Curry, was later appointed to fill this new and, in our opinion, unnecessary office, at a salary of $5,000 a year."

Woman Couldn't Stop, Treading the Slippery Autumn Leaves on Cliffside Path.

SCREAMED IN VAIN FOR HELP

Workmen Thought It a Jest at First, but They Picked Her Up Bruised and Senseless 100 Feet Below the Edge.

Gangs of men at work yesterday on the new houses in course of construction at King's Wood on the Palisades above Weehawken, N. J., noticed a pretty young woman start slowly down the sharply inclined road which leads down to the edge of the Palisades and which divides King's Wood from Hauxhurst Park. The road is slippery with a covering of Autumn leaves, and the young woman had some difficulty in retaining her footing.

She stumbled along, each step carrying her forward just a little faster, until finally she was almost running. The watching men laughed, till suddenly they heard the woman scream. Then they saw her dart forward, keeping her feet only by fairly bounding over the path. Only a few yards away the road turned sharply along the edge of the Palisades. Straight ahead there was an almost sheer drop of 100 feet to the river bank at the base of the cliffs.

Several men started toward the young woman, shouting to her to throw herself down and off the path. She seemed powerless to obey them and as they watched her, striving to reach her in time, they saw her shoot off the edge of the precipice, screaming in terror.

The men slid and scrambled down the cliffside after her, and presently reached the place where she lay unconscious against a big rock, some seventy feet from the top of the Palisades. They half carried and half dragged her to the top, where they got an ambulance from the North Hudson Hospital, in Union Hill. The woman was taken there, the physicians saying that her condition was critical. Her skull had been fractured, her left ankle broken, and her body terribly bruised. In addition, it is feared she has internal injuries.

In a moment of consciousness the woman said she was Mrs. Minnie Hahn of 109 Kossuth Street, Union Hill. She said her husband, John, a carpenter, had been out of work for some time and she had been going to apply for work for him on the new houses in King's Wood, when she slipped on the path.

TAFT WARNS WOMEN VOTERS.

Tells Them In California They Must Not Shirk "Those Awful Polls."

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Oct. 17.—President Taft bade adieu to California here late to-day and his special train headed for the north and east. The thirty-six hours run on which he started to-night will take him into Montana by Thursday morning. His first schedule stop is at Ogden, Utah, to-morrow afternoon.

Big crowds greeted the Presidential train at Long Beach, at Pomona, at Ontairo, at Riverside, and at San Bernardino. At Riverside a group of high school girls all in white pelted the President with roses until the entire rear platform of the train was covered.

The President had a parting word for the women and their newly granted privilege of the ballot in this State.

"It won't do," he declared, "for you to say, 'Oh, well, we will not go down to those awful polls where those awful persons stand around.'

"You have got to become part of those awful people and make those awful persons better. You are trying an experiment. Go ahead with it. You have energy and enterprise, and if you make a mistake you can retrace your steps. Meanwhile we, of the slow and more conservative East, will watch the things you are going to try, and follow you and avoid the pitfalls that you may encounter."

While the President was motoring to Long Beach this morning, his secretary, Mr. Hilles remained in Los Angeles to talk with a number of active Republicans. Since Senator Smoot of Utah formally nominated him to be the next National Chairman of the Republican Party, Mr. Hilles has encountered pledges of support. He has acknowledged these with thanks, but has made no statement indicating his attitude toward the possible honor.

From now until Nov. 1 the President will travel toward Washington. He will spend more than forty hours almost continuously in his private car, and will cross California, Nevada, Utah, and part of Montana in a 1,216-mile stretch.

INDORSES FUSION TICKET.

Citizens' Union Makes One Exception by Approving Fowler.

At a conference of the City Committee of the Citizens' Union last night it was decided to indorse the Fusion ticket, with the exception of Douglass Mathewson for Surrogate. The committee thought that Robert L. Fowler should be continued in office.

The committee decided to make a strenuous fight upon the Tammany members for Assembly, and in resolutions it expressed its disapproval of those Assemblymen who supported the so-called Murphy-Gaynor charter. The resolutions said:

> The return of Tammany-controlled members to the Assembly in sufficient number to give Charles F. Murphy control of the lower house during the next session, would be notice to the Legislature that New York City makes no protest against the most arrogant and sinister invasion of its civic rights for a generation.

These are the Assemblymen the voters are asked to defeat because of their favorable action on the Charter:

BACK IN THE LABORATORY.

Cold Without and Tempting Food Within Too Much for Escaped Monkey.

"Imp," the Rhesus monkey, whose escape from the pathological laboratory of Cornell University Medical College on Monday afternoon created a stir in the neighborhood of First Avenue and Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth Streets returned to the college yesterday and is now once more in his own cage. The janitor, in making his rounds yesterday morning, heard a chattering that sounded familiar, and on opening a window found "Imp" shivering on the sill. It took very little persuasion on the part of the janitor to induce the monkey to enter the window, and he went into his cage eagerly when tempting food was placed there for him.

Haven't Agreed to Support Tailors.

Helen Marot, Secretary of the Women's Trade Union League, denied last night that the league had agreed to support the tailors in a strike as asserted in yesterday's TIMES.

BOYS' SIGHT MAY BE SAVED.

Remarkable Operation Promises to Repair Damage of Dynamite Caps.

Walter McIntyre and Nathan Lake, two Yonkers boys, pocketed some dynamite caps they found in an excavation where blasting was being carried on in the Park Hill suburb of Yonkers, several weeks ago, and carried them to the woods to pry off the copper setting of the caps. There was a terrific explosion, in which the eyes of both boys were riddled with bits of copper. After treatment of several weeks, all hope of restoring their sight was despaired of.

Several days ago, however, Drs. George B. Stanwix and Peter A. Callan of Yonkers advised the removal of the boys to the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary. There an operation was performed yesterday by the two physicians. Afterward both boys were able to see glimmers of daylight. It was said last night that both will probably recover their sight.

Dr. George B. Stanwix was elated last night over the success of the operations, which were among the rarest in several years at the Eye and Ear Infirmary.

"When the boys first came under my care," he said last night, "their bodies, from their waists to their hair, were filled with particles of dirt, bits of copper, and of bark. It seemed impossible to save their lives, let alone their sight.

"Little by little through the Summer we have got these particles out of their skin. From each eye of each boy I removed between 150 and 200 bits of copper. Each piece was removed by cutting with a knife. The final effort to restore their sight was made at the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary on Monday by Dr. Peter A. Callan and myself.

"The operation was for the removal of traumatic cataract and is an extremely delicate one. It is performed with the knife, an incision being made in the upper part of the eye and the film which covers the eyeball drained off. It was successful in each case, and I expect the boys shortly to have the full use of their eyes again."

Denies Neckwear Workers Will Strike.

Calvin Wyatt, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, who was reported to have had a conference with the Executive Committee of the Neckwear Workers' Union, after which it was announced that a strike of neckwear workers would take place in all shops where demands had been made by the union, said yesterday that he had heard nothing of such a strike and knew nothing about it. The announcement about the strike was made by Abraham Miller, organizer of the Neckwear Workers' Union, after a conversation with Wyatt.

BREAKS GROCERY MONOPOLY

Southern Wholesalers Forbidden to Conspire to Maintain Prices.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 17.—In a "consent decree" handed down by the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Alabama to-day, the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association, prosecuted under the Sherman law, is forbidden from coercing manufacturers to sell only to association members or those whom it recognizes as wholesalers.

The association is also prescribed against conspiracy to maintain or to coerce manufacturers to fix limited selling prices.

Black and Oxford Topcoats for Men—at Saks'

¶ The man of stable temperament is the backbone of society. Beset by war scares, stock panics and crime waves, he pursues the even tenor of his way. He is a model of composure and not subject to atmospheric conditions. And if the masculine modes ran to Roman togas with a cardinal fringe, he could still be relied upon to wear a regulation model topcoat in an implacable black or a sober Oxford gray.

¶ But for that matter, no man's wardrobe is complete without a dressy topcoat of black or gray. It is essential for formal occasions, and for those more numerous occasions which, though not formal, nevertheless demand a nice discrimination in the matter of dress.

¶ In blacks and Oxford grays, silk lined and faced, or otherwise, we are showing a very comprehensive collection of regulation topcoats which combine conservatism with one or two trifling but effective elegancies of style, such as soft roll fronts, narrow shoulders and various style lapels.

SAY ITALY PLANS TO SEIZE ISLANDS

May Take Three in Aegean if Turks Continue Resistance —Ottoman Fleet Out.

TURKS TELL OF VICTORY

Report in Constantinople That Italians, Repulsed in Tripoli, Lost 200 Men — No Confirmation.

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—The Frankfurter Zeitung's Rome correspondent telegraphs as follows: "Reports are current in diplomatic circles that Italy intends, in the event of Turkey continuing resistance, to occupy three islands in the Aegean Sea, including Lesbos, the capital of which is Mitylene, so as to bring pressure upon Turkey."

VIENNA, Oct. 17.—A dispatch from Constantinople says that the Turkish fleet left the Bosphorus under orders to protect certain seaports, and should the occasion arise, to engage the Italian fleet.

Italy's proceedings in the Aegean Sea, it is thought in Constantinople, are intended to force Turkey to accept the loss of Tripoli and to enter into negotiations for peace.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 17.—There are unconfirmed reports that the Italian fleet is in the neighborhood of Mitylene Island with the supposed object of occupying some of the islands of the Archipelago.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—A dispatch to The Chronicle from Constantinople says:

"The Italians are reported to have suffered a serious reverse outside Tripoli. Reconnoitring they advanced too far from their base and came in contact with the Turks, who gave battle and forced the Italians to retreat hurriedly. They left 100 dead on the field."

ROME, Oct. 17, (via Frontier.)—Authoritative reports from the Turkish camp at Tripoli indicate a graver condition of affairs. Munhir Pasha, it is said, has been obliged to abandon the command of the troops, and his place has been taken by Col. Muchat Bey. The latter opposes the plan of a majority of the troops to cross the Tunis frontier. Several soldiers who attempted to desert have been shot.

The report of a new naval action on the Albanian coast is officially denied.

Meantime, although the evidence that the Turks intend to surrender is not sufficent to convince the Italian Government, the Italians at Tripoli seem to become daily more settled in their conviction that the condition of the enemy is desperate.

Accordingly Deputy di Felice-Giuffrida, who differs with his brother Socialists in that he favors the occupation of Tripoli, and went to the scene of the war some time ago, is preparing a small caravan for a trip into the interior of the country. Preceded by a white flag he hopes to parley with the Turks to convince them of the futility of further resistance and advise them to surrender on honorable terms that will satisfy their military pride.

The Italian military authorities do not share the Deputy's sanguine views and discourage his plan.

The reports received by the Government from Gen. Caneva, commander of the Italian army expedition in Tripoli, show that his attention has been directed chiefly to making the City of Tripoli an impregnable base, from which will be provided reinforcements and supplies necessary for the campaign in the interior.

Fortifications are being extended all about the city, making it a thoroughly intrenched camp. Posts would be established along the line of the advance into the country in order to make it impossible for the enemy to cut off the invading column from its base of supplies.

News from the interior reaching the Italian commander through friendly natives describes the Turks as making an active campaign among the Arabs to incite them against the Italians. The intentions of the Italians are misrepresented and their occupation of Tripoli is declared to be an infamous blot on the pages of history. The Arabs are told that when Tripoli was taken there was a general massacre and that those who were spared suffered something worse than death. Men and women were made slaves and babes in arms were slaughtered. It was the intention of the Italians, the Turks said, to put the whole country to the torch. Thus, it is said, it is sought to start a holy war against the invaders. The Turks are also said to hold out the promise of rich booty when the invaders are driven into the sea.

NAPLES, Oct. 17.—Major J. F. R. Landis, the Military Attaché, and Commander A. T. Long, the Naval Attaché to the American Embassy at Rome, with the attachés of other countries arrived here to-day and will sail to-morrow on the steamer Bosnia for Tripoli, where they will be attached to the general staff of Gen. Caneva.

Italian officers speaking the different languages will accompany the attachés and special attention will be given to their comfort and convenience.

GERMANY IS CAUTIOUS.

Chancellor Points Out Difficulties of Present Action on Tripoli.

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—The Imperial Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, has sent a letter to the Speaker of the Reichstag declaring his readiness to reply to the interpellations on foreign politics as soon as the political situation permits. Interpellations were introduced in the Reichstag to-day on the Moroccan and Tripolitan affairs, as well as on the Chinese situation.

The Imperial Chancellor, in his letter, says that he understands and sympathizes with the desire of the parties to debate on the questions of Tripoli and the Moroccan negotiations, but, in view of the pending negotiations, the Government cannot at the present moment participate in such a discussion without the danger of severe impairment of the German interests. He points out that exchanges of views continue between the powers relative to the termination of the Turco-Italian war. These render it impossible for Germany publicly to declare her position, while a parliamentary debate on these subjects without Government participation would incur the risk of making difficult the direction of German policy and the influencing of action on the part of the Governments.

STRAUS DENOUNCES ITALY.

But Prof. W. M. Slocum Finds Little to Praise in the Young Turk Party.

Oscar S. Straus, ex-Ambassador of the United States to Turkey, denounced last night Italy's attack on Turkey at a dinner of the Quill Club at the Hotel Manhattan. The Hague treaties, he said, had been violated not only by Italy but by the other nations who had signed them, and the United States should have offered its services as a mediator and prevented hostilities.

Italy's grievances, he described as "a series of small, insignificant infractions that would not even justify a semi-civilized nation in bombarding a province of another."

"I confess that Mr. Roosevelt was right, though I didn't agree with him at the time, when he said he did not believe in all-inclusive arbitration," continued Mr. Straus. "I now believe with Mr. Roosevelt that a nation's only safety is in her army and navy. If we mediate the dispute now, after Italy has seized Tripoli, it will be a sham and a hypocrisy and we shall only encourage tyrannical buccaneering."

Mr. Straus defended the Young Turk party, and said that he had frequently visited the Turkish Parliament, and had been much impressed with its effectiveness.

Prof. William M. Sloane followed, and took issue with Mr. Straus.

"Turkey has not ruled in Tripoli since 1855," he said. "There was no Government there save that administered by a secret Moslem Society, called the Sennussi. I have not the same respect for the Young Turks that others have. I have been told that worse ravages have been committed in Macedonia than ever before, since they came into power. I am glad to hear of the good Turkish Parliament, but somehow its authority does not extend into Macedonia."

ROBBED, THEN TRIES TO DIE.

Liguori Held for Trial in London—Victim of Confidence Men.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—Louis Liguori, described as the son of wealthy parents of Rhode Island, was remanded for trial in a police court to-day on a charge of having attempted to commit suicide by taking poison.

According to the police, Liguori, who had been touring Europe, was victimized by confidence men, and upon losing all his money was in despair. He has been in a hospital since the alleged attempt to take his life.

STEAMSHIP MEN FIX RATES.

Conference of Atlantic Lines Also Considered South American Pool.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—The international conference of transatlantic steamship lines held its first plenary meeting to-day after preliminary meetings, which were devoted to sectional work. Those attending the conference included J. Bruce Ismay, Chairman and Managing Director of the White Star Company; Jonkheer O. Reuchlin and G. H Reuchlin, Directors of the Holland-America Line; Albert Ballin, Director General of the Hamburg-American Company; Baron von Plattenberg and Herr Heineken of the North German Lloyd, and representatives of the Cunard and other lines.

While no statement yet has been issued, it is understood that, besides the question of fixing rates for the next three years, the formation of a South American shipping pool was under discussion.

NOT TO ANNEX EGYPT.

England Denies Report Circulated on the Berlin Boerse.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—In official circles the report circulated on the Berlin Boerse that the annexation of Egypt by England was imminent is denied.

It is believed, however, that when the Franco-German agreement with regard to Morocco is concluded, Great Britain may request the consent of the powers to the abolition of the capitulations of the mixed tribunals. It is thought that the powers will raise no objections to such a measure, which is calculated to improve the judicial administration.

FRENCH MUSEUM ROBBED.

Valuable Enamels and Heraldic Specimens Taken in Broad Daylight.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—A sensation was caused in Paris to-day by the news of a daring burglary in broad daylight perpetrated yesterday in the museum at Castres, in the Province of Tarn.

Valuable enamels and heraldic collections were stolen and an attempt was made to carry off a priceless chasuble of the fifteenth century. The thieves smashed the glass of the case containing the chasuble, but evidently found it too cumbersome to make away with.

No one in the building seems to have caught sight of the thieves, and no clue has yet been obtained. A few years ago the same museum was visited by nocturnal burglars and robbed of part of its collection of old coins.

Leon Labe Arrested.

Leon Labe, treasurer of the Egyptian Importing Company of 101 Washington Square, was arrested yesterday on a writ of ne exeat on the complaint of John V. Irwin, receiver in bankruptcy of the company. He said that Labe was the only man who could explain why part of the goods of the company was shipped to Havana, Cuba, and to St. Louis, Mo., and that he was about to leave the jurisdiction of the court. Labe was released on a bond of $5,000.

ADRIAN SAVAGE

BY LUCAS MALET

NOW comes a new masterpiece to place alongside "Sir Richard Calmady." As a literary structure it reaches even greater heights. The style is a model. The story? Love is the theme and we find it here—in gentleness and in tyranny—a compelling transcript from life. Savage is a distinguished young man, the son of an English father and a French mother. He is ardently in love with a bewitching French woman. An English girl, lacking beauty and charm, awakens Adrian's innate chivalry and he is placed in the awkward position of declining a lady's unsought love. The ending is illumined by a touch of the supernatural. Again the author of "Sir Richard Calmady" has provided a great literary stimulus for the reader.

designed to encourage the imperial troops. The legations are strongly of the opinion that the Chinese Army will not risk a battle when the investment of Hankow is complete, but will open negotiations with the object of indusing the rank and file to surrender their leaders on the promise of pardon and rewards for the rebel troops.

The Japanese Legation declares that there is no foundation in the report that the Japanese flag will be raised over the Han-Yang Iron Works. It is asserted by the Japanese diplomats that some one, knowing the importance of Japan's interests in the iron works, has evidently fabricated the story.

Dispatches from Shanghai say that owing to the publication by the native press of statements that the Japanese newspapers are belittling the revolution, describing it as a mere riot, the revolutionaries are circulating pamphlets urging the boycott of Japanese goods. They take the ground that Japan does not recognize the revolution and, therefore, should have no consideration.

The Government, which is constantly on the lookout for Japanese machinations directed against Manchuria, is of the opinion that the present Chinese crisis will prove that Japan's actions and policy are entirely correct.

Russians Active in Manchuria.

Word was received here to-day officially that Russian troops have been ordered to move against the Hunghus bands in North Manchuria. Recently the Russians have frequently reported that these robbers were becoming bolder and better organized.

The order suspending passenger traffic on the railway between Peking and Tien-Tsin was canceled at 2 o'clock this morning in consequence of a widespread foreign protest.

As a result of reports that the rebels are massacring Manchus the local Manchu women are adopting Chinese dress.

Capt. James H. Reeves, the American Military Attache, telegraphed to the Legation to-day that he was not permitted to accompany the imperial troops south, and accordingly will return to Pekin tomorrow. It is not clear from his message whether Lieut. Col. Beach and Willys R. Peck, the Assistant Chinese Secretary at the American Legation, are also returning. All three had received permission to accompany the army in its campaign against the rebels, and left Peking yesterday with Gen. Yin-Tchang.

HANKOW, Oct. 17.—Troops which arrived this morning from the north number 4,000. They are encamped on the race course north of the city, where they will await reinforcements before attacking the rebels. They appear to be splendidly drilled, and are equipped with modern armament. Several thousand more soldiers are on the way. A detachment of the Wu-Chang garrison, which retired from that city when the rebels entered it, crossed the river above the city and marched rapidly inland, probably to effect a junction with the troops from the north.

The imperial naval force in the river was to-day augmented by the arrival of one of the navy's modern gunboats, which carried Admiral Sah Chen-Ping, who immediately took command of the situation. His purpose, it is believed, is to begin shelling the rebel defenses around Wu-Chang at once.

May Attack Imperial Troops.

Some 2,000 rebels from Wu-Chang, with artillery, moved north this morning, and it is believed that they intend to attack the imperial troops. The revolutionists are enlisting great numbers of men under their banner.

The revolutionists outside Kiu-Kiang, in the Province of Kiang-Si, 130 miles southeast of here, have demanded the surrender of the city. Republican soldiers, with white armbands, can be seen surrounding Kiu-Kiang. The Chinese cruiser there is reported to have been deserted.

Missionaries report that Siao-Kan, 30 miles north of here, is in the possession of the rebels.

The revolutionists have offered a reward of $500 for the capture of Jui-Chêng, formerly Viceroy of Sze-Chuen.

Five additional foreign warships dropped anchor in the river to-day. Vice Admiral Sir Alfred L. Winsloe, commander of the British China Station, arrived at noon in the British dispatch boat Alacrity.

The situation is so tense that numbers of women and children are proceeding daily to Shanghai. However, all the missionaries in Hankow are safe. At a mass meeting of foreigners it was agreed that a simultaneous exodus from the city should be made in case of necessity. At present complete order prevails, but there is a panic among the servants employed by foreigners.

The Red Cross Society, organized by the revolutionary leaders, began to-day to remove the heaped up corpses from the streets of Wu-Chang. Well-to-do Chinese are subscribing liberally to the funds for the work.

The revolutionists' determination to end the régime of official graft was brought sharply to attention to-day by the execution of an officer who had been appointed to collect funds for the rebel cause. He was caught in an attempt to divert some of the money to his own pocket, and was promptly beheaded.

No trains are leaving the Hankow terminal for the North, and it is uncertain when the service will be resumed. The tracks have been cleared everywhere to accelerate the passage of the Government troop trains.

Hankow Buildings on Fire.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 17.—A large number of Europeans have left Hankow on board the steamer Belgravia and other vessels.

Direct advices from Hankow to-night say that the city is quiet, but that a big fire is burning in the Chinese quarter and that the Post Office, Custom House, and a native shipyard are also on fire.

The telegraph lines between Hankow and Canton are interrupted.

Perfect quiet is being maintained at Canton.

The British cruiser Newcastle arrived at Nanking to-day.

The Government is having trouble in obtaining transports for the movement of troops.

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—Advices received at the Foreign Office from Hankow to-day report that a German force of bluejackets, reinforced by German local residents, has been landed at Hankow and is "now engaged in fighting in the streets with a Chinese mob."

The report states that detachments were landed from the German cruiser Leipzig and the German gunboats Tiger and Vaterland. Members of the German colony volunteered to support the marines.

To-night the Foreign Office received the following dispatch from the German commander at Hankow:

> Hankow quiet. Admiral Sah and 4,000 regular troops arrived. Fighting expected near German colony. German steamer with non-combatants has left.

The Admiralty has no details regarding the fighting at Hankow, but understands that the Germans are co-operating in the international landing movement commanded by the Japanese Admiral. The German commander will probably report at the close of the day's fighting.

Wireless communication is open by way of Tsing-Tao on the coast of Shan-Tung, the German territory, with which the German ships are able to communicate direct. It is believed that all the land lines are down, and it is considered fortunate that the powerful wireless systems of the warships permit them to communicate direct with Tsing-Tao.

The large German cruiser Gneisenau will arrive at Hankow to-morrow with Vice Admiral von Krosigk, Commander of the German Asiatic Squadron. As the German Vice Admiral has a rank superior to that of the American Admiral, it is probable that he will supersede the latter in the command of the international naval forces. A German torpedoboat is accompanying the Gneisenau.

Die Post, commenting this afternoon on developments at Hankow, attacks the United States on the ground that that country is trying to play too big a rôle in the situation. Other powers, the paper says, have more important military forces and commercial interests in China, and should take the lead in the protective measures.

BRITISH ADMIRAL SENIOR.

Officials in London Surprised to Hear German May Command.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 18.—The statement from Berlin that Vice Admiral von Krosigk is likely to take command of the international forces at Hankow came as a surprise to the British officials. It is stated at the Foreign Office that no arrangement has been made for the placing of these forces under the supreme command of any one.

It also appears that Vice Admiral Sir Alfred M. Winsloe, Commander of the British China station, who arrived at Hankow at noon yesterday, is considerably the senior of Vice Admiral von Krosigk.

The news from Berlin, which has not yet been confirmed from Chinese sources, of the landing of German bluejackets at Hankow has also caused an uneasy feeling here. Most of the critics are prepared to await an explanation of the German action, but others accept it as "another display of mailed fist."

Unless there has been some anti-foreign outbreak, concerning which nothing has come over the wires to London, it is considered here that, in view of the respect the rebels have shown for foreigners, there was no reason for intervention, and, even should the necessity have arisen, intervention should have been carried out by the combined forces under the senior officer, who, the British assert, is Admiral Winsloe.

The Daily Mail, taking the view that Germany has been overzealous, says: "The 'mailed fist' has got to work in China with dramatic suddenness. The reason for the action is not given, but nothing short of an attack upon the European settlements could justify foreign interference.

"We are loath to assume that the unexplained action of the German commander was prompted by a desire to repeat the incident in the Boxer campaign, when Count von Waldersee was sent by the Emperor to take supreme command of the European, American, and Japanese troops, who had already done the fighting. Whatever explanation is forthcoming, it is evident that the German commander acted on the advice given by the Emperor to Prince Henry on his departure to the Far East in 1897: 'Should any one essay to detract from our just rights or injure us, then up and at him with you mailed fist.'"

MISSIONARIES QUIT HAN-YANG.

Situation So Threatening That They Are Obliged to Depart.

BOSTON, Oct. 17.—The situation at Han-Yang, Hu-Pe Province, where the Chinese revolutionists have captured the Government arsenal, has become so threatening that the misionaries of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society have been obliged to leave the city. This news was received in a cablegram from Shanghai to-day to the headquarters of the society in this city.

TO thoroughly understand and fully appreciate just how much these underpricings mean to you it is necessary that you first know the conditions under which the indicated values were produced.

The producing season for high-grade ready-for-service clothes, generally speaking, leaves idle or nearly so for a fifth or more of each year, enormous investments, elaborate plants and great organizations, which must bear the burden of the full year's overhead charges, which in turn becomes naturally a considerable part of the productive cost, and so in almost all high-grade ready-for-service clothes a charge is necessary to offset the lost efficiency of twenty and often more per cent.

Now it would seem that the ideal productive condition would be one wherein a plant running under the pressure necessary to produce a maximum number of garments would develop a minimum of productive cost.

But the Smith Gray & Co. tailoring plant is content with no such meagre achievement as operating at capacity for fifty-two weeks—for the past year and a half, counting overtime, the Smith Gray & Co. plant has averaged sixty weeks to the year.

So much for efficiency—wherein it interests you is that there is produced a more uniformly high grade of workmanship at a minimum cost than is possible, we believe, outside the Smith Gray & Co. organization.

But—constant production in the very nature of things demands constant distribution—for weeks past the selling has fallen behind the output, and as a result there are to-day in the Smith Gray & Co. stores several thousand surplus Fall Suits and Fall Coats which, since our natural production will supply our normal outlet, must be disposed of at once.

To this end are these underpricings, which constitute now, just when the need of Fall Suits and Fall Coats is greatest, your opportunity.

COME IN TO-DAY. See for yourself that the values are in many instances even greater than those indicated.

CHIMNEY BURGLARS ROB FEATHER STORE

Drop Down to Rosenshine's Like Santa Claus and Not a Burglar Alarm Sounded.

CARRY OFF $3,000 IN GOODS

Insurance Companies in Despair, as Doors, Windows, and Exits Were Wired to Catch Robbers.

The best men in the Detective Bureau have been set on the trail of a band of burglars who escaped with $3,000 worth of ostrich plumes and bird of paradise feathers from the warerooms of Rosenshine Brothers, 57 and 59 East Eleventh Street, after they had gained an entrance to the store, which is heavily wired with burglar alarms, by coming down the chimney like Santa Claus. The burglars arrived, however, with empty packs and climbed out of the chimney again laden with good things.

The chimney place is in the roof of an added story of the ten-story building. Rosenshine Brothers occupy the basement and ground floor, have a storeroom on the tenth floor, and in the added story have a steam plant and a dyeing and a drying room. A sheet iron chimney some eighteen inches in diameter rises fifteen feet above the roof of the addition.

Each floor is wired thoroughly with burglar alarms, because the burglary insurance companies consider feather and fur works among the greatest risks which they are called on to take, and recently have declined to issue insurance unless burglar alarms are in use. Not only the doors and windows of the Rosenshine plant are wired, but the walls and ceilings are perfect networks of wires also. Once the place is closed for the night it is scarcely possible to move about in any of the rooms without setting off an alarm.

Apparently the burglars were well aware of this condition, for Vincenzo Verretti, chief dyer for Rosenshine Brothers, found, when he went to work early Monday morning of last week, that doors and windows were closed as they had been left on Saturday afternoon, and there was nothing to indicate that thieves had been there until Verretti reached the drying room and found the $3,000 in feathers gone.

Verretti couldn't imagine how the burglars had entered till he went outside on the roof. There he found the big chimney lying on the roof. It had been removed from its position above the roof of the addition. It was evident then that the burglars had entered through the chimney opening, and that to reach this point they must have gained access to the roof of the Rosenshine building though one of the buildings which adjoin it.

The building to the east is a twelve-story structure, while the next adjoining on the west is about the same height as the Rosenshine building. From either of these buildings the burglars could have come. They climbed to the roof of the addition and cut the wire stays which held the big chimney in place. With the chimney displaced they had a fairly large opening in the roof through which they could slip into the drying room without fear of setting off a burglar alarm.

It is supposed that the burglars entered one of the adjoining buildings some time before closing time on Saturday and lay hidden there until every one had gone home. Then they got to the roof, from which they crossed to the Rosenshine building. If they followed this course in robbing the feather dealers, Verretti pointed out that the robbery could not have taken place much before Sunday evening, as the steam plant would not have permitted the removal of the upper part of the chimney nor the descent into the rooms by this means, until the last vestige of fire had died out. This would not be until Sunday morning, said Verretti, and then unless they dared risk working in the daytime the burglars must have waited till Sunday night, so that they could scarcely have been gone more than an hour or two when the first comers arrived for work Monday morning.

Since feathers are almost impossible to recognize neither the dealers, the burglary insurance company nor the police have much hope that the stolen goods will be recovered. A special effort is being made by the police, however, at the request of several burglary insurance companies, for with burglar alarms proved unavailing the companies see in the feather business a risk which is becoming too great for them to accept.

CLUBBED BY POLICEMAN.

Bruised and Arm Broken, Boy Complains to the Mayor.

Seventeen-year-old James Going, living at 227 East Ninety-fifth Street called at the City Hall yesterday and complained to Robert Adamson, Mayor Gaynor's Secretary, that his right arm had been broken and his thigh badly bruised by a policeman on Monday evening. The boy, who wore knickerbockers, said that he had left his home to go on an errand for his mother when he noticed a group of boys playing on the sidewalk at Ninety-fifth Street, between Second and Third Avenues. A policeman appeared and the boys ran.

"I didn't run," said young Going, "because I didn't do anything. I was going to the bakery to get a loaf of bread for my mother. The policeman grabbed me and struck me with his stick several times. Some people told him he ought to be ashamed of himself. He didn't arrest me, but someone sent for an ambulance from the Presbyterian Hospital. The surgeon put my arm in splints and dressed my bruises."

The boy said that the policeman subsequently called at his home and asked him not to make a complaint, saying that he would get into trouble if charges were preferred against him. He also offered to pay the doctor's bill, the boy said.

The Mayor ordered Police Commissioner Waldo to make an investigation.

W. K. VANDERBILT, JR., DENIES

That the New York Central Will Take Over Long Island Motor Speedway.

A report was in circulation yesterday that a plan is on foot for the New York Central Lines to take over the Long Island motor speedway, and construct an electric railway to compete with the Long Island Railroad for suburban business.

In support of the rumor it was said that the speedway charter, obtained by W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and associates, contains a forgotten clause, permitting the laying of steel rails on the speedway bed for other than steam railway uses. When the story was repeated to Mr. Vanderbilt at the Central offices yesterday afternoon he replied emphatically: "There's no truth whatever in it."

Hill Dividends in 1911.

The Northern Pacific and the Great Northern both suffered losses in gross and net earnings last year. The Burlington's operating revenues remained almost stationary, but a big reduction in its expenses enabled the company to show a substantial gain in surplus. The Burlington earned 15.2 per cent. on its stock last year, or nearly twice the amount required by its 8 per cent. dividend. The Northern Pacific earned 8.24 per cent., out of which to pay its 7 per cent., and the Great Northern 8.3 per cent., out of which it likewise paid 7 per cent. The Colorado & Southern lost $482,000 on its half interest in the unprofitable Trinity & Brazos Valley, and the balance, after preferred dividends, was equivalent only to [illegible] per cent. on the common stock. The latter receives 2 per cent. annually.

HOLD UP TRIANGLE INSURANCE

Harris & Blanck, Factory Owners, Get an Order Against Royal Company.

A legal contest over the payment of some of the insurance on the Triangle Shirt Waist factory, where 145 women, girls, and men lost their lives on March 25, developed yesterday when Max Blanck and Isaac Harris, the indicted proprietors of the factory, obtained an order from Supreme Court Justice McCall requiring the Royal Insurance Company, Limited, to show cause why a Supreme Court order for their examination before trial in the suit should not be set aside. The argument on the order is set for to-day. Harris and Blanck set forth that the order for their examination was applied for in bad faith.

Among the pleadings put forth by Harris and Blanck it appears that they have made settlements with various insurance companies, some forty-one in all, on $194,750 insurance. They were insured in forty-two companies, one of which was the Royal, in which they carried $5,000 insurance, and upon whose refusal to pay the suit was brought. They set up that a rigid investigation into their books was made by the accounting firm of Barrow, Wade, Guthrie & Co., on behalf of the Board of Fire Insurance Underwriters, and that following the report to the Fire Exchange the claims on $194,750 of insurance were paid. They allege a total loss in the fire of $203,585.

The Royal Insurance Company is resisting payment on the ground that Harris and Blanck violated a clause in the policy which makes it void if there is any concealment or false representation. They contend that the total money loss of the firm was only $174,750 or less.

STEWART H. JONES SUES WIFE

In Asking Divorce He Says He Ejected Her from Alwyn Apartments.

Stewart H. Jones, President of the Canadian Bronze Company of 2 Rector Street and Montreal, Canada, who lives at the Alwyn Court apartment house, has filed a suit for divorce against his wife, Eleanor T. Jones. Mrs. Jones, who is with her parents, at 34 East Utica Street, Buffalo, N. Y., had filed no answer to the suit up to yesterday, and it has been placed on the undefended action calendar for trial before Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum to-day.

Jones charges that his wife and J. Leopold Braud, or Brodie, one of the three co-respondents he named in his suit, attempted to kidnap his young son, Stewart Ogden Hill Jones, at a Montreal hotel in May last. He says that Braud met his wife while he and she were guests at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, and that Braud posed as an Austrian Prince. He says that his wife, whom he married in Buffalo in 1897, went to Europe with Braud in April on the White Star liner Celtic, and that on her return he ejected her from his apartments at the Alwyn Court.

Papers in the suit were served on Mrs. Jones at the Waldorf-Astoria, according to a statement of J. W. Hyde of 10 Wall Street, Jones's attorney, by Albert Ashmead, a doorman of Alwyn Court. She smiled, according to Ashmead's affidavit of service, and inquired about her infant child. Another co-respondent named by Jones is a son of Don Epifiano Portela, Argentine Minister to Italy, who was formerly Argentine Ambassador to the United States.

DEAD, WITH WALLETS EMPTY.

Murder Suspected in Case of a Man Washed Ashore on Staten Island.

Coroner Jackson and the police of Staten Island believe they have a murder mystery in their hands. The victim, they think, was a man whose body was washed ashore yesterday morning on the beach at Oakwood. The discovery of a secret pocket in the man's waistcoat, which had been ripped open and two empty wallets which reposed there first aroused the Coroner's suspicions. The arteries in both wrists had been cut.

The man was about 30 years old, with brown hair, somewhat thin, and blue eyes. He was clean shaven and weighed about 160 pounds. He was about five feet seven inches in height. He was well dressed in a pepper and salt suit, with good underwear and silk socks. In his pockets were a pearl handle knife and a silver pencil holder, a bunch of keys, three cents in money, a watch and a pair of gold rimmed spectacles. The body was found by a laborer on his way to work

The secret pocket was almost in the back of the man's waistcoat, and had been slashed as though with a knife. His cuff buttons were gone also. Until the discovery of the mutilated pocket Coroner Jackson was inclined to believe that the man had been a suicide. He said the body had been in the water for about twenty-four hours.

ASKS STATE TO SEIZE STEINWAY TUNNEL

Negotiations Having Failed, Service Board Refers the case to the Attorney General.

CITY NEEDS THE PROPERTY

Therefore, Since Interborough Title is in Doubt, Ouster Proceedings Are Recommended.

Ouster proceedings in the case of the Steinway Tunnel will be instituted against the Interborough interests by Attorney General Carmody, if he accedes to a request sent to him yesterday by the Public Service Commission. Negotiations have been proceeding between Chairman Willcox and President Shonts for several weeks, but Mr. Willcox declared yesterday that the commission had exhausted without effect every fair and equitable suggestion towards operating the tunnel, and at his request the commission authorized the letter to the Attorney General.

The commission seeks to raise the question of what legal rights the builders of the tunnel have in it now in its uncompleted state. It was constructed by the New York & Long Island Railroad Company, which is now defunct, its charter having lapsed. The tunnel is still in the custody of the Directors of the dissolved corporation, as trustees for its stockholders and creditors, and these Directors are to all intents and purposes the Interborough Rapid Transit Company's interests. The Court of Appeals, however, has expressed the opinion that the title of these trustees is not clear, and it is this that will be decided by the ouster proceedings.

Chairman Willcox presented to the commission a written report pointing out that after the Court of Appeals had questioned the title of the trustees to the tunnel property it suggested that it might be advisable in the public's interest to pass a general statute to protect the privileges of the trustees. Accordingly a remedial act was passed in June, 1910, providing that if a new corporation were formed and it obtained an operating franchise, the trustees might legally transfer to it all their surviving rights.

The Public Service Commission, Mr. Willcox contended, did its part in carrying out the intentions of this remedial act by adopting the Steinway Tunnel route and general plan, and after obtaining the assent of the Board of Estimate and the Mayor, endeavored to make an arrangement with the Interborough. He described how gradually all negotiations with the Interborough were broken off, and then said:

"The situation then is that the Interborough interests refuse to make any proposition to bring this within the provisions of the remedial statute of 1910. Matters are, therefore, at a deadlock. The streets and other public places occupied by the Steinway Tunnel are necessary for rapid transit purposes. The trustees of the New York & Long Island Railroad Company are in possession under a claim of right which the decision of the Court of Appeals intimates is not good in law. The trustees refuse to accept a fair proposition made by the city, or to make a proposition themselves. This dog-in-the-manger policy cannot be tolerated. The commission, having exhausted all its means to treat this matter, upon the basis of frankness and equity, can now only let the law take its course."

The letter sent by the commission to Attorney General Carmody gives the entire history of the Steinway Tunnel from the legal standpoint, and points out that more than a year has elapsed since the passage of the act which permits the transfer of the rights of the tunnel trustees to a corporation, and yet nothing has been done. So as the streets and lands occupied by the tunnel are needed for rapid transit extension, the commission asks the Attorney General to act.

Mr. Carmody was not in the city yesterday, and nothing could be learned as to the action he intends to take.

Louis Parker to Talk to College Girls.

The associate Alumnae of the Normal College will hold their annual Fall reunion in the college building on Saturday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock. Louis. N. Parker, author of "Pomander Walk" and "Disraeli" will speak on the subject of "Pageantry."

WILEY ON FACTORIES.

He Would Drive Them All Out of the Cities.

Dr. Havey W. Wiley, Chief of the Government Bureau of Chemistry, speaking last night at a dinner of the Twilight Club at the Hotel Cumberland, advocated a law to prohibit factories in large cities. This was one way, he said, in which means could be taken to "drive the city into the country" and create conditions under which the workingman would have plenty of fresh air and live under sanitary conditions. He made a special plea for the conservation of the health of children.

Dr. Wiley was the guest of honor and was described on the programme as the "Father of the Pure Food Laws" and "for over a quarter of a century the Nation's most active foe to poisoned and adulterated food products." The toastmaster, Charles Avory Doremus, introduced him as "a square man in a square deal," and he was enthusiastically applauded by the 200 diners of both sexes.

"The subject of the health of the Nation," said Dr. Wiley, "is to be one of wonderful interest. I believe that health is the normal condition of man. I have no ambition to be known as a faddist or a radical or as anything else than a normal citizen of our Republic. I believe the power and ability of the Republic are made up of the power and ability of the individuals. The gift we should most prize is health. It is the greatest of all our National assets and the one for the conservation of which we have the least regard.

"In the large cities the people, and especially the children, are underfed. They do not get proper food and not enough fresh air. The people crowd into the cities, where the prices of food are high. Yet the farmer gets less and less for his products, and the people in the cities are paying more and more. Is that a normal condition? Is it a natural result of the law of supply and demand? The farmer ought to get more and you ought to pay less.

"Unless you feed the people of this city better than they are fed now, you are not going to raise a healthy class of people in this city. Boys on the farm go to the city because life in the city is more attractive. When I was on the farm my chief idea was to get away from it as soon as possible. And I did—much to the regret of many people. But I hadn't been there long when the glamour was over and I wanted to get back to the farm.

"We hear a good deal about rus in urbe, but what we want is urbs in rure. We want to drive the city out into the country. We are going to make life in the country more attractive. We are going to make the aristocrats of this country the men who live on farms. This we are going to do by means of agricultural education. Instead of teaching our children a barbarous system of weights and measures, let us teach them the art of agriculture, the beauties of the country and the relation of the country to health.

"The city is not the place for active production. It is the place for exchange. A city should not be renowned for the number of people it has, but for the kind of people it has. Every city should be prohibited by law from any kind of manufacturing. It should be reserved for exchange. Then the productive industries would go to the country. Every laborer would have plenty of air and a back yard where he could see the trees and flowers grow. Don't encourage the poor man to regard liquor and tobacco as the only pleasures he can have. Let him have flowers and birds and he won't want to drink or smoke.

"You can't conserve the health of this city as long as so many live in so small a space. You cannot drive out the factories already here, but you can prevent the establishment of any more and you can create a sentiment that will lead others to move to the country."

Dr. Wiley told a story of "a sick mother and a fat hog." The mother wanted to go to the country, but the authorities told her they could not send here there, but if she died would send her child to the orphan asylum, which was done. A farmer had a fat hog which fell sick. He wired to Washington, and the next morning three experts were on the ground.

"They injected medicine into the hog and did everything for it," said Dr. Wiley, "and the hog got well. Moral—Be a hog."

"Good nourishment," he went on, "is the greatest prophylactic against disease. Instead of teaching children weights and measures spend the money for healthful luncheons for them. Unless they have good food well prepared and in abundance they will not be healthy. I have no sympathy with the starvation theory or confining human beings to one article of diet. I'm an omniverous animal. I eat everything I can get hold of unless it has been preserved with poisonous substances or kept too long in cold storage. The man who tells us that men have always eaten twice as much as they need is no friend of mine. The conquering nations are the well-fed nations.

"As a rule, the people of this country are not overnourished. They are merely well nourished. And a man must be a little more than well fed. He must have some margin.

"Let me conserve the health of the children and I don't care who doctors the grown people and collects the fees. Keep the children away from tea and coffee, which can do them nothing but harm. When they grow up they can do as they like. I use both of them myself. But parents who guard against tea and coffee let them buy soft drinks full of caffein which are sold in every drug store in this city, I have no doubt. In this way the child becomes a nervonus wreck while it is a child. My message to you is to conserve the health of the child and you will have done something for the glory of your country."

Other speakers were Dr. William J. Robinson, President of the American Society of Medical Sociology; Eugene Christain, a writer on vegetarianism and food science; the Rev. Madison C. Peters, and Upton Sinclair, whose book, "The Jungle," caused the passage of the food inspection law, according to the programme. Among those present were John F. Tucker, President of the Twilight Club; Hudson Maxim, Mabel Urner, Prof. and Mrs. Charles Austin Bates, Dr. Elmer Arnold, Prof. H. H. Hollingsworth, Charles W. Fuller, and Charles Klein.

DEFER WASHINGTON CASE.

Negro Educator Here to Testify Against Ulrich, but Defense Not Ready.

The trial of Henry A. Ulrich, the carpenter who is charged with assaulting Dr. Booker T. Washington, the negro educator, was again postponed yesterday in Special Sessions. James I. Moore, counsel for Ulrich, asked for the adjournment, saying that three of the witnesses for the defense had left the city within thirty-six hours.

Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith objected, saying that Dr. Washington was ready to testify. Mr. Moore, in return, intimated that the prosecution was keeping the witnesses for Ulrich out of the jurisdiction of the court.

Two of the missing witnesses are Mrs. Frank H. Revette, who occupied the apartment across the hall from that of the Ulrichs, and Lieut. Quinn of the West Sixty-eighth Street station, who refused to entertain a charge against Dr. Washington.

Mr. Smith protested that Dr. Washington has come to this city at a great deal of expense and inconvenience to testify.

Investigation brought out that Lieut. Quinn was away on his vacation, and the Justices put the case over until Nov. 6.

WORSTED WILTON RUGS IN A TYPICAL MACY SALE

These standard Rugs must not be confused with mere wool Wilton rugs which do not retain their color for any length of time and which are got up in tremendous quantities chiefly for the purpose of special sales at tempting prices.

The public is more likely to be led astray because the prices we are asking for strictly worsted Wilton Rugs are in some cases actually less than the special sale prices charged elsewhere for the inferior grade.

The purchase by which this remarkable sale of Worsted Wilton Rugs is made possible embodies the entire surplus stock of one of the foremost Philadelphia mills. By reason of taking such a tremendous quantity, the goods were turned over to us at a concession that is probably unprecedented.

The assortment comprises the most successful designs and colorings known in the carpet industry. They are chiefly Oriental patterns, and small allover effects. The sizes range from 22½x36 in. to 11 ft. 3 in.x15 ft.

There are rugs with medallion centres and rugs in small figures; rugs in light shades, in medium and dark shades of tan, green, red, rose, ecru ground and French grey. Rugs for any and every room in the house.
The larger sizes have small rugs to match.

USED THE BACK DOOR TO COURT MISS SMITH

Chorus Man Plaintiff Admits Also Gifts of Jewels, Money, and Father's Dress Suit.

HE HAS RETURNED HER RING

She Did the Buying—Uncomfortable Afternoon for $50,000 Breach of Promise Suitor.

Russell Gardner Griswold, the $18-a-week chorus man, continued yesterday explaining to Justice Brown and a jury in the Supreme Court why he is suing Helen Woodruff Smith, daughter of the late Commodore James D. Smith of Stamford, for $50,000 for breach of promise of marriage. When he had finished explaining, under guidance of his own counsel, he spent an uncomfortable afternoon under cross-examination. This is the third case in which a man has ever sued a woman for breach of promise within the knowledge of the County Court House lawyers, and people fought for places in the small courtroom to hear what the black-garbed, sunken-cheeked youth had to say. Miss Smith, dressed in a black tailor-made gown and a white plumed hat, continued to occupy a seat between a younger woman friend and Capt. Biggs of her late father's yacht Viking. She kept her double veil off except when she caught newspaper artists in the act of sketching her. She is a small, pink-cheeked woman, with a sharp, diminutive nose, and a somewhat recessive chin. Her 14-year-old son by her former husband, ex-Mayor Cummings of Stamford, was not in court. Miss Smith saluted the Judge on entering the court, and seemed to want to show that she was very much at ease and amused.

Lawyer Jacob Gordon, young Griswold's counsel, spent most of the morning reading the remainder of Miss Smith's 200 letters to his client, most of which were printed in a newspaper in advance of trial. After the reading of these letters young Griswold, led by his lawyer, testified that he still loved Miss Smith and that he had been greatly damaged in business, heart, health, and reputation by having been discarded by her.

"What did your friends say when they learned Miss Smith had jilted you, after nine years' intimacy?" Lawyer Gordon asked his client.

"They said I was a fool to let her get away with it," young Griswold replied.

Mr. Gordon announced that he would call no other witnesses and present no other evidence.

"Does the plaintiff rest?" asked Justice Brown, raising his eyebrows slightly.

Lawyer Mooney, for Miss Smith, immediately asked that the complaint be dismissed on the ground that no evidence had been produced to show that she had ever broken any promise of marriage.

"Griswold himself admitted here on the stand yesterday that Miss Smith on the night of their last quarrel said she wanted to continue their relations, but that he refused to go on," argued Mr. Mooney.

Justice Brown thought a moment, and then made a little deprecatory gesture.

"Well, I don't know but that we'd better go on," he announced.

Widow Also His Patron.

Lawyer Mooney's cross-examination of young Griswold lasted the rest of the afternoon. Under the lash of the lawyer's questions Griswold asserted that his relations with Miss Smith were "guilty," admitted that he had borrowed money from her, and that while making love to Miss Smith he had gone to spend a fortnight at a sanitarium at Delaware Water Gap with a widow whose initial was "C.," and that this widow had paid his board at the institution.

Griswold admitted that he had expected Miss Smith to support him at least temporarily after their marriage; that he had accepted engagement presents from her but had given none to her. He gave a pitiable account of his inability to earn sufficient money to live in self-respecting independence. He said he had given up a small position in the Corn Exchange Bank at Miss Smith's request, because she was sympathetic about his eye trouble, and that although she was still married to Mayor Cummings of Stamford he had gone to live at her home to do secretary work for her.

"How did you enter the house to do your chores?" he was asked.

"By the back door."

"Did you always go in by the back door?"

"Only when I met her on the sly at night to avoid meeting her husband or the Commodore."

"Then you went to that house a guilty man, didn't you?"

"I was a guilty man, but I tried to stop her. Soon, however, I fell desperately in love with her, and didn't try to stop her from professing her love for me."

Under Mr. Mooney's questions Griswold said that Mayor Cummings had at one time been so incensed at his wife's relations with Griswold that he had threatened to bring suit for divorce himself, naming Griswold as co-respondent.

She Was Threatened with Divorce.

"Helen got a divorce afterward from Mayor Cummings on the ground of non-support, but the facts of the matter are that I was privately responsible for the divorce," Griswold testified. "Mayor Cummings went so far as to draw up a paper, one time. He told Helen if she didn't consent to get a divorce from him quietly in Dakota, he would bring divorce proceedings here himself, naming me as co-respondent. Mayor Cummings broke into Helen's desk one time and got about 150 of the letters I had written her. She told me all this afterward herself."

"The promise of marriage between you grew out of a guilty association, then?" demanded Mr. Mooney. "When did she tell you this?"

"Before she went West to get the divorce herself," Griswold answered.

Griswold testified that Miss Smith, during their nine years' relations, had "never written him a letter that was not a love letter."

"Did you keep all these letters of hers for your comfort or her embarrassment?" Lawyer Mooney demanded.

The lawyer tried his best, time and again, to shake the young man's statements that he was still desperately smitten with the middle-aged heiress.

"My love for her first sprang into existence the first day I met her," Griswold testified with an odd mixture of humility and firmness. "It became real, genuine love by the end of the first week. I never intended to make any money out of her. She was always jealous of other women, including the nurse in the hospital where I was taken with appendicitis. It may have been fooling on her part, but it was the real thing with me."

"When she said to you, according to the tale you told the jury yesterday, 'Do you think you love me enough to marry me,' did you realize that you were being proposed to?" shouted Lawyer Mooney, beating his breast with a gesture of mock heroics.

"Yes, I did," Griswold answered in a determined tone. "And I said I had been waiting to marry her many years. She said that some day she would marry me, and that she wished she had met me before she had met Mr. Cummings."

"But you were scarcely born at the time she met Mr. Cummings, were you?" the lawyer retorted amid general laughter. Miss Smith has a fourteen-year-old son.

Gifts from the Widow.

"If you loved Miss Smith or Mrs. Cummings as passionately as you say, why did you go with this lady?" Lawyer Mooney next demanded, flashing a letter written on daintily colored stationery. "Didn't the woman whose initial is signed here give you a horse and wagon?"

There was a long wrangle here as to whether a widow whose initial was "C" had bought for Griswold a horse and carriage valued at $140, or whether Griswold's mother's money—she has an income from a trust fund and several houses at Rowayton—had paid for it.

"We will show that this young man was receiving gifts from other women and consorting with them, in spite of the fact that he says he was continually attached to the defendant for nine years," Lawyer Mooney shouted, when Justice Brown tried to interpose.

"We will do this not in mitigation of the damages, but because it bears on his credibility as a witness," and the cross-examination continued:

Q.—Didn't you go to a sanitarium in the Water Gap in 1908 with the woman who wrote this letter—a Mrs. C.? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did she pay the bills at the sanitarium for two weeks, or did you? A.—She did.

Q.—Did she pay your railroad fare, too? A.—No. I paid that myself.

Q.—This widow, whose name we won't mention here, also lives in your neighborhood, and you have frequently gone riding with her? A.—I have been riding with her and the rest of my family.

Q.—Did your family accompany you when you and she went to the sanitarium together? A.—No.

Q.—Why did you go? Were you ill? Did one of the doctors there even examine you? A.—I wanted to get a rest.

"Did you both get a rest," demanded Lawyer Mooney dryly.

Griswold, whose sallow, sunken cheeks were flushed and who seemed more disconcerted than at any time previously, was rescued by his counsel with an objection which Justice Brown sustained.

While his own client, unabashed, tittered, Lawyer Mooney then took up the various kinds of "kisses" which Griswold has testified he and Miss Smith, during their nine years' relations, had practiced. The "eye kiss," he explained, had been meant as a "chaste and devotional caress."

"She kissed me on the mouth, too," Griswold volunteered with the odd readiness which has characterized much of his testimony. "She did this from the second time we met. I didn't have to urge her to be affectionate. I kissed her on the lawn and in her den, but never before her husband or father."

He admitted that he had taken a bundle of Miss Smith's letters to a newspaper for publication immediately after beginning suit.

"I heard she had been telling her friends that I was just a blackmailer and had no case," he said. "I wanted satisfaction and I wanted to defend my name."

Lawyer Mooney made Griswold next go into his financial stability. He is 28 years old, and at present is earning $18 a week in a theatrical company—$20 a week when on the road.

"Miss Smith and I agreed that when we were married I would work for her and she would help me," he testified. "She said that after marriage she would support me till I got a job. I couldn't do clerical work because of my eyestrain."

Q.—Yet you would have been willing to marry her before the Commodore's death when she had no money? A.—Yes.

Q.—How would you have supported her? A.—My mother has money. I'm not a pauper. My mother bought my clothes for me during my relationship with Miss Smith.

"What does this letter, containing the phrase, 'How smart we'll look,' mean?" Lawyer Mooney wanted to know at another point.

"She had one of Commodore Smith's dress suits altered so it would fit me," Griswold stated coolly to the amusement of the court.

He admitted he was still wearing the $100 engagement ring Miss Smith had given him several years ago, and that he owed her over $300, which he had borrowed and could not pay.

"If you've got $100 of her stuff on your body, why don't you pay back your notes with it?" Lawyer Mooney demanded.

The case will be continued this morning.

The Daily Newspaper

All experienced advertisers acknowledge that familiarity by the public with the name and nature of their wares is one of the first essentials of success. To attain this familiarity the eye must be appealed to, and appealed to repeatedly. Sporadic appeals are as useless as a bucket of water thrown on an arid plain. What the eyes see the mind holds, but they must see it daily—and the daily newspaper offers the only stable opportunity for the direct aim at the vision. The story told in the daily newspaper, day after day, is impressed on the mind. This impression is a valuable factor.

IDENTIFY M'NAMARA AGAIN AS J. B. BRYCE

Prisoner Pointed Out as Man Who Was in San Francisco When Dynamite Was Bought.

SIX TALESMEN IN THE BOX

But One May Be Challenged Because He Does Not Believe in Capital Punishment.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 17.—Twice today James B. McNamara was identified as James B. Bryce, who registered at a San Francisco hotel and bought dynamite just before The Times explosion occurred. The first identification was in the morning when Sam Brown of the District Attorney's detective staff led a well-dressed man into the courtroom. After standing for a moment or two, gazing about him, the stranger pointed out the prisoner and then withdrew with the detective.

The second identification came late in the afternoon. The witness was said to be a barber named Berryhill, but this was disproved by local newspaper men, and by Berryhill himself, who denied having been in the room during the trial.

Efforts to gain information regarding the witnesses failed. Neither Detective Brown nor any member of the District Attorney's staff would give the names. It is asserted, however, that the morning witness is a hotel clerk, of San Francisco and New York.

"They would be hounded half to death if we should give the names," was the way District Attorney Fredericks put it. Others were equally reticent.

The re-examination of Juror John W. Roberts made it evident to-day that the attorneys for James B. McNamara have a very efficient system of gathering information. Chief Counsel Darrow said he would like to be quoted to the effect that the defense has used detectives, but finding them ineffective has fallen back on the organization of the labor unions throughout the country. This organization was used to inform the defense attorneys on the past life of every man who goes into the witness box.

The prosecution is depending on the organization built up by Detective Brown and the employes of the Burns National Detective Agency.

The trial is moving forward with all the regularity of a well-oiled machine. To-day when the court adjourned there were six possible jurors in the box.

Clarence Darrow this afternoon introduced into the trial for the first time the question of race and creed. After some preliminary hedging he put the question to Talesman George W. McKee:

"Would the fact that your ancestors came from the North of Ireland and probably have been Presbyterians for generations prejudice you against the defendant, whose ancestors came from the South of Ireland and were Catholics?"

McKee answered "No," and was passed temporarily.

P. Y. Quackenbush, who said he was born in Oshkosh, Wis., and served during three years in a Michigan regiment that went through the civil war, was called. He is probably the oldest man now in the jurybox.

When court adjourned to-night the defense had passed six talesmen, one had been excused by the court, and two were excused because of challenge for cause. The line-up of the passed talesmen to-night was:

J. W. ROBERTS, real estate dealer.
ROBERT F. BAIN, carpenter.
P. Y. QUACKENBUSH, expressman.
A. R. McINTOSH, baker.
T. W. ADAMS, grocer.
G. W. McKEE, retired real estate dealer.

To-day's rejections were:

Z. T. HIATT, excused by court because of bias against capital punishment.

SAMUEL McCREARY, challenged for bias after he said he had a fixed opinion as to whether or not The Times disaster was caused by a criminal act. He said he was acquainted with Harry Chandler, son-in-law of Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, proprietor of The Times, but never had discussed the case with him.

EDMUND S. JOHNSON, challenged and excused. He said he was prejudiced against labor unions.

Talesman Quackenbush, it was thought to-night, would not find himself on the final jury because he does not believe in capital punishment. Talesman Adams said he read, as a rule, The Los Angeles Times, The Social Democrat, and The Appeal to Reason.

Woods Pleads Guilty to Music Fraud.

Herbert J. Woods, who was in charge of the Co-operative Music Publishers' Association at 32 Union Square, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Hough in the United States Circuit Court to using the mails to defraud poets and music writers. His case was put over to January on the understanding that the defendant would be allowed to go free, if he restored the money he had taken from the persons he had swindled. In the course of his correspondence Woods represented that the capital of the association was to be raised from $25,000 to $1,000,000 to build a skyscraper in Times Square.

CITY'S AGED POOR AT NEW CATHEDRAL

SERVICE MOSTLY CHORAL

Almshouse Folk Join in Singing Old Hymns—Greet the Bishop as He Passes in the Recessional.

Ninety-nine of the city's poor journeyed yesterday afternoon from the New York Home for Aged and Infirm on Blackwell's Island to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, at the special invitation of Bishop Greer.

After the service consecrating the cathedral was finished on June 11 last Bishop Greer took several of the young clergymen who had been ordained at the service to visit the city's poor on Blackwell's Island. In the little Episcopal Chapel of the Good Shepherd on the Island he held another service and told the congregation that the cathedral belonged to them just as much as to any of the people of New York.

"I wish you could all see it," he said, as he described it. Then he cried, "You shall see it. You shall all of you go over and have a special service there."

It was this service that was held yesterday. Commissioner of Charities Drummond personally provided the means of transportation. There were fifty-five men and forty-four women, most of them near the end of life, in the party. They had been looking forward ever since June to the great day promised them. They were taken from Blackwell's Island on the city boat Lowell to the foot of 116th Street, and thence by trolley to 109th Street and Columbus Avenue, where they were met by three big stages and the city's transfer ambulance, which carried the feeblest. Two regular ambulances were in attendance in case of accident.

Commissioner Drummond himself was on hand to see that everything went well, and with him were the matron, Mrs. Mary C. Hartigen, in charge of the women, and Supt. Bissett to look after the men.

The women filled the centre seats before the altar, a picturesque group in capes of dark blue serge, with peeked hoods faced with red. They might have been a small army of fairy godmothers with sticks and crutches from the fairy books, instead of poor old creatures who had not even been able to hold good fortune for themselves. The women were comfortable in appearance, most of them, but the men generally were crippled and helpless.

The women were the oldest. Nancy Simpson was 96. One little woman with snow-white hair was lifted bodily into the carriage to go home, and every one said she must be Nancy, as she couldn't be a day less than 95. But she was one of the juveniles. Only 85.

Little German Barbara—very little and very old—thought when the service was over she would follow the choir all by herself. She was so little no one saw her for a moment, when she crept from her seat. But she was so feeble that she toppled right over when she reached the pulpit. It didn't hurt her, with the thick pointed hooded cape on, and they carried her out and put her safely in the carriage.

There were some really distinguished persons among the men. William Benton was one of these. That is one of William's two names. One he had for show purposes. He didn't say which this was. William is a fine-looking man now, towering a head and two or three shoulders above any men at the cathedral yesterday, and William's underpinnings have grown a little crooked and let him down a little since he was in his prime.

"I used to be the Fourteenth Street giant," said William. "Walked up and down with a tall hat with yellow letters on it. Yes, I measured 7 feet 1 inch when my first wife was alive. Oh, I've traveled all over. I've been before Kings and Queens. I've been rich, but I had the long arm. This for the paper? What's it worth? Ought to be worth $5, I think."

Then William stood on the curbstone, and, with his walking stick at his lips, played an imaginary flute as he waited for the coach.

The average age of the cathedral visitors was seventy. The greater number were between sixty-two and eighty. Only the juveniles and the strongest could go out. This did not keep away a half dozen men who were taken from the hospital wards, pink pajamas and all, though under the pajamas was warm clothing.

The service was short, intoned throughout, and with many hymns.

"They love to sing those old hymns so," Bishop Greer said to the Commissioner at the close of the service.

They sang "Rock of Ages," "He Leadeth Me," "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and "Nearer, My God, to Thee." The Bishop gave them out one after the other when he had closed his short address. And as the Bishop, following the choir and the three assistant clergymen in the recessional, passed the front row of seats with its little old women in peaked hoods, they grasped his hand, one after the other, and pressed it warmly.

"It was grand," one and another said as they lifted themselves feebly to leave the cathedral at last.

The Bishop's sermon—a familiar little talk—showed his strong feeling that the cathedral is the church of all the people.

"I wanted you to come here," he said, "not only to see the cathedral and hear the sweet strains of music, but I wanted to show you that it is as much your cathedral as it is the cathedral of any one in the city or diocese.

"I want you to have peace, even in sorrow and privation. The older of you may think life is all behind you, but it is not so, my dear friends; the best of all is before you in the world beyond. If we realize that we cannot fall out of the arms of God it will give us peace and happiness and joy in our lives, and I wish to force this simple and profound truth in to the hearts of every one of you."

While the greater number of the old people were overjoyed at the idea of the service, there were a few unhappy ones who could not believe that it could be true. They were afraid to leave the Island for fear something unpleasant was going to happen to them.

"I know," said one of them, voicing the sentiments of others, "you are going to take us out and dump us somewhere."

ANOTHER PARK ATTACK.

Crotona Folk Don't Want a Fire Department Building Within Its Confines.

The Fire Department made application recently to Park Commissioner Higgins of the Bronx for permission to erect a building for a central office and telegraph station at the northeastern end of Crotona Park, adjacent to the Southern Boulevard.

A delegation, representing the Crotona Park Improvement Association and the East Tremont Taxpayers' Association, appeared yesterday before Commissioner Higgins at his office in Claremont Park, in the Bronx, and protested vigorously against any further encroachments on Crotona Park.

The Commissioner's attention was called to the attempted armory invasion of the park, to the proposition to turn the whole southern side into a semi-professional baseball ground, and the action of the Board of Education in erecting an unsightly structure for a stand, abutting the northerly line, without lawful authority.

One of the speakers said that the impression seemed to prevail that Crotona Park was a dump for all kinds of buildings and monstrosities. Commissioner Higgins pointed out that the idea of the Fire Commissioner that money could be saved to the city by placing the building in the park, and that it was necessary to have it isolated. The property owners replied that this argument simply meant that the building was to be placed on the site in question at the expense of the near by property owners. Park Commissioner Higgins declared that nothing had yet been actually done toward granting the application of the Fire Department, and said he was impressed with the protest of the delegations.

On July 17 the Board of Estimate authorized an expenditure of $50,000 for the erection of a building for the Fire Department in the Bronx at St. Anne's Avenue and Rae Street, which is much further south in the Bronx than Crotona Park. Since that time the Crotona Park site has been tentatively selected.

MISS LINNELL NO SUICIDE.

Took Poison as Medicine, Medical Examiner Finds—Pastor Explains.

BOSTON, Oct. 17.—Because of an official report made to-day by Medical Examiner Leary that Miss Avis Linnell, a young musical student, who died last Saturday at the Young Women's Christian Association Lodging House on Warrenton Street of cyanide of potassium poisoning, did not take the poison with suicidal intent, but as a medicine, the police have been asked by the District Attorney to investigate the case and to ascertain whether the young woman obtained the poison herself or received it from some one else.

After the body of the girl was found in her room and the Medical Examiner had made a hasty examination, it was announced that she had taken her own life. Further investigation by the police was followed by the statement that the cause of the supposed suicide was probably disappointment over a love affair.

The Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, formerly pastor of a church at Hyannisport, where the girl's parents live, but now pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church of Cambridge, was reported to have been engaged to Miss Linnell, but, although he acknowledged readily his acquaintance with the young woman, he denied that he was engaged to her. On the other hand he pointed to the fact that his engagement to the daughter of one of his parishioners has just been announced.

Mr. Richeson attended the funeral of Miss Linnell at Hyannisport to-day, but returned on a late afternoon train in order to be present at a meeting of one of his church committees called to investigate reports regarding his acquaintance with Miss Linnell.

Railway Poisoned Husband, She Says.

Alleging that her husband, Charles Strawder Batt of Tarrytown, died on June 15, 1910, through eating the day before something poisonous in a dining car of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, Mrs. Dorothy R. Batt has brought two actions for $100,000 each against the company. She sues both as the widow and as the administratrix of her husband's estate. The case was removed yesterday on the application of the defendants to the United States Circuit Court in this city.

INSURANCE MEN UNITE THEIR ASSOCIATIONS

The Two That Represented the Casualty and Accident Underwriters Are Now One.

NOT TO CONSIDER RATES

Annual Dinner Follows, with Insurance Commissioners There from a Dozen States.

After negotiations lasting about five months, a merger of the two associations, of which practically all the casualty, surety, and the accident underwriters in the United States are members, was brought about at the Hotel Astor last night. The Board of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, with thirty-nine members, and the International Association of Accident Underwriters, with sixty-four members, were brought together. The new organization is to be called the International Association of Casualty and Surety Underwriters.

John T. Stone, who proposed the merger, denied emphatically last night that it had anything to do with the fixing or discussion of rates. Mr. Stone said that the new association would consider legislation in the various States for and against the business of its members, and maintain in common a bureau to watch such legislation and report to the various members. He admitted, however, that the formation of the amalgamated organization meant a getting together of all the casualty and accident men for mutual protection and assistance.

Negotiations for the merger were carried to success by two committees of three members each from the accident and the surety associations. John T. Stone, Louis H. Fibel, and W. C. Potter represented the Accident Underwriters, while William Bro Smith, Robert J. Hillas, and William F. Moore represented the Surety Underwriters.

The committee reported at the opening of the annual session of both organizations yesterday, sitting jointly for the first time, at the Hotel Astor. A constitution and by-laws for the new organization was reported at the same time and the resolution declaring the new association in existence was adopted after considerable discussion, nearly all of which was of a congratulatory character.

The annual dinner was held last night, with about 160 representatives of firms present. Every company in each of the old organizations was represented by either its President or General Manager, and in many cases by both. In addition, the dinner was attended by the Insurance Commissioners of nearly a dozen States. These included Edmund H. Moore of Ohio, William H. Hotchkiss of New York, Frederick W. Potter of Illinois, C. A. Palmer of Michigan, Col. Joseph Button of Virginia, and Frank H. Hardison of Massachusetts.

The after dinner speaking was largely informal and jocular. Some of the more serious speakers, however, were Edson S. Lott, President of the United States Casualty Company, toastmaster; Franklin Moore, Alfred De Forest of Chicago; J. B. Barry, Assistant Secretary of the Metropolitan Life, and Arthur I. Boies of Michigan. The new organization will hold its first meeting to-day, taking up the business left off yesterday by both old associations as they went out of business.

COSTABILE TO SING SING.

Two and a Half to Seven Years' Imprisonment for Black Hand Chief.

Judge Foster, in General Sessions yesterday, sentenced Giuseppe Costabile, the Black Hand chief, who was recently convicted of carrying a bomb, to not less than two and a half or more than seven years in Sing Sing. The sentence was under the Sullivan law, which makes it a felony for any one to carry a bomb or other dangerous instrument or weapon.

Costabile was arrested by Detectives Carreo, Castano and Dondero on Sept. 5. Assistant District Attorney Wasservogel experienced considerable difficulty in securing a conviction owing to the lack of witnesses, many of the Italian witnesses, it was stated, being afraid to come to court.

In sentencing Costabile Judge Foster said he was sorry that he had to give him such a long sentence, as he was a first offender. He said:

"Your appearance is in your favor. I don't know whether you're guilty or not, but a jury with clear minds has found you guilty."

Burglars Rob Dr. Max E. Henius.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Dr. Max E. Henius, Secretary of the International Brewers Congress, now in session here, notified the police last night that burglars broke into his home, and after chloroforming a fox terrier, which disputed their entrance, stole heirlooms, clothing, and silver ware valued at $2,000.

OLD HIGHWAYMAN ESCAPES.

Bill Minor and Two Others Overpower Guard in Georgia Penitentiary.

Special to The New York Times.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Oct. 17.—"Old Bill" Minor, the notorious robber, who has held up trains all over the United States and Canada, escaped from the Georgia Penitentiary, near here, early this morning, after overpowering his guard, with the aid of two other prisoners.

Minor choked the guard into insensibility, gagged and bound him, relieved him of his gun, and walked away. Tom Moore, a life prisoner, and John Watts of Pulaski County, also serving a life term for killing a man and his wife, escaped with him.

Minor was serving a twenty-year sentence for holding up a Southern Railway train near Gainesville, Ga., on the night of Feb. 18 this year. Minor and his gang blew open the express safe, and obtained about $12,000. He was wanted in Washington State and British Columbia for train hold-ups, and also as an escaped convict.

Minor did not take his sentence seriously.

"Why, there are no bars or chains or locks in Georgia that could hold me," he said as he was being led out of the courtroom.

Recently he pretended to be very sick and the guards relaxed their watch. His escape followed.

The money Minor stole from the Southern Railway was not recovered. It is believed he cached it in the Georgia mountains and that he is now headed toward the point where he hoarded it.

ASSAILS IMMIGRANTS.

Canadian Surgeon Gives Warning of Germs of Insanity They Carry.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 17.—Dr. Daniel Phelan, surgeon of the Dominion Penitentiary, Kingston, Ont., assailed the low class of immigrants as "the curse" of this country, in addressing the American Prison Congress to-day on prevention of crime and insanity.

"The tide of immigration," he said, "must be checked by a careful and searching inspection into the mental and physical condition of all those landing in the country, by a competent physician delegated for the purpose. Too many of these foreigners carry in them the germs of criminal tendencies that spring from degeneracy, insanity, and social diseases, and these are liable to sprout up under given circumstances and cast around them their baneful influence."

Dr. Phelan stated that fully 1 per cent. of the population is either insane or defective from birth, and that "these conditions are increasing at a rate much faster than the rate of the increase of our population."

SHOE CUTTERS LOCKED OUT.

Lynn Workers, However, Still Hope to Get an Eight-Hour Day.

LYNN, Mass., Oct. 17.—Although more than 500 shoe cutters employed in eighteen of the largest factories of this city were locked out to-day because they announced their intention to stand by the Knights of Labor movement for an eight-hour workday, the first day of Lynn's latest labor war passed off without disturbance. To-night both sides were hopeful, the manufacturers in their expectation that other firms, which have not yet taken a definite stand, will join in the lockout to-morrow, and the union leaders in their belief that the number of manufacturers deciding to allow the eight-hour schedule will be materially increased.

Some 700 cutters were working to-day in forty-two of the factories under eight-hour conditions, but only two of the manufacturers have publicly agreed to the new schedule. The others are apparently still undecided about the matter. Three factories, employing 111 cutters, have reached an agreement.

WIDOW SUES FOR A GRAVE.

Wants Sale Upset So She May Lie Beside Her Husband.

Rachel Abramson, widow of Joseph Abramson, began suit yesterday in the Supreme Court against Morris Monsky, President of Solomon Lodge 701, Sons of Benjamin, to enforce her title to a grave adjoining that of her husband in the Sons of Benjamin Cemetery on Long Island. Her husbad died on Dec. 8, 1892, and she says she bought the grave next to his, so that she might lie by his side.

This grave, she says, was sold to another and a body buried in it. She is debarred from exhuming her husband's body by the Mosaic law, she declares, and until her title to the adjoining grave is legally fixed she will continue to suffer great mental anguish.

FROM THE PLAY OF

Nothing more powerful has recently been put between the covers of a book than this story of a New England maiden's weariness of dull village life and her determination to be free from it; her failure to find an avenue of escape; her fascination by the son of her father's old friend who visits town in gaudy uniform, heading a minstrel troupe, and all that happens afterwards, before she finally found herself.

Here is realism without boredom; a wonderfully vivid, unmistakably exact, but unoffending, tremendous record of a woman's heart, passions, penalties, and final peace.

PSYCHIC PHENOMENON IN IMPRESSIVE PLAY

David Belasco's "The Return of Peter Grimm" Is a Marvelous Stage Achievement.

SOME WONDERFUL ACTING

David Warfield Plays Most Beautifully and a Remarkable Child, Percy Helton, Proves as Sensitive as His Role.

THE RETURN OF PETER GRIMM, a play in three acts, by David Belasco. Belasco Theatre.

Peter Grimm	David Warfield
Frederik	John Sainpolis
James Hartman	Thomas Meighan
Andrew MacPherson	Joseph Brennan
Rev. Henry Batholommey	William Boag
Col. Tom Lawton	John F. Webber
Willem	Percy Helton
Kathrien	Janet Dunbar
Mrs. Batholommey	Marie Bates
Marta	Marie Reichardt
The Clown	Tony Bevan

When one considers the initial difficulties to be overcome, difficulties of both a material and a mental kind, and of a very natural antagonism on the part of most people to anything relating to the supernatural or suggestive of it, the magnificance of the result attained in "The Return to Peter Grimm," both in its writing and staging by David Belasco, and its acting by David Warfield, and his wonderful child associate, Percy Helton, can hardly be overestimated. It has been a long, long time since anything so moving has been shown on our stage, or anything, which by the employment of delicate, suggestive, subtle detail, has so succeeded in enforcing its purpose upon the composite mentality of an audience in the theatre.

One hesitates to use the overworked word "triumph" in describing "The Return of Peter Grimm." But as the exposition of a theory—or possibly something more—projected in dramatic form, and as a stage play designed to have its effect upon the emotions, whether of laughter, of tears, or of both commingled, this play, dealing with the return after death, is little short of marvelous. And at bottom it is so very sweet and wholesome and is so filled with a tender and satisfying optimism that to many it must come as something very like a consolation.

Mr. Belasco credits the initial inspiration for the work to Cecil de Mille. But to those who have watched this sensitive producer with any sort of understanding of his capacity and his ambition, there are a thousand and one details in the writing, in the acting, and in the general manipulation of the product to show how his sympathetic hand has been at work.

To begin with, there must be at every play a certain willingness to surrender on the part of the audience. But in a play wherein the chief manifestations are intended to suggest an unseen world the handicap is at once greater and more difficult. For in spite of modern investigation by men whose purposes are above suspicion the general mind still persists in regarding any suggestion of psychical phenomena as matter for ridicule and laughter. In this particular case, as, indeed, in the most informed writings on the subject, no brief is presented either for or against belief. Lombroso, Sir William Crookes, Camille Flammarion, Sir Oliver Lodge, Prof. Hyslop, Prof. James, and the various other investigators of the subject neither affirm nor deny. They merely present the evidence that is in their hands. And so here you may believe in the psychic phenomenon or you may not—the play merely presents a demonstration.

The most amazing thing about the result is that no normally constituted person—that is to say, no person who is ordinarily sensitive to a tender emotional appeal—is likely for the time being to be unmoved. It is practically impossible to escape the illusion, to fail to rejoice at the return of Peter Grimm, to sympathize with his difficulty in "getting his message across," or be deeply touched at that last most exquisite and most moving minute, in which little Willem with the music of the circus band and the voice of the clown in his ear passes the border line and is carried away in the arms of good old Mynheer Grimm.

The management of this incident alone holds in itself about as impressive a moment as theatrical illusion can produce.

Mynheer Grimm having finally corrected the mistake which he made while in the flesh, has come to take is last farewell, and to carry back with him this little boy, who is thereby to escape the shames and sufferings of his unfortunate bringing into the world. It is thought this child, the sensitive instrument needed to establish a contact between the spiritual and the material world, that the results have been attained. And now after Peter Grimm has agreed to take him with him, and promised to wait until he has had his little nap, he adds that he shall have the sweetest dream that can come to a little boy. Previously in the early part of the play you have heard the music of the circus band, seen the gaily painted face of the clown at the window, heard little Willem's ringing childish laughter at the sound of the funny fellow's voice, and shared his disappointment at the death of Peter Grimm, which has prevented the visit to this wonderland for youth. And now, as the boy sinks back to sleep, comes the faint echo of the music the ghost of the tune, as it were, with the distant sound of the voice of the clown.

And again little Willem laughs, while, waiting, rejoicing, expectant, stands the vision of the kindly old Dutchman ready to accompany him on his journey to the pictured place of happiness and of peace. Then, as the music dies away, the child smiles, stretches out his arms, and is gathered up by Peter Grimm. The doors open, and as they are passing from view, enters the old Scotch physician, who has made a compact with Peter that whichever of the two dies first shall come back. He throws back the coverlet, and there lies Willem—dead. It would be a heart-rending situation were it not for the delicate suggestion of ultimate happiness previously conveyed. As it stands it is most affecting.

But from the first act with its quaint and beautifully detailed picture of the old Dutch horticulturist's home, where the death and return of Peter Grimm are vaguely foreshadowed, to the final incident of the spirit's ultimate visualization to the little boy who alone is sensitive enough to see it, the story is told with every possible realization of its large and impressive theme. For a hundred years the business has been in Mynheer Grimm's family. An old bachelor, he had not realized the real joy of life until the orphan child Kathrien was put into his arms, and now his hopes of the future maintenance of the business traditionof the family rest in her. For he has planned that she will marry his nephew Frederik, who, on his part, is willing enough. But Frederik has an illegitimate child, whose mother he has deserted. It is to right these wrongs, to undo his attempt to make Kathrien marry one man while she loves another and to stir his nephew's conscience that Peter Grimm comes back.

Along with this the second theme, complementing the other and allowing for a conveyence to the lay mind of some scientific suggestions, brings the incident of Peter's agreement with the investigating doctor, made half in jest, to return to earth if he should be the first to die.

It is in the second act that Peter returns in a series of scenes staged and handled like a succession of colossal Rembrandt chiaroscuros, the lights and shadings being always in the mood of the passage, and lending no little to the general illusion. Here, too, comes what might be termed the top note in Mr. Warfield's tremendously appealing, tender, and natural performance, where Peter Grimm, vainly trying to make himself understood, pounds with his fists upon a table from which no sound comes, and raises his voice in a cry of anguish, which, it may well be believed, has never been excelled. For the rest his playing is marked throughout by directness, simplicity, understanding, and the economy of means, which in combination spell the great art of acting.

The portrait he draws is that of a shrewd, kindly, if somewhat hard-headed old man, whose sentiment, beautiful enough in itself, is ultimately the means of bringing unhappiness to the one being whom he most wishes to make happy. It is a complete and interesting portrait, but its most remarkable quality, perhaps, is the sense of aloofness with which it is invested when Peter Grimm returns. Though the theatrical artifices of colored lights and gauzes are nowhere employed to create illusion one almost seems to be seeing him through a sort of haze, an effect due in large measure to the actor's capacity for dissimulation and to his ability to mentralize the incidents rather than project solely by the ordinary acting symbols. Always in such a play and with such a rôle the imaginative quality of the spectator himself must play its part in the result. But for any one too much opposed to surrendering himself Mr. Warfield's acting like the play itself will be most effective.

The management of the death incident is especially well handled. It comes just after Peter has ararnged for the betrothal of his niece. Her would-be lover is pursuing her around the room, the two dodging the piano, chairs, and bric-à-brac as the old man peacefully smiles and smokes his pipe. Then, suddenly, comes the realizing sense of death.

These are but incidents in a play which is filled with impressive moments and in which the transition from grave to gay is most adroitly, artistically, and beautifully accomplished.

Of the actors other than Mr. Warfield the general result is most dependent upon the little Willem, played with such amazing sensitiveness and appealing childishness by Percy Helton that he is fairly entitled to divide the honors. It would have seemed almost impossible that such sheer emotionalism could be developed in one apparently so young. Of the rest, the most completely satisfying was Miss Marie Reichardt, for whom, however, the requirements were less difficult than those of some of the others. But Joseph Brennan was excellent as the physician and Janet Dunbar was a lovely and appealing Katrien. John Sainpolis colored his rôle interestingly and Marie Bates, William Boag, Tony Bevan, and John F. Webber provided occasional touches of humor.

RANKINS AGAIN JOINT STARS.

Couple Reunited After Long Separation to Appear in "Peace on Earth."

Mr. and Mrs. McKee Rankin, reunited after a number of years of separation, are to return to the stage together soon, in a play called "Peace on Earth." Mr. and Mrs. Rankin began their career as costars about thirty years ago, and for many years they were popular all over the country. One of the best-known plays of their joint starring period was "The Danites." After their separation Mrs. Rankin retired from the professional stage. Mr. Rankin has appeared in productions and for several seasons was manager for Nance O'Neill.

"Peace on Earth," the play in which they expect to make their reappearance, is a drama by Er Lawshe. It was performed by a stock company in Los Angeles the past Summer. Mr. Rankin hopes to be able to put it on for some special matinees in New York before attempting to present it for a run.

NEW VIOLINIST HERE.

Zimbalist, Fellow Pupil of Mischa Elman, to Play an American Work.

Among those who arrived yesterday on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse was Afrem Zimbalist, the young Russian violinist. This 22-year-old pupil of Leopold Auer, also the teacher of Mischa Elman and Kathleen Parlow, visits America for the first time. He said that he would play a new concerto by an American composer John Paul.

"It isn't even finished yet, but it will be," he said. "He is at work at it now, and it is fine. I shall also play Bruch's new concertstuck."

Andrea de Segurola of the Metropolitan Opera Company said that he had sung at many concerts in Spanish cities. Alice Zeppilli of the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company returns, after a Summer spent at Rimini. She is to sing Suzanne in "The Marriage of Figaro" for the first time. W. W. Hinshaw, the American singer who married Miss Clyde in the Summer, also returned, accompanied by his bride. He has been studying new Wagner rôles during the Summer.

CIVIC CENTRE PLAN UP.

Plan to Put Court House Near Hall of Records Now Before Aldermen.

Alderman Joseph Schloss brought before the Aldermen yesterday a proposal to establish a civic centre by the purchase of the seven blocks between Lafayette and Centre Streets from the Hall of Records north to the new Police Headquarters. He suggested that on part of this site the new County Court House could be built, leaving ample room for every department of the city, including a new Health Department structure.

Such a plan, the Alderman argued, would save the city millions of dollars and would provide a Court House very convenient for lawyers and others using it. At the Alderman's request the resolution was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings, with instructions to hold public hearings with the special committee of the Board of Estimate.

The matter of the Court House site is now in the hands of the committee of the Board of Estimate, consisting of President Mitchel, Controller Prendergast, and President McAneny. They will take the matter up immediately on the conclusion of the hearings on the budget, which will last for several days yet. They intend to visit the sites which have been suggested and to consider them from the artistic as well as the practical point of view. Economical considerations will also play a large part in their decision, as the more cheaply the city can buy a satisfactory site the larger amount will it be able to spend on a really worthy building.

At a meeting of a committee representing a number of organizations interested it was suggested last week that the Court House be put below Canal Street and not too close to the Criminal Court Building, and it is understood that there is a considerable feeling in favor of the site immediately in rear of the Municipal Building, between Reade and Pearl Streets.

DENY UNION CONSRIRACY.

Carpenters Seek to Have Vacated Injunction in Conspiracy Suit.

Judges Lacombe, Ward, and Noyes, sitting yesterday as the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, heard argument in the appeal of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America and the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners and other defendants against the temporary injunction granted by Judge Coxe in the conspiracy suit brought by the Paine Lumber Company.

Judge Coxe ordered union carpenters in this city to work on non-union trim in violation of an agreement made by the manufacturers hereabout and the unions. Charles Maitland Beattie, counsel for the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, in asking to have the injunction vacated, declared that there was no such conspiracy as the complainants alleged, and that there was not even a strike to support the application for the injunction. The Anti-Boycott Association argued in support of the injunction. The decision was reserved.

'GYPSY LOVE' GIVEN WITH THE STAR ILL

Marguerita Sylva, Unable to Sing, Is Replaced After First Act by Miss Partington.

LEHAR'S SCORE IS UNEVEN

Both Romantic Opera and Opera Bouffe, but with Some Pretty Airs—Little Humor in Book.

GYPSY LOVE, a romantic opera in three acts, by Franz Lehar. Book and lyrics by Harry B. and Robert B. Smith. Globe Theatre.

Zorika	Marguerita Sylva
Niklas	Harry McDonough
Jozsi	Arthur Albro
Fedor	Carl Haydn
Ilma	Frances Demarest
Mikel	George L. Bickel
Lilia	Dorothy Webb
Kaspar	Robert G. Pitkin
Moschu	Albert Hart
Sacha	Lucie Mitchell
Magda	Josephine Harmon
Dimitri	Anton Hanschmann
Fancha	Kittie Saville
Henry	Robert Smith
Etta	Oralia Mars

Whether the audience which gathered at the Globe Theatre last evening liked the words or the music of "Gypsy Love" or not, they at least were treated to considerable excitement. As for Mme. Sylva, who was announced as the star of the operetta, she should have just cause for grievance.

It had been known that Mme. Sylva had been ill for several days. In fact the opening had been postponed from Monday to Tuesday night in order to give her a chance to recover. However, no announcement of the fact was made last night before the curtain rose.

Mme. Sylva as Zoricka makes her appearance almost immediately, and as soon as she had sung her first notes there was an audible buzz about the house. She seemed to have completely lost her voice. From that time on until the end of the act she spoke the words of her songs. She acted the part and spoke the words of the songs with rhythm and dramatic intention, but made no attempt to secure tone.

When the curtain finally went down there was a long wait before the second act commenced. Then Albert Hart appeared and briefly announced that, "owing to the indisposition of Mme. Sylva, Miss Partington would finish the opera." No explanations or apologies were made. Miss Partington did appear as Zoricka in the second act and was received with enough favor by the audience to lead Mr. Woods, the manager of the production, to come before the curtain and make a speech.

He announced that he was glad that the audience had received Miss Partington with such favor, that hereafter she and Mme. Sylva would alternate in the rôle, and that he hoped the audience would return and be pleased, whomever they found singing it.

Under the circumstances criticism of either the performance or the opera becomes difficult. It may be said, however, that Franz Lehar has written a score of strangely uneven quality. It almost seems as if he had concluded to pour the results of two operas into one. The first of these is a romantic light opera, with passionate gypsy music; the other is the lightest of operas bouffes, with the most banal of tunes. What will probably be the song hit of the piece, "The Melody of Love," is certainly the most banal of the lot.

It is a pity that whatever audiences "Gypsy Love" will draw will probably go to hear the opera bouffe parts, and they are quite likely to be bored with the serious ensembles, in which gypsy rhythms are accentuated by the cimbalon. On the other hand, the audiences which will like the Hungarian romanticism will most certainly find such tunes as "The Melody of Love" intolerable. It isn't likely that either of these audiences will care for the dialogue.

It may be mentioned in passing that changes have been made in the original score. "The Melody of Love," for instance, was originally a duet, and not allotted to Zoricka, who now sings it. There is no special reason why this should not be done, but if it is, the song should be used in the finale of the second act for Ilma to entice Jozsi with.

Several of the numbers in the second act were omitted entirely. There may have been reason in these omissions because they include some of the more serious music in the score. As the second act now stands it does not differ considerably from Broadway musical comedy, and as such it has many good moments. But it is very difficult for a person not familiar with it to follow the story.

The plot in itself is a good one. Zoricka on the eve of her marriage to Fedor becomes infatuated with a gypsy. In a dream she sees what would happen to her if she went away with him and she returns to Fedor. The second act is entirely occupied with the dream. Last night it almost seemed as if she had dreamed of Paris cafés. In fact until the end of the act there was scarcely any indication that Jozsi, the gypsy, had been unfaithful to Zoricka.

Several of the gypsy airs in the piece have real distinction and national flavor, notably Jozsi's "Gypsy Love Song," and the march song in the second act which the chorus sang with splendid effect. Ilma's waltz, "When I'm Waltzing With You" is very pretty indeed, and there is no doubt at all that the town is doomed to another waltz, so far as "The Melody of Love" is concerned. You may like it or not, but you can't forget it.

Mme. Sylva was a very beautiful figure in the first act in a wild gypsy costume, and doubtless she will give a good account of the part of Zoricka later on. When her understudy, Miss Partington, appeared on the stage in the second act she was received with applause. After "The Melody of Love" she was recalled many times, and at the end of the act she received an ovation.

Of the other members of the cast Albert Albro as the gypsy made the most pronounced impression. He was the figure to the life and he danced and sang with a Hungarian abandon which would have been very infectious under ordinary circumstances. Miss Dorothy Webb and Robert G. Pitkin had a very neat waltz number together, in which they were joined, on every repetition, by a constantly increasing band of children. Miss Frances Demarest made a good impression as Ilma when she did not sing.

The comedians were hard put to it to extract humor out of the book. There were whole stretches of time during which a dead silence settled over the audience. George L. Bickel, who has been known to be very funny, extracted one hearty laugh out of the audience with a pizzicato chord on his violin. Albert Hart and Harry McDonough probably did as well as they could under the circumstances.

The chorus, it should be mentioned, is comely, and can sing. The orchestra, under Louis F. Gottschalk, was fairly thrilling, especially if you happened to sit under the tubas. The band had been "augmented," and overflowed into the aisles, doing away entirely with one row of orchestra seats. The costumes were extremely pretty, especially those of the café scene in the second act.

However, Mme. Sylva's return to light opera was scarcely an auspicious occasion, but that cannot be considered either her fault or the opera's.

OUTER APPAREL MILLINERY FURS
FOR WOMEN, MISSES and JUNIORS

Really exclusive Fashions, sensibly priced—

It is the invariable comment of discerning women who visit this exclusively women's store that GIDDING Fashions possess a certain individuality of style and finish that places them far above the modes found even in the high class general stores—

This fact is not surprising, for our models are personally selected, here and in Paris, by members of the firm, and our garments—though made up ready-to-wear—are fashioned throughout by the best class of custom tailors.

The surprising fact, however, is that our prices are uniformly sensible—no higher than the "usual store" demands for usual wear-things, as comparison will readily prove. For example, we offer—

Smart Tailor-made Suits, $45 & $65

FRANCIS SHIFTED TO YALE'S LEFT END

Secret Practice Not Likely to be Ordered in Preparation for West Point Game.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 17.—Yale's football team to-day continued the surprising policy of playing in the open, although the West Point game is close at hand. The coaches have reversed policies of former teams in not closing the gates the entire week before the battle with the army and it is not certain that secret work will be ordered this week.

The return of the veteran Charley Paul to the scrimmaging brightened the coaches, but Head Coach Field said to-night that he did not intend to assign Paul to the skirmish line Saturday. He will be worked lightly in the daily scrimmage, but will not get into a schedule match for perhaps three weeks.

McDevitt, right guard, will also be out of the game at West Point in all probability. His knee was wrenched in the Virginia game Saturday, but the bruise proved more serious than was expected. Clarence Childs, the track Captain played a splendid game in his position to-day and Yale will lose little more than McDevitt's accurate drop kicking next Saturday by the veteran's absence.

An unexpected change was made to-day in removing Pete Francis from guard to left end. He has played more positions in important games than any other member of the squad. He won his letter two years ago at half back and played tackle last Fall until an injury shelved him. Material is scant for end. Francis was slow in practice to-day, but handled forward passes finely. He will probably be used in the left wing at West Point. Ketcham's bruised ankle, sustained Saturday, kept him from the scrimmaging to-day. There is a fair chance, however, that he will get back into the game by Saturday. Russell Cooney played the position to-day.

Line hammering and end striking for thirty minutes gave the 'Varsity a solitary touchdown. Three forward passes were attempted, Dick Merritt, who was playing in place of Capt. Howe, tossing them to Anderson, but only one was successful in ground gaining. Little punting was tried, but line splits were mingled with old fashioned plunging attacks. The 'Varsity carried the ball from midfield to the scrubs' twenty yard line before they fumbled and the second eleven kicked back to centre. The 'Varsity this time took the leather all the way, Ed Freeman carrying it over for the score.

Freeman's work was the most brilliant of any of the backs, his dashes around end rarely failing to cover the desired distance. The coaches included Howard Jones, Paul Veeder, Billy Bull, De Witt Cochrane, Ted Lilley, and Charley Chadwick.

TIGER TEAM WABBLY.

Princeton Scrubs Beat 'Varsity and Coaches Show Disgust.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 17.—Ideal football weather at Osborn Field this afternoon afforded Princeton's coach an opportunity to put the 'Varsity football men through a grueling scrimmage lasting forty-five minutes. The result was a 6—0 defeat for the first-string men, and a general attitude of disgust among the dozen or more coaches who are here. One of them said after the drill: "There will have to be 100 per cent. improvement or Princeton cannot hold the Navy on Saturday."

The Tiger line was not the only cause for discouragement to-day. The eleven as a whole lacked team work, the hitherto speedy backfield showing an appalling slowness in getting under way. Most of the play to-day was in 'Varsity territory, the first eleven losing ground continually when DeWitt of the first string and Penfield of the scrubs exchanged punts.

With the forward pass the odds were about even, and it was only toward the end of the scrimmage that DeWitt showed a semblance of form in getting this play off. Penfield had no success with it, and the only scrub gains were made outside the 'Varsity tackles.

The first eleven lost two chances to win this afternoon against the light scrubs, once when Baker missed a free placement kick from the forty-yard line, and again when Dunlap fumbled an attempted forward pass on the scrubs' goal line.

When the first eleven failed to gain with straight mass plays, Pendleton ordered some freak formations, but it was pathetic to watch the losses which resulted from these attempts.

Harold Short, "Sport" Armstrong, and Trenchard were the new coaches here today. They will remain until the end of the week.

CORNELL TEAM SPLIT UP.

'Varsity, Divided Into Reds and Blues, Battles on Gridiron.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 17.—The 'Varsity squad at Cornell was split up this afternoon, and when the Red and Blue teams, as the 'Varsity and scrubs have been known all year, lined up for an hour's scrimmage it was observed that a good many so-called 'Varsity men wore blue uniforms. For instance, quarter back Eddie Butler, fullback Underhill, Munns, the right guard; Fritz, one of the ends; Collins and McCormick, the heavy half of the backs, all played with the blue team. They speedily showed that they didn't consider it a disgrace by getting the better of the 'Varsity in scoring twice to the first team's once. At that the fight was nearly even and both teams made good-sized gains.

In the 'Varsity line-up, or rather the Red team's line-up, were Eyrich and Stimson, ends; Krogstad and Champaign, tackles; Delano and Weidenthal, guards; Whyte, centre; Smith, quarter back; O'Connor and Hawkins, half backs, and Gass, full back. O'Connor played one of the best games of the season, carrying the ball for many gains and giving a fine exhibition of footwork and dodging. Stimson at right end on the 'Varsity worked well for a new man, and, while he does not know much about the fine points, made his weight count. It is not improbable that he will get the place, as Guyer was not brought out until late in the afternoon. Delano, the old 'Varsity man, got his first trial at 'Varsity work in ten days.

The 'Varsity scored a touchdown following a series of line plays and end runs by O'Connor. Then the scrubs had their inning and after Collins had made several good gains Butler circled right end for a touchdown, and later Fritz took an on-side kick 50 yards for a touchdown.

Olcott Drives Men Hard.

One of the hardest scrimmages of the season was held yesterday afternoon by the 'Varsity and scrubs of New York University. For thirty-five minutes the men were driven without a letup and the coaches were highly pleased with the results of the practice. The 'Varsity was greatly weakened by the absence of the guards Henneberger and Mackay and Ellife at half back. As a result the scrubs scored a touchdown in the first ten minutes of play. Huntley starred at quarter back for the second team and found it easy to encircle the 'Varsity ends for long runs.

Torrence, an All-New England centre, has come out for that position and yesterday he was a tower of strength on the second team. It is very probable that he will be put in Bristol's place and the latter moved to the second string. Andrade is now at left tackle in place of Thompson, who has left college, and his splendid work in practice assures him of that position. The 'Varsity line-up was: Left end, Dutcher; left tackle, Andrade; left guard, Cornell; centre, Torrence and Bristol; right guard, [illegible]; right tackle, Vesely; right end, Crawford; quarter back, Nixon; left half back, Moore; right half back, Comfort; full back, [illegible].

PLAY FOOTBALL IN RAIN.

Harvard 'Varsity Drills with Freshmen as Sturdy Opponents.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 17.—Harvard practised to-day under poor football conditions of field and weather, but to have the players get the experience of handling a slippery ball was welcomed by the coaches. Usually when it has rained the regulars and substitutes have held their signal drill in the baseball cage, but to-day they were out on the field until dark. They were kept in the blackboard room longer than usual, but once on the field there was a brisk scrimmage against the Freshmen team, an eleven that comprises some splendid players, who next Fall will be heard from on the 'Varsity team. Against the Freshmen the 'Varsity was able to score only one touchdown, this on around the end run by Bud Smith, who skirted the 'Varsity line from his position and turned the Freshmen right flank for 20 yards.

The Freshmen once forced the 'Varsity back to its 10-yard line on a kick which followed a 25-yard run by Brickley, who interpreted a forward pass made by Potter and intended for Smith, this giving the ball to the Freshmen midfield. Potter then made a 50-yard punt while standing on his own goal line, and the ball was recovered by Gardiner on a fumble.

Soon after this scrimmage ended as Wigglesworth, a young brother of the 'Varsity quarter back who broke his leg in the Holy Cross game, was hurt, and there was no one on hand to take his place on the Freshmen line.

Harvard's scare that Capt. Fisher was badly hurt was dispelled to-day. Fisher bandaged his knee and remained out of the line-up to-day as a precaution. But he is all right and will be in the play to-morrow.

Stow was at right guard to-day. Fisher in his ten years of football never has been hurt. In fact he has finished every game in which he ever started. The Harvard Captain is on the still hunt for material for his rush line and is trying to get out Goodale, a Freshman lineman last year who has been rowing with the 'Varsity squad this Fall. Coach Wray of the crew is willing that Goodale should play football.

To-morrow Harvard's coaching staff will be joined by Harry Kersburg, who helped coach the line two years ago and who was one of the best guards Harvard has had in recent years. Kersburg will remain at Cambridge two weeks.

WEST POINT LINE STRONG.

Scrubs Unable to Penetrate Defense of Cadets' First Team.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 17.—In a long football scrimmage to-day, lasting until dark, the second string men held the 'Varsity to a no score game. The defense of the first team was fine. The scrubs could do nothing with it, and resorted to punting. The first team was unable to gain consistently, and the nearest they approached the scrubs' goal was thirty-five yards, where Keyes failed in a drop kick. He also tried from the forty-yard line, but missed by only half a foot.

Gillespie was not in at end to-day, and Spaulding played the position. Purnell was out, but did not get into the game. For the short time he was in the practice, Dean made several nice end runs. The scrubs' ends, Brake and Larbee, were fast, and the 'Varsity backs had very little chance to distinguish themselves in running back punts.

Benedict was to-day taken from the scrubs and sent in on the 'Varsity as half back. He has been playing such a strong line-hitting game that the shift looked like a wise one. Several times he plunged through and clear of the scrubs' line, and was stopped by the scrubs' secondary defense. Hobbs played a star defensive game for the scrubs, where he was shifted to-day.

Tie Game at City College.

Yesterday, at Jasper Oval, another tie occurred between the Freshman and Junior baseball teams in the Fall interclass series of City College after five innings of play. The Juniors outlucked the Freshmen, gaining their only run through a base on balls in the fifth. Both sides secured five hits, but the Juniors worked Wright for five passes, while the Freshies only waited for two. The Freshmen had a one-run lead, which looked as big as a mountain until the fifth. At this point Soons worked Wright for a pass and went to second on Horowitz's out. Then Hyman, the Freshman's best pitcher, went into the box, but was not able to put three men out before Soons could score on a sacrifice. It looked as if Cohen of the Freshmen was going to duplicate the feat of Soons. He was the second man up, and after fouling about ten balls, walked. He stole second and third. As he was on the bag another man struck out, and he decided to dash for home. With two strikes on the next man he sprinted in with the throw, but was nipped at the plate. The game was called in the sixth on account of darkness. The score:

Indians All in Good Form.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Oct. 17.—Coach Glenn Warner worked his Indian football warriors through a short practice to-day in preparation for the University of Pennsylvania game on Saturday, which he expects to be a stiff contest. Fortunately the Indians are now in the best physical condition, which is unusual at this time of the year at Carlisle. After a round of elementary training, in which the Indian coach made satisfactory headway with his tacklers and gave them a thorough drill at catching and running down under punts, a signal line-up was formed, with the object of further developing Carlisle's defense. The afternoon's work closed with a stiff scrimmage between the third string men and the substitutes, most of the 'Varsity players being excused, as there was no reason for them to risk injury in the intense scrimmage contest.

Freshmen in Last Place.

In a loosely played game on South Field yesterday the Columbia sophomore baseball team defeated the freshman nine by the score of 11 to 3. The interest in the game was due to the fact that this is one of the annual freshman-sophomore contests and the class rivalry was keen, although as a result of the game the losing team is left in solitary possession of last place in the inter-class race for the Eddie Collins medals. Charley Logan, from Barnard School, played a star game for the freshmen, doing good work in the box, but receiving poor support from his team mates. His splendid hit into left field for a home run in the fifth inning made the sophomores a trifle nervous, but the youngsters did not prove very formidable after that lucky stroke. Score by innings:

							R.	H.	E.

Batteries—O'Neale and Callahan; Logan, Lee, and Grahame. Umpire—Mr. Fisher.

Browns Win St. Louis Honors.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 17.—By defeating the local National League team in the first game of a double-header to-day, 11 to 7, the Americans won the championship, 5 games to 1. The losing team tried out two pitchers. The clubs played a second game to complete the scheduled series advertised, this one going to the Nationals, 5 to 1. In the Spring anteseason series the Nationals won seven straight games.

Cubs and White Sox Idle Again.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Wet grounds caused a postponement of the fourth game in the city championship series between the Chicago American and National League teams to-day. The game, which also was postponed yesterday because of rain, will be played to-morrow.

GLIDDEN TOUR CARS DITCHED IN VIRGINIA

Gov. Hoke Smith in Auto Which Strikes Telegraph Pole Along Bad Roads.

Special to The New York Times.

ROANOKE, Va., Oct. 17.—The Glidden tourists and their automobiles gave good-bye to good roads when they left Staunton this morning. Evidently there is no such thing any more, especially going in this direction, for reports from all sources say that the worst is yet to come, and on this account the tour may lie up for a day at least. Old dyed-in-the-wool tourists say they never knew a run as hazardous as that part of to-day's jaunt from Natural Bridge to this city. It started to rain during the control at Natural Bridge, and many misgivings were expressed at Referee oalker's decision on the schedule which was found to be entirely too fast for the kind of going in the thirty-eight-mile stretch from Natural Bridge to this city, and so it proved to be.

The downpour was like the cloudbursts they have in the tropics. Tourists were drenched to the skin, and in some of the closed-body cars the water ran out like through a ship's scuppers when she ships a sea. The going was bad from beginning to end. In some places in the wild mountain roads ruts banaked with sticky yellow mud were encountered fully two feet deep. Two years ago the general run of cars would never have attempted to go over the road, much less succeed in plowing through such a stretch for the most part on schedule time, or near it.

Old tourists like Charles Glidden, the donor of the trophy for the winner of the tuor, said that in all his years of experience he never saw as bad a stretch of road for a scheduled run as the 38-mile stretch from here to Natural Bridge. While most of the cars came through only a few arrived with perfect scores for the day. Seven cars at 10 o'clock to-night were still missing and two of them are ditched. No one has been reported as hurt. These missing cars are all Southern entrants. Besides the very bad roads the principal obstacle was the swollen streams, all of which had to be forded, the dater being so deep in some places that the magnetos were put out of business, and it is this business of swollen streams that is holding back the tour, as it is not at all likely that to-morrow's schedule will be carried out until the next day at least.

Gov. Hoke Smith of Georgia was forced to leave his own car soon after it left Natural Bridge, and he was invited to take a seat in one of the Maxwell entrants. This car skidded off the road about 12 miles above here and ran into a telegraph pole. Part of the body was injured, but the car was able to continue and arrived here late to-night. The car of President Hooper of the American Automobile Association was ditched 15 miles above here with Mrs. Hooper, Mrs. Walker, wife of the referee of the run, and Mrs. Ronald Ranson, daughter of Gov. Smith. The ladies were compelled to take shelter in a small farm house nearby, and this morning a relief car went out and brought them in. The Hooper car limped in several hours later not damaged beyond recall.

The run was shy of Governors to-day, only the original Chief Executive, Gov. Smith, daring the hazardous run. Gov. Mann of Virginia was to have joined the run at Lexington, but affairs of State prevented his coming. He is probably thanking said affairs of State to-night.

The two-day controls, Lexington and Natural Bridge, were about the two most interesting on the trip so far. The cars arrived at Lexington about 11 o'clock this morning, and filed into the grounds of the Virginia Military Institute, which adjoins the grounds of Washington and Lee University, in the chapel of which Gen. Lee is buried. The head of the procession was met by Harry St. George Tucker, the commandant of the institute, and a number of municipal officials. The cadets were turned out in force for a dress parade, and after a short inspection of the institution the run started on its way to Natural Bridge.

GYMKHANA AUTO CONTESTS.

Electric Machines to be Put Through Stunts on Ten-Lap Track.

The first indoor gymkhana contests for electric automobiles ever held in this country will take place on Friday night at the Grand Central Palace where the electrical exposition is now being held. This novel event will be held on the third floor of the building over an oblong course one-tenth of a mile long. A list of events has been arranged by the Electric Automobile Dealers Association under whose auspices the affair is to be held. Entries have been received from the Baker Motor Vehicle Company, the Rauch & Lang Carriage Co., and the Anderson Electric Carriage Company.

Among the events will be a potato race, a barrel event, and a "London Bridge" contest. In the potato race the driver of the car must slow down his machine and pick potatos from a number of tables placed along the course. The driver, who successfully gathers the potatoes in the quickest time without disturbing the tables, will be declared the winner.

The "London Bridge" event will try the drivers' skill in dodging the pillars of the big room. There are a number of other events on the programme which, aside from the amusement in them, have for the main object the bringing out of the many features found in the electric automobile. Among these features are quick stopping, ease of control, cleanliness, and non-vibration. Harvey Robinson of the New York Edison Company will be the referee of the contests.

Daly's Duplicate Balkline.

The second game of the duplicate balk line billiard tournament was played last evening at Maurice Daly's parlors, Forty-ninth Street and Broadway. It was very interesting from the standpoint of balkline play. The attempt shows it was a display of the technique of the game, and that amateurs have much to learn about the correct system of the game. Messrs. Gershel and Conway, the two experts who played the opening game, were a little confused as to the best method of conducting their play. They made quite a few mistakes in their selections of positions, and at times placed the balls in the poorest of places for successful runs, but, taking into consideration the fact of their not having sufficient experience at this style of play, they did remarkably well, especially Mr. Gershel, who managed to make a run of 55 and an average of 15, less one point. This was going fairly well for his initial effort, and before the tournament is over there is no doubt but he will show much superior play. Mr. Conway, who is strictly an open player, did not show his regular form and did not seem able to grasp the situations and utilize them to advantage, but later, with a little more experience, there is no doubt but that he will show vast improvement. Below will be found the score:

	Points.	High Run.	Average.

SMITH AND McMAHON DRAW.

Pittsburgher Starts Out Well, but Westchester Fighter Finishes Strong at Empire A. C.

Jim Smith, the Westchester farmer, and Tom McMahon, known as Pittsburgh's "Bear-cat," went over the ten-round route at the Empire Athletic Club last night and finished up with honors even. In the early part of the bout McMahon forced the fighting and gained a good lead over his opponent, but in the closing rounds Smith showed up strongly enough to even the score. In the second round McMahon floored Smith with a terrific right swing to the jaw, and the Westchester boy took the full count. He managed to save himself until the end of the round by backing away or clinching, and after the one-minute rest he was considerably refreshed.

McMahon's right hand carries as hard a punch as any light heavyweight in the ring, but he was not able to do much effective work with it. He scored the one clean knockdown with his right, and on two later occasions he landed the right with sufficient force on Smith's jaw to shake the latter from head to foot. In the fourth round Smith went down twice, but neither was a clean knockdown. The first was due to slipping and the other to tripping over McMahon's foot.

The bout showed nothing of a sensational nature, but was marked by plenty of action from start to finish. The pair never ceased to exchange punches, and in only two rounds did either have a very great lead over his opponent, but for the most part these punches were wild. They landed everywhere except where they were meant to land, and dozens of blows hard enough to cause a knockout were wasted. From first to last it was a battle of left swings. Right-hand wallops came so seldom that they were lost sight of in the shower of left swings, jabs, and hooks.

McMahon started strongly in the first round and landed hard swings with his left hand to Smith's head and stomach, but in the latter part of the round Smith came back strongly enough to even the matters. In the second, McMahon had all the better of the fighting, once flooring Smith for the full count. McMahon also gained the honors in the third and fourth, although Smith did much better work than in the second. In the fifth, honors were about even and Smith gained the sixth with plenty to spare. Smith also won the seventh. The eighth was even and McMahon had the better of the last two rounds, winning each by a shade.

POOR BOUT AT BROWN'S.

Mantell and "Montana Dan" Sullivan in a Hugging Match.

Frank Mantell of Pawtucket, R. I., and "Montana Dan" Sullivan, middleweights, fought through ten rounds in the star bout at Brown's Gymnasium last night with little interest for the crowd. A draw was all that could be made of the result.

It was a case of two men of the same calibre being matched and neither being able to successfully get to the other, and the greater part of the time was devoted to clinching and mauling.

The contest from start to finish was marked by unlimited holding by both men in each round, and only a few real hard blows were landed. Long before the final session the crowd became tired of the uninteresting tactics of both contestants and began to leave the hall during the eighth and ninth rounds.

Both men fought whatw as probably their best, but both being of about the same type of boxer neither could make an impression on the other, and at the close of the bout they were both hugging each other in the centre of the ring.

Sullivan did the most forcing and carried most of the work to Mantell, but only scored a few telling blows. The only thing that marked the show was the presence of Commissioner Frank S. O'Neil of the State Athletic Commission, who was an interested spectator and remained until the end of the bout.

In the semi-final scheduled for six rounds Ray Simons was disqualified for hitting his opponent, George Weiner, while the latter was won in the third round.

PAL MOORE WINS BOUT.

Battling Nelson Takes Punishment, but is Outpointed.

BOSTON, Oct. 17.—Clever boxing gave Pal Moore of Philadelphia the decision over Battling Nelson, former lightweight champion of the world, in a twelve-round bout at the Armory Athletic Association to-night.

Moore landed blows on the former champion on his body and head at will, but with little effect. Nelson devoted his time to infighting almost entirely. His body blows were terrific, and at times winded his opponent.

White and Driscoll Draw.

Gotch Throws Pietro Twice.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Oct. 17.—Frank Gotch, world's champion wrestler, threw Emilio Pietro, the Canadian heavyweight wrestler, twice in a little more than twenty minutes here last night. The first fall came in fifteen minutes and twenty seconds; the second in five minutes nineteen seconds. Yousiff Mahmout failed to throw Jesse Reimer of Des Moines in a thirty-minute handicap match.

NOTES OF THE BOXERS.

Jack Goodney and Billy Sherman will be the principals in the star attraction to-night at the Longacre A. A. Both boys have been training faithfully for this bout, as each has been promised battles with many of the local stars in the event of a win. Several preliminaries and a semi-final will lead up to the main affair.

Walter Little, the clever Chicago lightweight, will make his first appearance here at the Sharkey Club to-night. He will box Bert Keyes, the local lightweight, in a ten-round contest, which will be the star feature of the card. Little is regarded as a topnotcher in the West and he has fought all the best boys. The bout promises to be a good one. "Battling" Marshall and Joe Farmer will clash in the six-round semi-final, and there will be four other bouts and a wrestling contest.

Tommy Houck, the fast little featherweight of Philadelphia, who defeated Ty Cobb last Friday night, was matched yesterday to box Kid Ghetto in the star bout at the Olympic Club on Saturday night. In the semi-final the "Celery Cyclone" and "Young" Godfrey, who fought a sensational bout at Billy Madden's heavyweight tournament a year ago, have been rematched for six rounds.

Arnst and Durnan May Row.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 17.—Richard Arnst of New Zealand, the world's champion sculler, who is visiting here, stated to-day that he had cabled "Eddie" Hanlan Durnan, the Canadian sculler, who is anxious to meet him, agreeing under certain conditions to row at Toronto. If a favorable reply was received, Arnst said that he would go to Toronto.

MISS BISHOP PLAYS BEST ON GOLF LINKS

Brooklawn Girl Covers Montclair Club's Course in 87 Strokes.

A medal play handicap in which the same scores counted against bogey and a putting competition proved the attraction for women on the links of the Montclair Golf Club yesterday. One of the largest fields of the season took part, but several of the starters withdrew.

Miss Georgianna M. Bishop, the Brooklawn player, who has held both the National and metropolitan titles, had matters all her own way, going round in 87. Even though she played from scratch, Miss Bishop was low for both net and gross.

The same score also left her only 3 down in the bogey competition, but as the conditions stipulated that a person could not win more than one prize, the Bridgeport player had to make a choice. She selected the gross. This left Miss Eleanor Whitney of Morris County winner of the net prize, with 97, 7—90, while Mrs. J. S. Irving of Englewood won the bogey contest, finishing 6 down.

Later in the day the woman competed in a putting contest for two prizes. After all had made the double circuit of the putting course it was found that Mrs. A. C. Aborn and Mrs. J. A. Philbrick had tied at 35. On the play-off Mrs. Aborn won.

The scores in the handicap were as follows:

	Gross.	Handicap.	Net.
Miss E. Whitney, Morris County	97	7	90
Mrs. J. S. Irving, Englewood	99	8	91

MISS PHIPPS DEFEATED.

Dorothy Campbell Eliminates Boston Player from Huntingdon Tourney.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Oct. 17.—Miss Anita Phipps of Springfield Country Club, Boston, who won the gold medal in yesterday's qualifying round in the first annual invitation golf tournament for the Beathellyn Cup, presented by Mrs. Caleb F. Fox, on the links of the Huntingdon Valley Country Club at Noble, with the splendid score of 88, was to-day eliminated as a contestant for the trophy by Miss Dorothy Campbell of the Hamilton Golf Club of Ontario, Canada, the British Canadian and former American champion, in the first round of match play of the first sixteen. Both golfers put up a splendid exhibition despite the soggy condition of the course.

As expected, Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow, the Merion expert, romped away with the match between herself and Mrs. Hirsh of Philmont, defeating the latter, 8 up and 7 to play. Mrs. Barlow played good golf, going out in 44. Against this playing her less experienced opponent had not the slightest chance to win. Mrs. Caleb F. Fox of the home club eliminated Miss S. Wells of Brookline, 4 up and 3 to play.

The longest drawn-out match of the day was that between Miss Chandler of the home club and Mrs. Herald of Philmont. Miss Chandler finally won, after an extra hole had been played, by 1 up in nineteen holes. This match was in the first round of the second sixteen for the President's Cup. The summaries:

First Sixteen.—First Round—Miss D. Campbell, Hamilton, defeated Miss Phipps, Boston, 2 up and 1 to play; Miss Nesbit, Toronto, canada, defeated Miss Phelps, Boston, 3 up and 1 to play; Miss F. C. Griscom, Merion, defeated Miss Helmer, Midlothian Golf Club, 4 up and 1 to play; Mrs. R. H. Barlow, Merion, defeated Mrs. Hirsh, Philmont, 8 up and 7 to play; Miss M. Neely, Merion, defeated Miss Maule, Merion, 7 up and 6 to play; Mrs. Vanderbeck, Philadelphia Cricket Club, defeated Mrs. McCommon, Huntingdon Valley C. C., 4 up and 3 to play; Miss F. Harvey, Hamilton, defeated Miss Noblit, Wilmington, 1 up; Mrs. C. F. Fox, Huntingdon Valley C. C., defeated Miss Wells, Brookline, 4 up and 2 to play.

Second Sixteen.—First Round—Mrs. Billstein, Bala, defeated Mrs. F. H. Elder, Whitemarsh, 1 up; Miss Richardson, Philadelphia C. C., defeated Mrs. M. C. Work, Huntingdon Valley C. C., 6 up and 4 to play; Miss E. G. Hood, Philadelphia C. C., won from Mrs. E. H. Fitler by default; Miss Portor, Brookline, defeated Mrs. F. C. Price, Huntingdon Valley C. C., 9 up and 8 to play; Miss Caverly, Philadelphia C. C., defeated Mrs. Frishmuth, Philadelphia C. C., 2 up and 1 to play; Miss Chandler, Huntingdon Valley C. C., defeated Mrs. Hero, Philmont, 1 up, 19 holes; Miss G. Davis, Philadelphia C. C., defeated Mrs. W. H. Johnson, 9 up and 7 to play; Miss A. Davis, Philadelphia C. C., defeated Mrs. A. H. Harris, St. David's, 7 up and 6 to play.

Third Sixteen.—First Round—Mrs. G. O. Suddards, St. David's, defeated Mrs. A. K. Liveright, Philmont, 5 up and 3 to play; Mrs. Haines, West Chester, defeated Mrs. Eno, Woodbury, 3 up and 1 to play; Mrs. Wolf, Philmont, defeated Mrs. Roberson, Woodbury, 5 up and 3 to play; Mrs. Akroyd, Merchantville, defeated Mrs. E. R. Miller, Huntingdon Valley C. C., 2 up; Mrs. Bartholomew, Philadelphia C. C., won from Mrs. L. C. Baker, Jr., Bala, by default; Mrs. W. S. Johnson, St. David's, defeated Miss Coryell, Philadelphia C. C., 2 up; Mrs. Pinkerton, Philadelphia C. C., defeated Mrs. Dixon, Spring Haven, 2 up and 2 to play; Miss Stelwagon, Merchantville, defeated Mrs. A. Lowrey, Camden, 3 up and 2 to play.

Matty to Hunt in Adirondacks.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Christy Mathewson, the star pitcher of the New York National League team, is planning to take a hunting trip next week in the vicinity of Raquette Falls, in the Adirondack Mountains. E. A. Sterling of Philadelphia, Forester of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, has advised the State Conservation Commission that Mathewson is to accompany him on a hunting trip, in a letter inquiring about the procedure necessary to secure hunting licenses in this State. The information was furnished by State Superintendent of Forests Pettis.

Atherton Wins with Cue.

In the continuation of the amateur 18.2 balk line billiard tournament now in progress at John Doyle's Forty-second Street Billiard Academy, Charles Atherton easily defeated Dr. Hammil last night by the score of 100 to 44. The winner of the contest made the high run of 34 and an average of 10. The tournament will be continued this evening, when N. Mayo will oppose G. Avery.

Pennant A. C. Road Run.

The Pennant Athletic Club will celebrate next Sunday as "Team Day," and a special invitation has been extended to all clubs in the Metropolitan district to enter the pick of their cross-country men, as it is expected that the course record of 20:14 will be broken by one of the many competitors.

AUTO TRADE NOTES.

That more tires are ruined by under-inflation than from any other cause, is a statement by the B. R. Goodrich Company. The flat out-of-shape appearance tells plainly the story of misuse. The wavy condition of the tread is due to its loosening from this cause. Few people realize how great a strain they subject their tires to by riding them too soft. In rounding a corner with a heavy car on soft tires the misuse is often harder than several hundred miles of careful driving. Rim-cutting is commonly caused by this neglect. There is little danger of over-inflation of a tire unless an air bottle is used. A strict adherence to the inflation table will avoid trouble with soft tires. In the absence of such a table, a good rule is to maintain sufficient pressure to prevent the tire from bulging or showing an depression under the weight of the car without passengers. Temperature or weather conditions need not be taken into consideration in regard to inflation.

Records continue to fall to the Goodyear Blue Streak tires. Joe Wolter broke the Denver track record on Oct. 8, winning from Armstrong, in 6:57 3-5. Balke, on an Excelsior, captured the 5-mile event at Birmingham, Ala., and Hasha, on an Indian, easily captured the 5-mile event in the same city. At the Decatur, Ill. mortorcycle races on Oct. 8, Goodyear Blue Streaks won ten firsts, four seconds in twelve events, and Baker, on an Indian, with Blue Streaks, lowered three track records as follows: 1 mile in 54 2-5 seconds, 5 miles in 4:55, 10 miles in 10:02.

When William H. Stewart, Jr., Vice President of the Stewart Automobile Company of New York, agents for the Mais Motor Truck was asked why a left hand drive was used on their truck, he stated that, "they use a left hand drive because it adds efficiency. When the driver is manning his powerful craft loaded with tons of freight through a congested street of traffic, he needs a good view of the street to the rear as well as in front. The left hand drive affords this, whereas, if he was sitting on the right hand side of a loaded truck, he could not see approaching vehicles. Then too, when the driver pulls up to a shipping platform, or a door, with the left hand drive he can have immediate access. Because traffic rules are such that the driver must stand with the right hand side of the truck next to the platform. If the control is on the right hand side, the driver must dismount from the left, walk around the truck and climb to the platform. This loss of time during a year is serious."

According to a special news bulletin received by R. M. Owen & Co., 1,759 Broadway, yesterday, giving the fuller details of the recent Cleveland-Wheeling-Columbus three-day reliability run, this contest proved much more strenuous than previously reported. This was due to the twenty hours heavy downpour of rain on the last two days of the contest, making many of the steep, rough, and dangerous clay hills next to impassable, and it was with the greatest difficulty that the hardiest contestants made the last two legs of the run on schedule time. The route included Cleveland, Youngstown, Canton, Wheling, Zanesville, Newark, Columbus, Marion, Mansfield, and Oberlin, covering 533 miles in three days, two of which were very rainy.

M. J. Hammers, Treasurer and General Manager of the Abbott Motor Company, and B. C. Spitzley, Assistant General Manager, are here from Detroit for a visit to the New York Office. Mr. Hammers expresses himself as more than satisfied with the work done here. That in New York, admittedly the most critical and difficult market in America, the Abbott-Detroit should in the short space of a year win place among the acknowledged leaders, is a feat never before achieved in automobile annals, in Mr. Hammers's opinion.

"Hm"—says a customer—"so and so sells an overcoat for $25 as good as yours at $30."

Yet five minutes later another customer is overheard to say—"so and so's overcoat isn't half as good as yours."

Both are probably wrong.

But there's a way to find out.

Come to any one of our stores.

Pick out the coat you like best.

Pay for it or charge it.

Take it anywhere you like—compare it cloth for cloth, lining for lining, button for button, and if it isn't better than any coat you find for the money elsewhere—bring it back and get your money.

That's the only fair comparison.

P. S.—Our Merchandise Man just read this advertisement and thought we ought to add that our Fall overcoats fit surprisin' well. Most men slip 'em on and walk right out with them.

POLITICS AND FINANCE.

Mr. Hill was not premature in his warning to bankers that if they wanted reform of the currency system they must interest themselves in it, and not allow it to become a matter of politics. Hardly had this been printed before that eminent progressive, Gov. Folk of Missouri, suggested a Department of Finance in the Treasury charged with power to issue currency and control the money of the country. Apparently Gov. Folk had not noticed anything in our experience indicating that the Treasury already has too much to do with business affairs, which need relief from Treasury interference rather than enlargement of it. In boom times the Treasury's collections of cash embarrass the users of currency, and in times of trade depression the Treasury's disbursements cause an abnormal and undesirable surplus of cash. There never was any favorable response to Secretary Shaw's suggestion that if he had a hundred millions of free cash in the Treasury he could regulate the supply of funds for the world as well as for the United States.

At the other extreme is the idea of the American Bankers' Association that the reform of the currency is a matter concerning the banks especially, and that the control of the country's finance ought to be left to the bankers and their representatives without Government intervention. This is as far from sound teaching as the political idea. Bankers are not eligible for positions of responsibility in the Bank of England because the Bank exists for the accommodation of merchants, under the supervision of the Government. In this country also banks exist for business and not business for banks. It is no disparagement of American bankers to say that business men would not like to see themselves delivered over to the unrestrained care of any aggregation of bankers, however high might be their opinion of them individually.

Prof. Seligman in his remarks before the Currency Commission as reported yesterday emphasized the manner in which the proposed plan steers between these two extremes. Its scope is all business, not merely the banking business. The reorganization is not for the sake of the banks but for the sake of the banks' customers. Commercial credits have become a larger question than even the country's currency. It is easier to supply and regulate currency than to keep credit ample, sound, and not excessive. Even the banks and their customers together are not the sole parties in interest. There is the general public, whose relations with the banks are indirect, and whose sufferings for no fault of their own are sometimes more severe than those whose excesses may have caused the trouble. Therefore while political or rather partisan interference with financial topics is undesirable, Governmental intervention in behalf of unrepresented third parties is desirable. But the Government should no more be supreme than the banks. Wall Street control and Washington control are about equally undesirable. The middle of the roadway is better, and the Aldrich idea—whether or not under his name and whether or not exactly according to his tentative suggestions—pleases more than it offends. The American Bankers' Association has its own ideas and amendments, but in its behalf Secretary Farnsworth at the hearing gave figures showing a large predominance in its favor. The Association includes 12,200 banks among the country's total 28,387, and it has correspondence with 46 State bank associations. Of these associations 26 have indorsed the Aldrich plan, and 20 have taken no action. It is a good thing that the bankers have so favorable a view.

It is also a good thing that the Government, not a political party, should have some share in the organization which will at some point touch the interest of every citizen. President Taft has rightly said that no topic before the people is of more importance to them.

AN UPTORN TOWN.

The state of upheaval in important streets of Manhattan seems to grow worse instead of better. With the homecoming of Summer travelers, and the increase of the number of motor cars and carriages on Fifth Avenue, the problems of traffic management have grown more bewildering. The work of widening Fifth Avenue between Forty-seventh Street and the Plaza, requiring the transformation of the fronts of many buildings, and a tearing up of the sidewalk on both sides of the avenue, would be nuisance enough. But the roadway is uptorn, too, and many of the contiguous side streets are practically impassable.

It would be more bearable if we could hope for a time when the work would be finished, and all the impediments to street traffic removed. But it seems that we can never have such a time on this island. Pavements are neglected until they are not only unsightly and annoying, but positively dangerous; and then the work of repaving begins all at once, and blocks travel for a mile or two. This kind of work should be done section by section, with some regard for the safety and comfort of the public, which seem to be the last things the contractors and the officials responsible for them ever think of. What with the widening of Thirty-fourth and Forty-second Streets, delayed for many months, and then started simultaneously, the repairing of Madison Avenue at the same time that Fifth Avenue is torn up, and the upheavals in many important crosstown streets, like Seventy-second, Manhattan is in a forlorn condition this Fall, and little improvement can be expected before the snow falls.

THE "LOGICAL" CANDIDATE.

The naming of Senator La Follette as the logical candidate for President by the conference of Progressives in Chicago will not scare the friends of President Taft out of their boots or out of their sleep. Some 200 delegates attended the conference, most of them from nearby States, "progressive" States, like Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Nebraska. It was to be expected that the flower and chivalry of the Progressives would attend, but the most prominent names appear upon the absent list. Senator Cummins had to go to the Isthmus, or somewhere; he got away in time. Senator Jonathan Bourne probably had a birthday party; he was not there. Senator Clapp and Senator Coe Crawford were the only Progressive Senators in attendance. Garfield was there, of course. Mr. Gifford Pinchot ought to have been there, and probably ardently desired to be there, but he appears to have been detained on his return trip from Alaska. There were others present, however, who were near and dear to the last Administration, but whose services the present Administration has dispensed with. We are sorry to say that it was not, in point of membership, a very imposing meeting.

The platform or declaration of principles is hardly broad enough to support a new party, unless it be a party rigidly restricted in membership. The principles proclaimed, on analysis, are reducible to one—that we want to get hold of the Presidency. The resolutions frankly declare that "the Progressive movement is a struggle to wrest the control of the Government in the Nation and States from the representatives of special privilege." That nutshell holds the whole case. Inasmuch as President Taft's recent speeches have sent repeated shivers down the backbone of special privilege, the notion that he is the representative of privilege or that his Administration is controlled by privilege would have excited the hilarity of a body of men less serious and glum than the Progressives.

The resolutions contain other comic matter. They declare that "it is worse than idle to leave the question whether great business enterprises are legal or not merely to judicial determination." The old idea that judicial determination was a good way to discover legality or its opposite is flatly rejected by the Progressives, it appears. But this statement was merely preliminary to that appeal for the support of big business which has of late been made rather frequently by the Progressives. Give us the power, they say, and we will by legislation establish definite rules of conduct which will make business safe and stable. After this disclosure of the state of the Progressive mind and the quality of its thinking, we feel moved to suggest that the new newspaper organ of the Progressive Republicans which, rumor has it, is to be established at Chicago, with $2,000,000 in the till, should choose as the motto to be placed at the head of its columns this: "Devoted to the Worship of Incompetence."

Of course, Senator La Follette is the logical candidate of these conferees. No other man in the country has a tithe of his qualifications for the Progressive leadership. At the same time, we cannot feel that his "boom" has made a very promising beginning. We fear the Progressive conference at Chicago will be rated a failure.

ROSEBERY ON BIG LIBRARIES.

Judging from a brief and somewhat elliptical cable dispatch Lord Rosebery was in a whimsical mood when he delivered the address at the opening of the big Mitchell Library in Glasgow. Having accepted the invitation to deliver the address, he might have been expected to indulge in the usual flowers of speech in relation to the development of knowledge, culture, and good citizenship through good books. But he chose to say that great libraries depressed him, and that the subject had been exhausted, oratorically, in the 220,000 platitudes uttered at the opening of the 2,200 libraries given by Mr. Carnegie, 100 platitudes to a speech. But it is possible to say a good word for libraries, and big libraries, too, without uttering a single platitude. The student who seeks either information or mental refreshment in a big library needs one book, or a small selection of books on one subject. It would be no great benefit to civilization, however, to sprinkle a large city with small specialized libraries. There are, for that matter, medical and legal libraries, and special collections on art and architecture, accessible to the public in most capitals. The big public library is for all, and to meet all requirements it must contain many books, not only more than any one human being of the most omnivorous taste would care to read in a lifetime, but more than any one except a librarian and catalogue would care to know even by their titles.

Probably Lord Rosebery "hedged," as the saying is. He generally does, when he has made a sweeping remark. Mr. Carnegie's libraries are not to be condemned because of platitudes that may have been uttered by worthy orators. Nor is Glasgow, that grimmest of industrial towns, to be commiserated because it now has a library worthy of association with its world-renowned university in Kelvin Park. Four hundred thousand books are a great many, to be sure, but if only 100,000 of them are of great and lasting value, and the others represent an honest effort to meet the intellectual requirements of the people for whom the libary was built, it will serve its purpose nobly.

UNEMPLOYMENT.

The State Labor Bureau reports that unemployment is about 8 per cent. larger than last year, and that comparisons with earlier years generally are unfavorable except only in the worst of the depression of the year following the panic of 1907. The metal, building, and transportation industries are the most depressed, and the clothing, printing, and eating and drinking trades least affected. It must be remembered that these figures apply to organized labor, which suffers less than unorganized.

Conditions are as reported when the general activity of trade has not yet been impaired to any serious extent, there being a normal volume moving even in industries which report unemployment. It is difficult to doubt that there is more unemployment than these figures reveal, and that only an increase of trade can prevent their enlargement. Under such conditions the announcement of a strike for an eight-hour day seems ill-timed, and the declaration of the strikers on the Harriman railways that they will never give in seems likely to be put to test. There will be no difficulty in finding labor when so many men are seeking jobs, and needing only the protection of the law to earn wages which others reject.

ANTI-DEMOCRACY IN CALIFORNIA.

We have received the official statement of questions submitted to the people of California in connection with the recent special election, setting forth the amendments to the Constitution to be then voted upon, together with arguments pro and con. The statement is in more senses than one monstrous. It is printed in small and nearly unreadable type on both sides of an immense sheet, the reading matter covering in all twelve square feet. The amendments are twenty-three in number. Four of them are really important—woman suffrage, the initiative, the referendum, and the recall. Most of them are not fit for constitutional enactment at all, but should be within the scope of the powers of the Legislature.

The number, complexity, and minuteness of the propositions submitted to the popular vote make it physically impossible that the ordinary voter shall understand their nature and effect or the actual consequences of his own act. And the process of confusing and practically paralyzing the faculty of discretion and discrimination in the mind of the voter is, of course, a continuous and cumulative one. The multitudinous changes in the "fundamental" law wrought at one election invite and, indeed, compel, further changes, correcting the mistakes made, or adding to them. Consistency, stability, and continuity are simply impracticable under this process. The rights and interests of the community are involved in a perpetual flux. Human experience has shown that certainty, simplicity, clarity, and reasonable uniformity are the prime safeguards of justice and reason in the making and in the application of the laws affecting the public. These cannot be had in a State where the Constitution is made to meddle with details innumerable and where its provisions are subject to the passing whims of popular feeling and opinion.

This new method of handling the basic law of the State is advocated in the name of democracy. In reality it is utterly and hopelessly undemocratic. While pretending to give greater rights to the voters, it deprives them of the opportunity effectively and intelligently to use their powers. They receive the right to vote much oftener and on a larger number of matters than before, but the number and variety of the votes they are called on to cast does away with all chance of really using sense and discretion as to all of them. The new method is proposed as a check on the machines. But the strength of the machines lies in the inattention and indifference of the voters, and the voters are sure in the long run to be more inattentive and indifferent in proportion to the number of the questions forced upon them at one time. When the machine managers get familiar with the working of the new method, they will work it for their own ends far more readily than they work the present method. The average voter, muddled and puzzled and tired by the impossible task of really understanding and deciding on a mass of matters, will give it up, and then the politicians will get in their fine work.

The remedy for the undoubted evils of machine politics is not in multiplying, confusing, and making more troublesome the duties of the voter, but in simplifying and restricting them and making the discharge of each of them more effective. So long as we make our political business so difficult that common men cannot, will not, and ought not to give to it the time and labor absolutely needed for success in it, so long there will be professionals to attend to it. It would be as easy to run the business of a big railway by leaving every detail of its management to a vote of the shareholders as it will be to run the business of a State under the new system. And the results in the latter case will be as mischievous as those in the former would be sure to be.

Misled by a dispatch in our esteemed contemporary The Tribune, which is ordinarily more than usually accurate in matters connected with the civil service, we criticised the State Civil Service Commission last week for its action as to the places in the Election Board. It appears that there is a difference as to jurisdiction between the City Commission and the State Commission, but the latter has not undertaken to change the classification or to exempt from competitive tests any places previously subject to them. We have so often been obliged to comment on the course of the State Commission unfavorably that we especially regret that we should have done it injustice in this instance.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Found Uses for the Canal Shops. No recent visitor to the Canal Zone, if of a mind at all frugal, can have failed to be somewhat troubled as he observed the enormous machine shops, all magnificently equipped for doing on a large scale practically everything that has to be done with metal and wood. For such a visitor could not help thinking that after the rapidly approaching completion of the canal this great "plant" would become useless where it is and would be "so far from anywhere," as the saying is, that after the opening day it would become almost valueless.

Evidently the Isthmian Commission has been considering this problem, for in its latest recommendations to the Government it suggests a plan for preventing at least a large part of the threatened waste. Its proposal is that, having built the canal, the Government should not confine its future activities to mere maintenance of the inter-ocean waterway and the collection of tolls from the ships passing through, but should undertake the business of supplying the larger needs of those ships, every one of which will have just arrived after a voyage of considerable length, and especially should it do for a fair price any repairing of engines and hulls of which they may stand in need.

This substitution of Governmental for private enterprise is not entirely satisfactory, and it is sure to excite protest from those with whose expectations of profit to be derived from doing this work it will interfere. But there is evidently much to be said in its favor, and if the new business can be as admirably carried on as has the business of building the canal since Col. Goethals was put in charge of it, there will be little excuse for criticism, even on theoretical grounds.

Excellent as are the commission's suggestions, however, one cannot but regret that, in making them, it repeats the statement that health conditions on the Isthmus are now as good as those of the average northern city. That the death rate there has been made low is true, and a wonderful achievement it was, but the deduction from that rate as to Panama's salubrity is fallacious because in the North there would be almost no death rate at all among the sort of men who are working on the canal—a force from whom the very young, the old, and all weaklings have been carefully eliminated. Such men are fairly safe there, if they do not remain too long, but Panama is not and never will be either a healthy or a pleasant place of permanent residence for white men, and big wages will always be required either to attract or keep them there.

Perhaps There Isn't Any Mystery. As illustrating the often asserted and much discussed difference between Oriental and Occidental minds and the logic of the two, the Rev. W. J. Cuthbert, who has a position in the Imperial University at Kyoto, tells in a letter to The St. John's Bulletin, a little church periodical printed over in Jersey City, why a Japanese merchant does not fill large orders at a lower price than small ones.

The Western trader does this, Mr. Cuthbert says, because the profit on a large order is made quickly and the incidental trouble and expense are comparatively small. The Japanese argument is that the big order would not have been given had the customer not been badly in need of the goods, while the filling of it is likely to render the filling of orders from other customers impossible. Therefore, in such cases, he refuses to cut prices and is very apt to increase them. So often does he do so, indeed, that foreigners of experience divide each large order into several small ones and give them under different names.

Interesting as this information is as to Japanese trade customs, as evidence that "East is East and West is West" it is not very convincing. Any sharp merchant anywhere would be as ready as are those whom Mr. Cuthbert describes to exploit a customer's necessities if he knew or thought they existed, and it is done every day all over this country and Europe. Not infrequently, in and around Wall Street, prices are higher for a large than for a small purchaser, and this is almost always the case when the large purchase is "for control." There is nothing particularly Oriental, either, about a disinclination to serve one customer, though profitably, when it will mean the inconveniencing, and therefore the offending and the losing, of several or many other customers, smaller, but in the long run more desirable.

As a matter of fact, it is more than doubtful that there is any essential difference between Oriental and Occidental minds—more than probable that, given the same premises or assumptions, each would arrive by like logic at the same conclusions. That each often is and long remains a puzzle to the other may be due to nothing more mysterious than a common ignorance of conditions. The Oriental students in our universities find in our textbooks nothing they cannot understand or learn, and their mentality is superior, rather than different from, that of their Occidental companions and rivals. The superiority means, of course, not that their race has better brains than ours, but that these stranger students have been more carefully chosen for education than the majority of those with whom they associate.

Recognizing the Right to Know. For a high railway official to go to considerable trouble and expense in making public the full details of a serious accident to a train on his road would until very recently have been nothing less than an astounding departure from the established, invariable, and unanimous policy of railway management. It is still something new enough to cause about as much of general surprise as of general satisfaction.

The old plan was to keep within the narrowest possible circles such information about accidents as could not be wholly confined to the company's officers and officials, and the one thought seemed to be to reveal nothing that could be made the basis of damage suits. To this policy not a little of the unpopularity of railway corporations as such is due. The new plan, just carried out with such admirable thoroughness by President Brush of the Missouri Pacific, involves a frank and cordial recognition of the fact that a railway is under a special obligation to the public; that it has little or no "private business," and that it must not even try to evade full responsibility for the mistakes, the negligences, or the misfortunes of its managers and their subordinates.

The collision near Omaha was of exactly the kind concerning which railways have been most reluctant to give out information, but President Brush not only caused promptly to be prepared and widely to be distributed a full account of what had happened, and why, but he was careful to send individual notices to the relatives of the killed and injured passengers. He will certainly have his reward for this manifestation of good-will and this guarantee of good faith. He already has a few rivals; it is to be hoped that he may soon have many imitators.

DR. FELIX ADLER SUGGESTS

That He Shouldn't Be Lectured for Things He Didn't Quite Say.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I found your editorial in to-day's issue on Columbia's students of politics so interesting that I failed to notice your naughty remarks about myself further down on the same page. A friend has just called my attention to them.

Surely you must have laughed in your sleeve when you wrote what you did, with all your solemn air of lecturing me! Surely you must have at least surmised that the remark attributed to me about children's lies might not perhaps quite accurately represent what I said.

I spoke of systematic moral education, and in that connection of certain frailties incident to child nature, in regard to which a more scientific pedagogy may be expected to achieve progressive results.

I also ventured the opinion that in acquiring new virtues men must have a care not to lose those in which their forbears excelled. And it was at this point that reference was made to the subject of reverence.

Now, I am no laudator temporis acti, and not in the habit of "talking lugubriously about the decay of public and private morals." But surely you are the last person who ought to take exception to such tribute as I did pay to old times. Why, you are old Times yourself! I remember how I used to read you at the breakfast table when you brought stirring news of battles lost and won in the days of the civil war. I remember how I used to read you in the brave days of the fight with Tweed.

And yet you are sometimes wrong, especially in the matter of reporting public addresses. No worse perhaps than others, but, none the less, sometimes palpably wrong.

In the report of my last Sunday's address, for instance, The Times is out of joint, though I hope there may be no spite, because I am bound to set it right.

The Neglected West Side.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

His Honor, the Mayor, seems to realize that there is a west side to New York. His very lucid statement in your paper of Oct. 12 should be read by every New Yorker. It is full of meat and almost covers the whole subway situation, but we do feel that he might have enlarged a little more on the conditions of the west side. Why this great, populous, manufacturing, jobbing, transportation, and distributing district should have been overridden in the subway allotments by the combinations of suburban real estate speculators, no one can explain. All this vital central section of New York south of Forty-second Street and west of Fourth Avenue and Centre Street is left entirely unprovided with any subway accommodation for an indefinite number of years to come.

The extension down Seventh Avenue, &c., to Liberty Street and under the East River to Brooklyn would serve not only the Pennsylvania Railroad, but the great west side admirably. Just as our people are getting their tax bills for 1911 is a splendid time to consider what they are up against in developing the incongruous sprawl which the commission was hypnotized into believing was an urban system, but which in reality is a suburban system with the urban part neglected.

Musical Cats and the Fiddler.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Right back of me lives an old Italian fiddle maker, from whose room have come sounds of late that never could have come from a fiddle, and my inquiry on the subject has elicited this device on the artist's part—it is surely worthy of Dean Swift's University of Lagado:

Signor Paganini noticed that some cats can wail and warble more tunefully than some others, and he calls the tuneful ones Italians and the ear-splitters Tedeschi, i. e., Germans. All cats do not sing alike any more than all humans, it seems.

With catnip he entices the warblers to his room, with pincers and the like he makes them sing, and, alas! all that prove to be gutteral Tedeschi he liberates and the operatic Italiani he kills in a gas box, and from these he gets his fiddle strings. He asserts that they produce better music because they were in life musical!

An Incident in Gramercy Square.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On Gramercy Square I saw yesterday a lady, a real lady, with a collie dog. The dog had a leading strap fastened to his collar, but instead of the other end being held by his mistress, he held it daintily in his own mouth!

So proudly and importantly did he walk, as much as to say: "I am taking myself for a walk and I would never run away from myself in the world."

It was lovely and made one think of a deaf man talking in his own ear trumpet.

No National Holiday Possible.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the course of his speech on Columbus Day, Mayor Gaynor stated that he hoped to see the day made a National holiday by action of the general Government. How the Government could make any day a holiday outside the boundaries of the District of Columbia is not clear. Mr. Gaynor ought to know that there is no National holiday in this country, not even the Fourth of July.

THE USE OF SACCHARIN.

Attorney for the Manufacturers Tells Why They Wish It Extended.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article of the 6th inst. upon the saccharin question must have been written without a full knowledge of the facts. Will you not accept such knowledge and properly correct the same?

For more than twenty-five years saccharin has been manufactured, sold, and used in this country with no known complaint from any source. It is to-day prescribed by thousands of physicians in various diabetic cases. The law of the land has during the last twelve years recognized and protected saccharin by imposing a duty upon the foreign product. The report of the Referee Board of Consulting Scientific Experts—the Remsen board—states:

> 1. Saccharin in small quantities (three-tenths of a gram per day or less) added to the food is without deleterious or poisonous action and is not injurious to the health of normal adults, so far as is ascertainable by available methods of study.

Saccharin to-day is almost exclusively used in soft drinks, "pop," soda water, &c., and reduces the cost of the same. Three-tenths of a gram of saccharin—the quantity declared by the Remsen board to be innocuous—will sweeten thirty bottles of pop or soda water; and it therefore appears to be a physical impossibility for any person to absorb a dangerous quantity. With sugar advancing in price, with saccharin in moderate quantity approved by the highest scientific authority in the land, I am at a loss to understand the animus of the editorial article above referred to.

You say: "The saccharin men appeal for a further extension so that they may continue to cheat and feed to the public a poisonous or deleterious substitute for sugar which is not food." This is strong and actionable language, if not based upon fact. Saccharin is not a "food," but a condiment, as pepper or salt, and the saccharin men have not attempted to "cheat" the public in its sale. They appeal for an extension of time in order that the report of the Remsen board may be received by them, and strictly obeyed. The Food Inspection Decision 135, issued by the Food Inspection Board of the Department of Agriculture claims to be predicated upon the Remsen board report, but up to the 29th day of September the saccharin manufacturers have been unable to obtain a copy of this report, and are therefore unable to know whether Food Inspection Decision 135 is legal or illegal. To the end that light may be thrown upon this question and that this business may not be destroyed under a misapprehension of the facts, this extension is desired.

The saccharin interests believe that a regulation can be formulated in full accord with the Remsen board's report which will absolutely protect the public without destroying their business, and to that end they seek a further hearing before the Secretaries of Agriculture, Commerce and Labor, and the Treasury in accordance with the law.

As stated at the hearing last May, the manufacturers desire to conform strictly to the requirements of the Remsen board, when it is known what those requirements are.

In the name, therefore, of a respectable body of American business men, I request that you correct your editorial statement of Oct. 5 and withdraw the charge therein made that "the saccharin men appeal for a further extension so that they may continue to cheat and feed to the public a poisonous or deleterious substitute for sugar which is not food."

FRANCIS E. HAMILTON,
Attorney for Saccharin Manufacturers.

New York, Oct. 7, 1911.

Mr. Hamilton may rest assured that The Times's comment was not written with any "animus." It was based largely upon the published conclusions of the Remsen Referee Board and the ruling of the Department of Agriculture, issued on April 29 last as Food Inspection Decision 135, which reads:

> At the request of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Referee Board of Consulting Scientific Experts has conducted an investigation as to the effect on health of the use of saccharin. The investigation has been concluded, and the referee board reports that the continued use of saccharin for a long time in quantities over three-tenths of a gram per day is liable to impair digestion; and that the addition of saccharin as a substitute for cane sugar or other forms of sugar reduces the food value of the sweetened product, and hence lowers its quality.
> Saccharin has been used as a substitute for sugar in over thirty classes of foods in which sugar is commonly recognized as a normal and valuable ingredient. If the use of saccharin be continued, it is evident that amounts of saccharin may readily be consumed which will, through continual use, produce digestive disturbances. In every food in which saccharin is used, some other sweetening agent known to be harmless to health can be substituted, and there is not even a pretense that saccharin is a necessity in the manufacture of food products. Under the Food and Drugs act, articles of food are adulterated if they contain added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredients which may render them injurious to health. Articles of food are also adulterated within the meaning of the act if substances have been mixed and packed with the foods so as to reduce or lower or injuriously affect their quality or strength. The findings of the referee board show that saccharin in food is such an added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient as is contemplated by the act, and also that the substitution of saccharin for sugar in foods reduces and lowers their quality.
>
> The Secretary of Agriculture, therefore, will regard as adulterated under the Food and Drugs act foods containing saccharin which, on and after July 1, 1911, are manufactured or offered for sale in the District of Columbia or the Territories, or shipped in inter-State or foreign commerce, or offered for importation into the United States.

Rising Coffee and Sugar Prices.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with interest the interview published in The Times with John Arbuckle, the noted coffee and sugar magnate. Mr. Arbuckle, as I read the interview, attributes the recent rise in the price of sugar to the duty imposed upon the raw product, and proposes to devote some of his valuable time to having this tariff removed. How does Mr. Arbuckle, who is an authority on coffee as well as sugar, explain the greater rise in the price of raw coffee, upon which the United States alone, of all the great powers, levies no duty whatever, and will Mr. Arbuckle devote some of his time to having this cost reduced?

Within the past year the price of standard Brazilian coffee in the berry has been augmented fully 75 to 80 per cent. Coffee and sugar are alike necessary to the consumer, whatever his station in life, and the need for reduction in cost is measurable by the hardship caused by the exorbitant prices of each.

Civilian Engineers and West Pointers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The laudatory article on the United States Government engineers in this morning's Times does not read well to me. It is a fact but little known that in each engineer's office of the War Department detailed under the Corps of Engineers are civilian engineers termed assistant engineers, usually graduates of engineering colleges, who do the work. Their names seldom appear, they grow old in the service, but are in efficiency the power behind the throne. The Government system of educating engineers for management of public works is wrong.

At West Point out of a graduating class of, say, 100, probably 10 per cent. of the young men who stand at the head of the class are appointed Second Lieutenants of the Corps of Engineers, and as they advance in rank are detailed in charge of important Government works. These young men might just as well be appointed as doctors or lawyers. They have no particular qualifications for the position, and the selection could be made from the last ten with equal results. The remedy would be to appoint from civil life graduate civil engineers from our universities, and base their appointment on competitive examination.

TAFT URGES WOMEN TO WORK FOR PEACE

THEY SUFFER MORE IN WAR

Says He Will Not Shirk Fight with Senate if Necessary to Insure Treaties' Success.

President Taft, over his own signature, in the forthcoming November issue of the Woman's Home Companion, makes an appeal to the women of the Nation to come to the support of the arbitration treaties. The President declares that women are vitally interested in questions of peace and war, and that in war they suffer even more than men do. He urges, therefore, that the voice of the women of this country shall speak for peace.

"On the evil of war, and what follows in its train I need not dwell," says he. "We could not have a higher object than the adoption of any proper and honorable means which would lessen the chance of armed conflicts. Men endure great physical hardships in camp and on the battlefield.

"In our civil war the death roll in the Union Army alone reached the appalling aggregate of 359,000. But the suffering and perils of the men in the field, distressing as they are to contemplate, are slight in comparison with the woes and anguish of the women who are left behind. The hope that husband, brother, father, son, may be spared the tragic end which all soldiers risk, when they respond to their country's call, buoys them up in their privations and heart-breaking loneliness. But theirs is the deepest pain, for the most poignant suffering is mental rather than physical. No pension compensates for the loss of husband, son, or father. The glory of death in battle does not feed the orphaned children, nor does the pomp and circumstance of war clothe them. The voice of the women of America should speak for peace."

Reciting the fact that a majority of the Senate's Committee on Foreign Relations has concluded that the proposed arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France, as presented to the Senate for ratification, infringe in one respect on its constitutional prerogatives, the President says that this view is, in his judgment, erroneous. He contends that the objection raised by the majority has already been answered by an able minority, and expresses the hope that reflection on the part of the Senators who are neutral or even hostile to the treaties will convince them of their error.

"But while the majority of the committee remains to be persuaded," says he, "the issue should be thoroughly understood by the American people, to whom both branches of the Federal Government are accountable, and whose judgment, in some effective and unequivocal way, will record itself."

The President points out that he is not by any means seeking a fight with the Senate, but he doesn't say he will shirk one if necessary to the success of the treaties. He continues:

"I am far from desiring a contest with the Senate. I am one of those who appreciate most highly the plan of government devised by our forefathers in the Constitution. I think that one of the most admirable features of that framework is the Senate with its various functions, and I should be the last to seek to deprive it of any of them.

"The Executive has powers in respect to treaties equal at least to those of the Senate, and if these treaties deprive the Senate of any power it can not delegate, they deprive the Executive of the same power. It is my duty to be as careful not to give up any power entrusted to me by the Constitution, and not to yield to any encroachment upon it, as the Senate ought to be in respect of its constitutional faculties. Charged as I am with this duty of guarding executive power, I cannot, for the life of me, see any improper parting with any power in the making of these treaties. They bind me quite as much as the Senate, but I fear nothing of evil from their operation."

In explaining what the new treaties mean, and the objections to them raised by the Senate, the President remarks that the report of the joint high commission, created by the treaties, is advisory only, and not binding on either party except in one respect, and that is where there is a difference as to whether the question at issue is subject to arbitration, under the first article of the treaties, or not. In such a case five of the six members of the commission may decide that it is, and that decision is binding on both governments.

But the first article of the treaties binds the Governments to submit for arbitration all "justifiable" differences, and, as the President conceives the objection to the treaties to have arisen over the scope of this term, he proceeds to discuss it. He declares emphatically that the Monroe Doctrine, among other policies of this Government, could never come under the term, and therefore objection on their account falls flat.

INDORSES PEACE TREATIES.

Commission Named by the Council of Churches to Support Mr. Taft.

The Commission on Peace and Arbitration, recently appointed by the Federal Council of Churches, and representing thirty-one American religious bodies, with 18,000,000 members, held its first meeting yesterday in the council's rooms in the Clarendon buildings.

Organization was effected by the election as Chairman of the Rev. Dr. J. B. Remensnyder, President of the Lutheran General Synod. The Rev. Frederick Lynch was chosen secretary, and an address to the churches of America was drawn up. This address sets forth the facts that Christ's Gospel is pre-eminently one of peace, and that it is the duty of the churches to indorse, without reservation, the treaties proposed by President Taft.

Some Consolation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

No matter if Philadelphia did beat New York three to one in that Philadelphia game, New York beat Philadelphia in the first game almost two to one in the gate receipts, and, by heck, it's gate receipts that the world series managers are after, pennant or no pennant. The poor, deluded fans haven't waked up to this yet, but they will in a dozen or fifteen years. Just at present they think it is real baseball.

L'ENVOI OF THE FAN.

When the Post Season Series is finished, and the bats and the balls laid aside,
When the last winning run has been garnered and the last speculator been tried;
We shall rest, and, faith, we shall need it—shut down on this "champion" dope,
Till the Cubs and the Giants and Athletics shall awake in the Spring with fresh hope.

And those who were wise shall be happy, they shall cash in their bets the next day,
They shall dine at the Astor and Belmont, and not mind at all what they pay;
They shall eat from a brand new home-plate, and call for a high-ball, too,
They shall circle the bases in taxis, and slide into bed when they're through.

And only the Keeper shall praise us, and only the Keeper shall blame,
And no one shall ask us wherefor we bet on the next-to-last game—
But each for the joy of playing, and each in his cell afar

ADRIAN ISELIN, 2D, MARRIED IN PARIS

Son of C. Oliver Iselin of New York Weds Miss Madeleine L'Engle by Civil Ceremony.

RELIGIOUS RITES TO-DAY

Bride, Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. L'Engle of New Orleans, Is of Notable Lineage—Wedding Trip in Motor.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—Miss Madeleine L'Engle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. L'Engle of New Orleans, and Adrian Iselin, 2d, son of C. Oliver Iselin of New York, were married yesterday by civil ceremony. The ceremony, which was private, only the required legal witnesses being present, was performed by the Mayor of the first arrondissement. The religious rites will be conducted to-morrow by the Rev. J. B. Morgan, pastor of the Episcopal Church in Paris.

The engagement of Miss L'Engle and young Mr. Iselin was announced last June. No formal invitations have been issued for the church marriage to-day in Paris, and the religious rites will be performed in the presence of the immediate family only and a few intimate friends of the bride and bridegroom.

After the wedding Mr. Iselin and his bride will start on a motor trip on the Continent, returning to New York late this Winter to reside.

Miss L'Engle is of notable lineage and comes from a family noted for its beautiful women. Mr. Iselin is a member of the Larchmont Yacht Club and Knickerbocker Club of this city, and is a brother of the Countess Colloredo-Mannsfeld and of Mrs. Philip W. Livermore.

BRILL-MAYER WEDDING.

Miss Jos-phine Mayer the Bride of Samuel Brill—Off for Europe.

Miss Josephine Mayer and Samuel Brill were married last evening at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Mayer, 23 East Seventy-fourth Street. The ceremony was performed at 6 o'clock by the Rev. Stephen S. Wise.

The drawing room where the ceremony took place was decorated with palms and white chrysanthemums. The bride wore a gown of white satin and a veil that has been handed down for several generations in her family. Her brother, Edgar A. Mayer, gave her in marriage on account of the illness of her father. The ceremonial cup used by the bride and bridegroom was a gold cup which belonged to Mr. Brill's great-grandfather.

Mrs. Maurice Brill, sister of the bride, acted as matron of honor. The Misses Rhona Mayer and Ruth Brill were flower girls and carried baskets filled with roses. Robert Brill, a nephew of the bride, was page. Maurice Brill was best man for his brother.

A dinner followed the ceremony, and a reception was held at 9 o'clock. A special musical programme was rendered by Prof. Fenrich.

The couple will sail this morning on the Lusitania for a trip to London and Paris.

MISS ADELAIDE SIM WEDS.

Daughter of Prof. John R. Sim Married to Edward R. Whittemore.

The wedding of Miss Adelaide Margaret Sim, daughter of Prof. John R. Sim of the College of the City of New York, to Edward Ramsay, Whittemore of this city took place last evening in the North Presbyterian Church in West 155th Street. The Rev. John R. Mackay, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Abbott Kittredge, officiated.

Mrs. Howard C. Forbes was her sister's matron of honor, and there were four bridesmaids. Homer G. Day acted as best man.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, 536 West 156th Street. Later the couple left on their bridal trip. They will reside at Riverside Manor, N. Y., on their return.

To-day's Weddings.

Miss Adelaide Pendergast, only daughter of J. Lynch Pendergast, and Lawrence Thomas Durant will be married at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the ladies' annex of the Metropolitan Club. Only relatives and a few intimate friends have been invited. There will be no reception.

Miss Grace Titherington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Titherington of this city, will be married to Myron Fuller this evening at 8 o'clock at St. Michael's Protestant Episcopal Church, Amsterdam Avenue and 100th Street.

The wedding of Miss Katherine M. Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Silas L. Thompson of 312 West 112th Street, to Kingsley Gould Martin, son of F. Comerford Martin, will be celebrated this afternoon in St. Matthew's Church in West Eighty-fourth Street.

In the Hotel Savoy to-day Miss Stella S. Hirsch, only daughter of Arthur A. Hirsch of 209 Cathedral Parkway, will be married to Marcus H. Marks.

Dean Smith of this city and Miss Ida L. Stulen, daughter of Mrs. John Stulen of Pittsburgh, are to be married in that city to-day. Mr. Smith is the youngest son of Dr. Stephen Smith of Riverside Drive.

SCHNAKENBERG—BARTLETT.

The engagement is announced of Miss Kate Schnakenberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Schnakenberg of New Brighton, S. I., to Edward Everett Bartlett, Jr., of New York. No date has been set for the wedding.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont will return from Europe in November. They have been spending September and October in the mountains of Hungary at the place they leased from Prince Esterhazy for stag shooting.

Mrs. William A. Fraser of 36 East Sixty-fourth Street will give a luncheon at Sherry's on Nov. 27 for her débutante niece, Miss Sarah R. Manice.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Bourke Cockran are in town and are staying at the Ritz-Carlton.

Dr. and Mrs. Walter Eyre Lambert have returned from the West and have opened their house, 47 West Thirty-eighth Street.

Admiral Sir Charles Drury and Lady Drury of London are at the Plaza, the guests of Mrs. Charles Hathaway of East Orange, N. J.

Mrs. George Ide Malcolm of 165 West Fifty-eighth Street will give a luncheon at Sherry's on Dec. 7 for her débutante daughter, Miss Hope Malcolm.

Mr. and Mrs. Eli K. Robinson, Miss Robinson, and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Robinson are at Briar Cliff Lodge and will remain there until the late Autumn.

The marriage of Miss Bertha Purdy, the daughter of Mrs. B. G. Purdy of Cedarhurst, L. I., to William Beers, will take place Oct. 28 at Cedarhurst.

Mrs. William Moore Carson will give a tea on Dec. 4 at her residence, 149 East Thirty-seventh Street, to introduce her daughter, Miss Betty Carson.

Mr. and Mrs. William Emlen Roosevelt are closing their country home, Yellowlands, at Oyster Bay, this week, and are opening their town house, 804 Fifth Avenue.

Miss Lydia Loring of Washington has for several weeks been the guest of her aunt, Mrs. E. Reeve Merritt, at her country place, Elfland, at Oyster Bay.

Dr. Nelson H. Henry and Mrs. Henry and the latter's daughters, the Misses Amy and Bess Bryan Sloan, have returned from Atlantic City to their Ninth Street home.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. J. McVickar will close their White Plains home on Nov. 1 and will spend the Winter at the Hotel Buckingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Boissevain, (Miss Dorothy V. Ruxton,) who were married on Sept. 23, sailed yesterday for their home in Amsterdam, Holland. Mrs. George Livingston Nichols, Mrs. Boissevain's mother, is staying at the Hotel Gotham.

NOT TO WED VINCENT ASTOR.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 17.—"You can say for me that it's perfect nonsense," said Paul Andrews this evening to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent regarding the report that his daughter, Margaret, was engaged to Vincent Astor, son of Col. John Jacob Astor.

"The child is only 16 years old," continued Mr. Andrews, "and you can't make the denial too strong."

Miss Andrews is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Andrews, who belong to one of the oldest and wealthiest families of this city. Last Summer she was much in the company of Vincent Astor, the young son of Col. John Jacob Astor, but not more so than many other girls in the younger set.

Miss Andrews is fond of tennis, golf, and swimming.

Miss Bloomberg Weds I. S. Farian.

Miss Edna L. Bloomberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Casper Bloomberg of 350 West Eighty-fifth Street, and Irving S. Farian were married last evening at Delmonico's. The Rev. Stephen S. Wise officiated.

The bride wore a gown of white satin charmeuse trimmed with pearls and Duchess lace and a tulle veil. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Walter Seckel was her sister's only attendant and wore white and silver and carried red roses. Herbert Green was best man.

JAMES LOEB TO AID CLASSICAL STUDIES

At His Own Expense, He Will Publish English Versions of Latin and Greek Authors.

200 VOLUMES IN THE SERIES

Minor, as Well as Well-Known Works, to be Included—European Scholars Will Assist the Enterprise.

James Loeb, the banker, who retired from the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. a few years ago, has made arrangements for the translation into English and publication at his own expense of the classical authors of all periods. Mr. Loeb is now in Europe, so that few of the details of his plan are yet known in New York. His brother, Dr. Morris Loeb of this city, said yesterday, however, that his understanding was that the work would contain something like 200 volumes.

The need for such a work was brought to the attention of Mr. Loeb in Paris by Prof. Salomon Reinach, who is a member of the Institute of France, Conservator of the Museum of St. Germain, and a professor at the School of the Louvre. For many years no English translation has been made of the minor Greek and Latin authors and those of the later periods. Prof. Reinach pointed out the need of scholarly and critical translations of all these works for the use of university students and others.

Mr. Loeb, who is himself a member of the English Society for the Promotion of Hellenic Studies and has published several works on classical subjects, took hold of the project enthusiastically. Arrangements have already been made to secure the services of the best scholars of England, France, Germany, and the United States in making the translations. Part of the work is actually under way, and it is expected that the first volumes will be issued during the coming year. While the need is chiefly for translations of those authors not already accessible in English, the familiar works of Caesar, Virgil, Horace, and the like, that every undergraduate knows, will be included, in order to make the set complete.

It was clear from the outset that this ambitious project would probably be far from a profitable one, and Dr. Reinach pointed out that it was not likely that it would ever be undertaken as a commercial venture. While the demand for such works is important in its character, it is not sufficiently extensive to warrant such an enterprise except for the sole purpose of the advancement of scholarship.

Mr. Loeb expressed his willingness to assume this financial burden, and the volumes will be issued primarily at his expense. Some well-known house will probably be the actual publisher, but Mr. Loeb will guarantee the project against loss. This will make it possible to avoid publishing the works on a subscription basis and to put them within the reach of scholars and students generally.

For the same reason, it is not planned to make the series an edition de luxe, although it will be published in first-class style. It has not yet been decided whether or not each volume shall contain the full Latin or Greek text, as well as the English translation, but one plan is to print the two on opposite pages, for ease in studying the original. Critical notes probably will appear at the end of the volume.

"It is somewhat premature," said Dr. Morris Loeb, when asked about the matter yesterday, "to make any announcement regarding the work, and I know little of the details of the plan myself, as it has been taken up by my brother while in Europe. No doubt these details will all be made known at the proper time."

MRS. PANKHURST SPEAKS.

Large Audience Hears English Suffragist at Brooklyn Academy.

All Brooklyn was out to hear Mrs. Pankhurst, the English Suffragist leader, at the Brooklyn Academy of Music last night.

The stage was decorated with the purple, green, and white of the Woman's Political Union, under whose auspices Mrs. Pankhurst spoke, and young women wearing the same colors acted as ushers, sold books, and distributed circulars in the audience.

On the stage was a solid body of Manhattan and Brooklyn members of the union. Mrs. Stanton Blatch, President of the union, introduced Mrs. Pankhurst as "the woman who in all the world is doing the most for suffrage."

Mrs. Pankhurst told her audience about the peaceful Conciliation bill which England's Prime Minister has promised he will make a place for at the next Parliament, and which will give women householders a right to vote, if Lloyd-George and others do not kill it with overkind amendments.

"That is what the present suffrage truce is over," she said. "And in the meantime the English Antis are coming into the fold, because the members of Parliament have voted themselves salaries of £400 a year, and the women have got to help raise the money in addition to their other taxes, and this without representation."

Mrs. Pankhurst said that when she was here before women told her English women might need the suffrage, but that it was different in America. This, she said, irritated her greatly. Now, she has been studying American laws, and she told the Brooklyn women of some of the wrongs they may not be acquainted with. They laughed when she said it was a little difficult to get hold of the law when it was different in every State.

At the close of her address Mrs. Pankhurst answered questions, and later there was a general reception, with the audience filing up a little green, white, and purple drawbridge to the stage to shake hands with the English leader.

A resolution was passed asking all voting citizens, believing in democracy, to endeavor to defeat the Assemblymen opposing woman suffrage at Albany as enemies of fair representation.

The Woman Suffrage Party of New York and the Equal Franchise Society had boxes, and so did Mrs. Herbert Pratt, Mrs. Edgerton Winthrop, Jr., Mrs. A. F. Townsend, Miss Rebecca Land Hooper, Miss Mary Dreier, Mrs. Charles Edward Knoblauch, Mrs. Wendell T. Bush, Mrs. Calvin Thomson, and Mrs. Victor Sorchan. Mrs. John Winters Brannan and Mr. and Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw were on the platform.

SENATOR PENROSE ILL HERE.

Under Treatment Since Monday at the Waldorf for Indigestion.

Senator Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania has been confined to his room at the Waldorf-Astoria since Monday evening by an attack of indigestion. He is also suffering from a cold. He was made ill by eating oysters, according to Dr. Robert S. Adams, physician at the Waldorf.

Yesterday morning Senator Penrose was much improved and had intended going home in the afternoon but for the fact that he had to wait until after the ball game to see several friends. Last night he was still under treatment. His physician will allow him to return to Philadelphia this morning.

Daughter Born to Mrs. A. S. Burden.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter on Sunday morning at their apartment in the Ritz-Carlton. Mrs. Burden was Miss Cynthia Roche, daughter of Mrs. Burke Roche, and her marriage to Mr. Burden took place on June 11, 1906.

Mr. and Mrs. Burden have a country place at Jericho, L. I., although they spend much of their time at Newport during the Summer, where Mrs. Burden's mother has a villa. They have spent the Winters at 908 Fifth Avenue, with Mrs. James A. Burden, but spend this season at the Ritz-Carlton.

Mrs. Burke Roche is coming from Newport to-day to be with her daughter. Few of Mrs. Burden's friends here knew of the birth of her daughter, as the first word was received here yesterday from Newport.

FUNERAL OF JUSTICE HARLAN.

Cabinet Officers Attend Church Services—Jurists as Pallbearers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Associate Justice John Marshall Harlan of the Supreme Court of the United States was buried to-day in the presence of a distinguished gathering with the simple services of the Presbyterian Church, of which he had been a life-long member. The interment and the services at the home of the distinguished jurist were private at the urgent wish of the family, but on the request of many of the Justice's old friends the family finally consented to public services at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. There a funeral oration was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Wallace Radcliffe, and the Judge's favorite hymn, "Love Divine," was sung.

With the exception of the Rev. Dr. Richard Harlan and his wife, who were abroad at the time of the unexpected death of the Justice, on Saturday, the immediate members of the Harlan family were present at the obsequies. These included Mrs. Harlan, John Maynard Harlan, a Chicago attorney, and family; Inter-State Commerce Commissioner James H. Harlan and family, and the Misses Laura and Ruth Harlan, daughters of the Justice.

Only members of the family and the Justices of the Supreme Court attended the services at Mr. Harlan's home. From there to the church the Justices escorted the body, as pall bearers, while a short distance from the church the Bible class, taught for many years by Mr. Harlan, met the hearse and formed a guard of honor. This class, after the services, also marched on foot as a guard out to Rock Creek Cemetery, where the interment took place.

Every court in the District of Columbia was adjourned to-day out of respect, the Judges and members of the bar attending the last rites of the aged Justice. S. S. Gregory, President of the American Bar Association, was present, while Cabinet officers, officers of the army and navy, prominent lawyers from all parts of the country, and many foreign representatives who knew Mr. Harlan socially paid their last respects to him to-day. Mr. Harlan was a native of Kentucky and Gov. A. E. Willson represented his State at the funeral this afternoon.

W. D. Street, Indian Fighter, Dead.

OBERLIN, Kan., Oct. 17.—W. D. Street, a pioneer plainsman, scout, and Indian fighter, died here yesterday of apoplexy. He was a scout and guide with Gen. Custer on several occasions. He was commissioned by Major Mauck of the Fourth Cavalry, who was pursuing Chief Dull Knife and his band aftrte the raid and massacre of September, 1878, to carry dispatches from the Holstein & McCoy ranch, where the town of Atwood, Kan., now stands, to Ogalalla, Neb., 135 miles, thus giving the world the first news of the last Indian massacre on the Kansas plains. Street succeeded in evading the Indians and delivered his messages to the United States troops in time for them to find and intercept the Indians. Mr. Street served Decatur County in the Legislature several terms, and was once Speaker of the Kansas House of Representatives.

Mrs. Mary Andrews Denison.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 17.—Mrs. Mary Andrews Denison, widely known as an author fifty years ago, is dead at the home of her brother, Dr. R. R. Andrews in this city, where she had lived for the last year. She was 86 years old and a native of Cambridge. During the civil war Mrs. Denison served as a nurse with the regiment of which her husband, the Rev. Charles W. Denison, was Chaplain. Soon after her marriage she accompanied her husband when he went as Consul to a West Indian colony. For many years she made her home in Washington, D. C. Her books meeting with the greatest success were "That Husband of Mine," and "That Wife of Mine."

Rev. Peter C. Creveling.

The Rev. Peter C. Creveling died on Monday evening at his Long Island home of heart disease. He had not been well for several months, but it was not until within a few weeks that he had been dangerously ill. Mr. Creveling had been rector of Christ Church at Lynbrook, L. I., for several years, having removed there from Liberty, N. Y., where he was rector of St. John's Church, owing to the failing health of his wife. Previous to that he had been rector of St. John's Church at Cornwall-on-Hudson. The funeral will take place on Thursday. Mr. Creveling left a widow.

Obituary Notes.

MARY WINTHROP PARKIN, daughter of the late Dr. J. S. W. and Sarah E. Parkin, died yesterday at her home, the Hotel Wellington, 865 Seventh Avenue.

WILLIAM A. SINN, Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of Pennsylvania, died in a hospital in Philadelphia yesterday, after a brief illness. He was one of the most prominent members of the Masonic fraternity in Pennsylvania.

RICHARD H. H. STEEL, 80 years old, died yesterday at his home, 24 Mount Morris Park West. Mr. Steel was born in Westchester County. Until 1859 he was in the laundry business in this city, and then removed to Jersey City, where at the time of his death he was the head of one of the largest laundry plants in the country. Mr. Steel was a Mason and a member of the old Volunteer Fire Department. He is survived by two children, Dr. G. E. Steel of 56 West Seventy-ninth Street, and Mrs. R. W. Caldwell, Jr., of Bay Point, L. I.

CORNELIUS ROSE died yesterday in the eighty-third year of his age. He was born in Germany, and emigrated to the United States in 1849. Mr. Rose was one of the original "Forty-Niners." In 1849 he joined the Seventh Regiment, with which he saw active service in the civil war, and at the time of his death was one of the oldest, if not the oldest, living members of that regiment. Many years ago he was a member of the then well-known firm of Bernheimer Brothers, cotton merchants. Mr. Rose was a member of the German Hospital, Liederkranz Society, Harmonie Club, the New York Geographical Society, and the Seventh Regiment Veterans' Association.

The Rev. JAMES B. LUCAS, who for the last fifty-one years had been the pastor of Methodist churches in the vicinity of Chicago, died Monday at the home of his son, 1,476 Glenwood Road, Brooklyn, at the age of 72 years. Mr. Lucas was born in Waynesburg, Penn., and served during the civil war with a Pennsylvania regiment. He is survived by two sons—the Rev. Abner H. Lucas of Paterson, N. J., and Charles W. Lucas, a lawyer, of this city.

JOHN DRESCHER, for many years Superintendent of the Havemeyer refineries in Williamsburg, died on Monday at his home, 390 Stanhope Street, Brooklyn. He was born at Franzheim, Germany, on May 7, 1836, and was the father of ex-State Senator John Drescher. He is survived by two sons and a daughter.

JAMES BAILEY VOSE, a veteran of the civil war, died on last Saturday at his home, 273 Albany Avenue, Brooklyn, of ailments incidental to old age. He served throughout the war with the Seventh Regiment of New York. He was 77 years old.

JOHN HENRY JAMES, a well-known resident of East New York, died on Sunday at his home, 84 New Jersey Avenue, of an affection of the liver. He was 49 years old, and had come to this country from Germany.

MAXWELL WEREN ROCKWELL, an illustrator, died early yesterday morning at St. Vincent's Hospital of typhoid pneumonia. He was 35 years old. His work appeared frequently in Life and other humorous publications, and several years ago he illustrated articles in THE TIMES Sunday Magazine.

Dr. HARRY LOCKWOOD FINLAY, well known in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, died on Saturday at his home, 421 Fifty-fourth Street, of heart disease. He was a member of the staff of the Samaritan Hospital in Brooklyn, and a member of the Kings County Medical Society.

NAT HAINES, a well-known figure in vaudeville, died on Monday at his home in Williamsbridge. He had lived there two years, following the loss of his health. Mr. Haines, who is generally credited with having originated the famous "Hatchet in the Head" act, was best known in the role of a blackface comedian. For many years he had as his partner William Vidocq. He started with a patent medicine show, later joining a minstrel troupe, and gradually working into the vaudeville circuit. In the "Hatchet in the Head" act he used a heavy covering over his skull and allowed his partner to bury his axe in it.

E. R. BLAINE, aged 50, President of the Blaine-Thompson Advertising Company and a second cousin of James G. Blaine, died suddenly in Cincinnati, Ohio, yesterday from a stroke of apoplexy. Mr. Blaine was born in Peoria, Ill., and was reared in Kentucky. While a citizen in Kentucky he served for a number of years as Chief Deputy United States Internal Revenue Collector at Maysville, and under President Cleveland he was Postmaster at Lexington, Ky. In 1893 he came to New York as advertising manager of The Cosmopolitan Magazine.

ROBERT C. METCALF, 78 years old, former Superintendent of the Public Schools at Winchester, Mass., died Monday night at the home of Charles H. Hartshorne, in Montclair, N. J., where he was visiting. Mr. Metcalf's death was due to pneumonia.

FATHER OF THE CURB DEAD.

Emanuel S. Mendels, Jr., Elevated Trade and Routed Dishonest Brokers.

Emanuel S. Mendels, Jr., "father of the curb," is dead at his home in Newark, N. J., at the age of 61 years. During his 37 years of active connection with the Curb market of the city he, perhaps more than any other man, worked for the elevation of business done on the Curb and last year, as the result of his years of endeavor, he succeeded in forming the New York Curb Market Association, which exercised supervision over curb trading and which endeavors to prevent frauds.

Mr. Mendels started early in life as a business secretary. His work took him much into the street and soon he became known as a "curb" broker, one through whom all routine business of the market could be transacted. From that time on he was the recognized "proctor" of the curb. It remained for him to decide on the quotation lists and through his influence many fraudulent stocks were thrown out of the market, and dishonest brokers lost their membership.

Last year Mr. Mendels testified before the White Investigating Committee in the interest of the curb brokers when an attempt had been made to dislodge them from Broad Street.

While on a business trip to California a short time ago, Mr. Mendels became seriously ill from ptomaine poisoning. He failed gradually since then until his death came on Monday. His sons, William L. and Walter A. B. Mendels will carry on his business under the name of E. S. Mendels, Jr., & Co.

Count Armand R. Stainach.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Count Armand R. Stainach, Court Interpreter of Westchester County and an Austrian nobleman, died to-day at his home, 15 Davis Avenue, White Plains, in his ninetieth year. Count Stainach had been a resident of White Plains for more than sixty years. His wife, one son, Stephen Stainach of Stainach & Hards, theatrical managers at Mount Vernon; two daughters, Mrs. Horace Stewart of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Charles Van Wyck of White Plains, survive him. Count Stainach came from an Austrian family, which for generations was a power in that kingdom. Under the tutelage of Catholic monks in his native land he acquired many languages. In addition to his ability as a linguist he was a fine musician and a civil engineer. With hundreds of other students in Austria Count Stainach became a follower of Kossuth in the rebellion in 1848, and was compelled to flee the land. He came to America, and for a time was in the United States Coast Survey service.

BLISS.—At a meeting of the Board of Directors of The Fourth National Bank of this city, held Tuesday, Oct. 17, 1911, the following minute was unanimously adopted:

The members of the Board of Directors of this bank record their profound grief for the loss by death on the ninth instant of Hon. Cornelius Newton Bliss, the senior member of the board, in the seventy-ninth year of his age, after a well rounded life of honor and distinction, earned by eminent services, public and private.

A New Englander by birth, Mr. Bliss came to this city in 1866, after business activities in New Orleans and Boston, and his career as a merchant and a citizen has ever since been identified with this city.

Mr. Bliss became a member of this board on Dec. 3, 1874, at which time he had already achieved a prominent position among the merchants of the city, and a reputation for strict integrity, business sagacity, and public spirit. He brought to the service of the bank his mercantile experience, large acquaintance with affairs, mental alertness, and sound judgment, with a power of stating conclusions with marked vigor and emphasis. His methods were always direct and straightforward, and he was impatient with halting, dilatory, or devious ways.

Mr. Bliss remained a member of this board until his death, holding a position as Vice President of the bank from 1879 until 1895, and serving as President pro tempore for a period in 1888. Throughout this period of nearly thirty-seven years he was regular in his attendance at board meetings, and was at all times watchful of the business and management of the bank, and active and generous in promoting its interests, identifying himself largely with the bank and its success. The bank and its stockholders, as well as its Directors, owe him a large debt of gratitude.

The public services of Mr. Bliss need no record here. He never sought official position, and laid down his Secretaryship of the Interior in President McKinley's Cabinet after two years of service. Every citizen of New York knows and appreciates his devoted services in philanthropic, charitable, and religious movements and activities.

Personally Mr. Bliss was notably dignified in his bearing, but courteous and cordial to all, and to his friends and associates he showed a charm of manner and a warmth of friendship which will always remain with us in grateful memory.

We direct that this minute form a part of the proceedings of this meeting of the board, and that an engrossed copy thereof be sent to the widow and children of Mr. Bliss with an expression of our deep sympathy with them in their sad affliction.

Conservative Investment

THERE is no greater incentive towards thrift and economy than that induced by conservative investment. It is a mistake to imagine, however, that conservative investment is to be determined by surface conditions alone. Margin of safety, stability of earnings, marketability, interest rates and other important factors all have a bearing upon safe and profitable investment.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE RATE UP

At Highest Point of the Year and Above Point at Which Gold Recently Went Out.

Pressure of funds upon this market, which has manifested itself in a variety of ways recently, is the continuing cause of an advance in sterling exchange rates, which yesterday carried demand sterling above the figures at which gold was recently engaged for export and to the highest figure of the year. This continued forward movement in exchange reflects the outflow of money from this centre to more profitable employment in the European money markets, which is being effected in part through the investment of American funds in commercial bills based on foreign purchases of American merchandise, particularly cotton, which continued to go out in large volume. The experience of this year has deprived this movement of part of its novelty, but it nevertheless remains one of the striking phenomena of the present financial situation that American bankers at this season of the year should be turning their attention to the foreign markets rather than to our own for the profitable employment of their funds. It is to be borne in mind, of course, that this use of bankers' balances does not put them out of each of our own market should occasion arise for their use here, for the money employed in these foreign bills can be made available for home use on a moment's notice by the simple process of their discount abroad. For this reason this employment of funds in Europe establishes a strong reserve available whenever use for it develops in our own market. A continuance of this outward movement suggests that at least the larger proportion of the time loans lately made by American bankers to Berlin and other European borrowers will be allowed to run instead of being called home when they mature during the next few weeks. At all events the present indication is that this market will continue for some time to come in a position to respond to European demands for money.

The ease with which such small, new issues of securities as are now coming on the market are being placed is another indication of the abundance of money which is being emphasized by reason of the indifference which the public continues to display toward the stock market. In yesterday's trading on the Stock Exchange the volume of dealings was considerably curtailed, while in the case of the principal active stocks the course of the market was reversed, as compared with the previous day. There was no indication of any material change in the character of the bulk of the trading, the downward movement in the morning, followed by a recovery in the afternoon, being apparently the result of professional operations rather than of any outside incentive. A report that prosecution of the United States Steel Corporation was about to be undertaken by the Federal Government was circulated in the morning, only to bring out a denial from the Attorney General that any suit against the company had been filed. The reorganization of the American Tobacco Company was much discussed during the day in the light of the avowed opposition to the plan of the Government's special counsel in the case, although there was a disposition to reserve judgment as to the attitude which the Government will take at the hearing before the Circuit Court pending an expression of opinion from the Attorney General himself. Not until the attitude of the court in respect to the opposition which is now being raised against the American Tobacco plan is made known will a definite indication be had of the probable importance of these objections, but meanwhile the signs of growing opposition to the plan is being regretted in Wall Street.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Considerable selling appeared in the opening dealings on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. The pressure upon prices did not continue, however, the market becoming dull and gradually steadying, with rallying tendencies developing in the afternoon, under which quotations generally touched in the closing dealings their highest of the day.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

MINING SHARES NEGLECTED

Prices in This Department Move Narrowly Under Restricted Trading—Chicago Elevated 5s Make Gain.

Curb stocks were irregular yesterday and price movements narrow. Braden Copper sold off from 4⅞ to 4¾ on sales of 1,200. British Columbia rose from 3⅝ to 3¾ on transactions of 200. Giroux rose from 3¾ to 3 13-16, and Greene-Cananea and Inspiration reported no sales. The bond list, with the exception of Chicago Elevated 5s, was stationary. The 5s, however, rose from 97⅛ to 97⅝ on sales of $2,000.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

General Setback in London—Prices Lower in Paris and Berlin.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—Money was in good supply and discount rates were steady to-day.

The stock market failed to maintain yesterday's strength. Realizing, owing to a lack of improvement in the Turkish-Italian situation, and profit-taking caused a general setback, from Consols to Kaffirs. Chinese bonds were exceptions to the weakness and closed higher.

American securities opened quiet and steady. A fractional advance followed, but prices eased off under realizing before noon. Later, Continental and Wall Street selling caused further losses, and the market closed weak.

Money, 1¼@1¾ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 3⅜@3½ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for three months' bills is 3⅝@3¾ per cent.

Gold premium at Madrid, 9; at Lisbon, 9.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—Prices closed lower on the Bourse to-day.

Three per cent. rentes, 94f. 7½c. for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f. 16½c. for checks.

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—Trading was dull and prices were weak on the Boerse to-day.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 50½ pfennigs for checks.

Money, 4 per cent.

BOND SALE, CITY OF NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

Sealed proposals will be received by the undersigned at his office in the City Hall, corner of Mechanic and Main Streets, New Rochelle, N. Y., until Tuesday evening, October 24, 1911, at quarter past eight o'clock, for the purchase of all or any part of $88,000.00 Registered four and one-half per cent. (4½%) School Bonds, Series of 1911, of the City of New Rochelle, Westchester County, N. Y., of $1,000.00 each. The bonds will be dated September 1, 1911, numbered from 1 to 88, inclusive, and mature in the order of their numbering four bonds on May 1, 1920, and four bonds on the first day of each May thereafter until all of the said bonds have been fully paid;

Also for the purchase of any part or all of $85,000.00 Registered four and one-half per cent. (4½%) North Avenue Widening Bonds, Series of 1911, of the City of New Rochelle, Westchester County, N. Y., of $1,000.00 each. The bonds will be dated October 1, 1911, numbered from 15 to 99, inclusive, and mature in the order of their numbering five bonds on May 1, 1916, and five bonds on the first day of each May thereafter until all of the said bonds have been fully paid;

Also for the purchase of any part or all of $29,000.00 Registered four and one-half per cent. (4½%) Bonds for the redemption of Construction Certificates, Series of 1911, of the City of New Rochelle, Westchester County, N. Y., of $1,000.00 each. The bonds will be dated October 1, 1911, numbered from 1 to 29, inclusive, and mature in the order of their numbering four bonds on May 1, 1914; four bonds on the first day of each May thereafter to and including May 1, 1919, and five bonds on May 1, 1920;

Also for the purchase of any part or all of $9,000.00 Registered four and one-half per cent. (4½%) Sewer Bonds, Series of 1911, of the City of New Rochelle, Westchester County, N. Y., of $1,000.00 each. The bonds will be dated August 1, 1911, numbered from 1 to 9, inclusive, and mature in the order of their numbering, one bond on May 1, 1916, and one bond on the first day of each May thereafter until all of the said bonds have been fully paid.

Interest is payable semi-annually on the first day of May and November in each year. The principal and interest is payable at the office of the Treasurer of the City of New Rochelle. Interest will, at the request of the registered holder, be remitted by mail in New York exchange.

The bonds will be engraved under the supervision of and certified as to their genuineness by the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, and the legality of the bonds is being examined by Caldwell, Masslich and Reed, Esqs., of New York City, whose opinion will be furnished to the purchaser.

Each proposal must be accompanied by a deposit of cash or a certified check drawn to the order of the City of New Rochelle upon a solvent banking corporation located within the State of New York or upon any National bank for two percentum of the par value of the bonds for which the proposal is made. No bid for less than par and accrued interest will be considered. All proposals must be upon the printed form which will be furnished upon request by the undersigned. Accrued interest is to be paid by the purchaser. Delivery is to be made at the office of the Treasurer of the City of New Rochelle on November 1, 1911, at ten o'clock in the forenoon. The right is reserved to reject all proposals.

By authority and direction of the Council of the City of New Rochelle, N. Y., dated New Rochelle, N. Y., October 9, 1911.

EDWARD STETSON GRIFFING,
Comptroller.

The Wall Street Journal

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Western View of Trust Situation.

"The standard of corporation management in the United States," says The Tootle-Lemon National Bank of St. Joseph, Mo., in its mid-October review, "undoubtedly compares well with the standard of management represented by the large enterprises of any other country, and is certainly as honest. It is time, therefore, that the corporation managers should be heard, and that the men responsible for the upbuilding of the immense business combinations in the United States should give their testimony in no uncertain way. What most people who criticise prevailing conditions fail to realize is that the business men of the United States are working out new problems and that we are fast, although gradually, formulating a system which shall provide adequate supervision for the large industrial combinations, and at the same time allow them free play in strengthening their business connections in all parts of the world." The wisdom of putting large industrial corporations under Government supervision is commending itself even to a good many people in Wall Street, who see in more adequate Government supervision the only satisfactory solution of what is described as a conflict between business and law as it is now being enforced.

Steel Suit Rumors.

Early in the day the rumor was circulated in the financial district that the Government had prepared a suit against the United States Steel Corporation, seeking its dissolution under the Sherman law. This was but a repetition of previous reports, but it was made use of, nevertheless, in connection with heavy selling of United States Steel until a dispatch from Omaha brought a denial from Attorney General Wickersham that the Government had filed any suit against the Steel Corporation. Meanwhile the company's stock was by far more active than any other in the list, the dealings, in fact, exceeding the combined trading in Union Pacific and Reading. At the low point of the day the stock was selling at 1⅝ points under Monday's close, but the afternoon recovery was sufficiently rapid to bring about a fractional net gain for the day.

Facilities for Shippers on Rival Line

An echo of the invasion of the Pacific Coast territory by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul through the construction of the Puget Sound line is contained in the decision handed down by the Inter-State Commerce Commission yesterday in the Tacoma Eastern case. That road was formerly a party to a contract with the Northern Pacific, which provided for through traffic arrangements between these two roads. When the St. Paul built to the Pacific Coast it acquired control of the Tacoma Eastern and the Northern Pacific canceled its contract with that road. The shippers on the small lines objected to the loss of through rates over the Northern Pacific, and the Commerce Commission has now decided in favor of the shippers. The apparent result of the decision is to oblige the Northern Pacific to give practically the same facilities to the shippers on a line owned by its rival, the St. Paul, as it gives to the shippers on its own line.

Risks of the Curb.

Brokers who elect to trade in the outside market have to stand all kinds of weather, and they usually accept what the heavens send without complaint. The patience of a little group at the upper end of the roped inclosure gave way yesterday, however, when it began to rain green paint. They complained to a policeman, who discovered that a man engaged in painting a window sill on the twelfth floor of the Broad-Exchange Building had spilled a few quarts of thin paint into the wind.

Neglected Stocks.

It will be a great strain off the mind of the customers' man, whose business it is to keep the patrons of the office interested in stocks, when the world's series is over. It is hard to draw attention to the possibilities dormant in a sluggish market when a ticker in the corner of the room is reeling off current history in its most interesting form.

Chinese Troubles in Cotton Market.

One of the bear arguments against cotton prices based on the unrest in China assumed concrete form yesterday in reports from Manchester of cancellation of orders because of the rebellion in Southern China. These rumors had much to do with the break of cotton through 9 cents a pound. For the first time since January, 1909, cotton for any option sold below the nine-cent level. In that month the October option, which sold down to 8.96 yesterday, reached as low a point as 8.59. The January option sold yesterday at 8.95, which was the lowest since the quotation of 8.88 for January cotton of January, 1909. In that year cotton stayed under 10 cents until the middle of April. Thereafter it advanced pretty consistently until by November it had sold above 15 cents.

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN

ANOTHER CHICAGO MERGER

Surface Lines to be Combined Now, and Ultimately with Elevated Roads.

Tuesday's stock transactions were unimportant on most of the Exchanges in other cities.

Demand for bonds slightly under the market is fairly good in Baltimore, but holders show little inclination to make concessions. Stocks are neglected. Seaboard 4s were firmer yesterday and reached the price prevailing before the recent decline.

Indiana was weak in Boston and the cause of its decline was not known until Tuesday afternoon, when announcement was made that an assessment of $1.50 had been made on the stock. The other coppers were dull. Steel was the most active stock on the board.

Trading was in moderate volume on the Chicago Stock Exchange and price changes for the most part were inconsequential. Sears-Roebuck, Commonwealth Edison, and the Can issues receded slightly, and there were small increases in Swift, Match and Hart, Schaffner pfd. Sales of Chicago Elevated Railways common were made at 27, a rise of 3 points from the last previous price. The preferred stock sold yesterday at 90, an advance of 2 points. Bids of 28 were made yesterday morning for Chicago Railways series 2 certificates, but nothing was offered under 30. The last sale of the No. 2s occurred at 27. Henry A. Blair is expected back from Europe in a few days, and his return will be followed by a number of conferences with interests involved in the proposed merger of the surface line traction companies. The ultimate purpose is to amalgamate all of the transportation lines of the city. At the meeting of the Directors of the Commonwealth Edison Company the date of the annual meeting was changed to February, and the date for the closing of the fiscal year was advanced from Sept. 30 to Dec. 31, so as to make it conform to the period for which a report to the Bureau of Corporations of the Federal Government is required.

New strength developed in several quarters of the Philadelphia market. Lehigh Valley was the bright feature of the local list during the morning. While the rest of the market displayed a hesitating tendency with marked weakness in the other arbitrage shares, "Valley" was bid up to 82. It eased off a trifle later, but still held very firmly above last night's closing.

Yesterday transactions on the various out-of-town Exchanges as reported to THE NEW YORK TIMES were as follows:

TYPEFOUNDERS DO BETTER.

Report Says Dullness in Business Has Passed—Late Months Were Good.

The annual report of the American Typefounders Company for the year ended Aug. 31 shows net profits of $331,803, compared with $323,082 in the previous year. The payment of dividends of $300,000 left a surplus of $31,803, compared with $23,082 in 1910. Added to the previous surplus the year's surplus was $810,268. The year's net profits, after allowing for 7 per cent. on the $2,000,000 preferred stock was equal to 4.79 per cent. on the $4,000,000 common stock.

The President in his report to stockholders says that although sales in the first months of the year showed an increase they showed a falling off later due to the "depression in general trade and business and to the drought in certain sections of the West and Southwest, which materially affected the sales of our houses in those territories."

"This dullness in general business," he says, "is now less manifest and our sales for the months of August and September have nearly equaled those of the corresponding months of the previous fiscal year. While it is not thought that sales will show any considerable increase for some months, it is believed that there will be a material improvement during the coming year."

METAL MARKET REPORTS.

At the Metal Exchange yesterday decided firmness was shown in copper, which improved nearly ⅛c in the bid and ⅛c in the asking price. Tin was heavy at a recession of ⅝c in the bid and ½c in the asking price. The closing bid and asked prices follow:

	Tuesday. Bid.	Tuesday. Asked.	Monday. Bid.	Monday. Asked.
Standard copper—
Spot	12.00	12.25	11.80	11.90

REORGANIZATION AND MERGER.

TO THE HOLDERS OF:

First and Refunding Mortgage Twenty-Year Gold Bonds, Six Per Cent. Gold Debentures, One-Year Six Per Cent. Secured Gold Notes, and Certificates for Shares of Preferred and Common Stock of

SOUTHERN IRON & STEEL COMPANY,

ALABAMA CONSOLIDATED COAL & IRON COMPANY

The undersigned, who heretofore constituted separate Committees, one for the reorganization of Southern Iron & Steel Company and its merger with Alabama Consolidated Coal & Iron Company and the other to represent the security-holders of Southern Iron & Steel Company, have now agreed upon a plan and have accordingly merged, forming the undersigned Committee

It is the unanimous judgment of the members of the Committee, as a result of investigations of the properties of both Companies, that they will both be largely benefited by the proposed merger and that the basis of consolidation is just to all interested security-holders.

The plan thus agreed upon has already received the approval of holders of large amounts of securities of both Companies of all classes, and has been lodged, together with an Agreement dated October 11, 1911, under which securities may be deposited with BANKERS TRUST COMPANY (the Depositary under the Plan and Agreement), No. 7 Wall Street, in the City of New York; copies of the Plan and Agreement may be had on application to the Depositary, or to the Secretary of the Committee.

Holders of the securities above mentioned are hereby invited to deposit their securities under the Plan and Agreement. IMMEDIATE CONCERTED ACTION IS ESSENTIAL to the preservation of the rights of those interested in the properties, and, for that reason, the time for the deposit of securities is limited to NOVEMBER 6, 1911, after which date no securities will be received, except in the discretion of the Committee and upon such terms as it may approve. Bonds, debentures and notes must be deposited in negotiable form, the bonds with the coupon due April 1, 1911, and all subsequent coupons attached, the debentures with the coupon due February 1, 1911, and all subsequent coupons attached, and the notes with the coupon due April 1, 1911, and all subsequent coupons attached. The notes must be accompanied by the bonds pledged to secure them bearing the coupon maturing April 1, 1911, and all subsequent coupons attached. Certificates for stock must be properly endorsed for transfer and duly stamped.

The Depositary will issue to all depositors certificates of deposit transferable by assignment.

HOARDING BY BANKS A CAUSE OF PANIC

This, Stewart Browne Says, Is the Objection to Aldrich Plan, Which Does Not Stop It.

SMALL BANKS ATTACKED

Isidor Straus Defends Them and Argues That the New Monetary System Will Give Them Stability.

The Aldrich plan for a National Reserve Association was enthusiastically indorsed by practically all the bankers and merchants who spoke before the final session of the sub-committee of the National Monetary Commission at the Hotel Plaza yesterday. Few of them could offer modifications even of isolated provisions of the plan. The committee adjourned last evening to meet to-morrow in Chicago and thereafter hold hearings in the chief cities of the Middle West and West.

Edward D. Page of the Currency Committee of the Merchants' Association indorsed the plan in behalf of his association and merchants in general. Mr. Page advised that every bank be obliged to carry the same reserve against its note issues as against its deposit liabilities to the public.

"The interchangeability of bank deposits—which are a particular form of liabilities—into banknotes—which are a general form of liabilities—should not be interfered with," he said. "I am, therefore, not in favor of the provision of the plan which places an annual tax on currency issues. Such a tax interferes with the free exchange of deposit liabilities into note liabilities. Moreover, it puts an additional tax on the business community at a time when, because of competition and the close margin on which business is done, an increased rate of interest would clog industry here and impede our foreign commerce.

"In general, however, I believe the plan as proposed would stabilize and modernize our rate of interest instead of allowing the present alternate fluctuations from an artificially high to an artificially low rate. In so far it would be to the advantage both of our manufacturers and merchants. At present a merchant of unquestioned credit pays in the course of a year interest ranging from 3 to 6 per cent., whereas in France, for example, a merchant pays 2½ per cent. all the year around.

"The plan takes admirable care also of the fluidity of exchange, which, in the panic of 1907 and often even since then became quite congealed."

Mr. Page declared absurd the fears expressed by James J. Hill that the proposed National Reserve Association could be controlled by Wall Street interests.

"I made a little calculation on the supposition that there would be 20,000 instead of the actual 28,000 banks in the association," he said, "and I found that, even so, it would require $495,000,000 to control the three-fifths of the directorate of the association, who are elected by a numerical vote of the banks—an expense that would hardly be worth Wall Street's while for the rather illusory advantages Mr. Hill seems to see in such control. In order to control the remaining two-fifths of the directorate, who are elected on the basis of the capitalization of the constituent banks, an additional $1,500,000,000 would be needed. And for these two billions of dollars, even if that sum could be raised, Wall Street could achieve absolutely nothing; inasmuch as the National Reserve Association is prohibited from loaning its funds on stocks and bonds, or for such purposes as Wall Street would favor."

Robert E. Kent, President of the Merchants' Bank of Passaic, indorsed the Aldrich plan unqualifiedly, as providing additional facilities for small banks and small borrowers, who at present, he said, are pinched in procuring loans, while the big bankers or big borrowers get them comparatively easily. He thought the plan remarkably well guarded against political or Wall Street influence.

Stewart Browne of Stewart Browne & Co., 170 Broadway, provoked quite a vigorous protest from Isidor Straus, who appeared as representative of the Association for the Promotion of Banking, of which he is National Treasurer, and of whose New York branch he is President.

Mr. Browne declared that the country suffers far less from inelasticity of currency than from the hoarding of currency when needed, and that the Aldrich plan does nothing to prevent such hoarding.

"Even if you double or treble the present volume of currency," he said, "it will still be hoarded, since bankers in time of panic use no individual reflection, but rather the mob psychology of men participating in a lynching bee. They are absolutely irresponsible. Even to-day there must be hoarding, for we find that banks have $308,000,000 of gold in their vaults, and the public $282,000,000 in its pockets; that banks have $468,000,000 in gold certificates and the public $334,000,000 in its pockets; that the United States has notes amounting to $236,000,000 in banks, and the public $102,000,000 in its pockets."

The best remedy for such hoarding, he said, would be the limiting of the multiplication of small banks, which, in the main, he said, do this panicky hoarding.

"That is the very thing the commission ought not to do!" cried Mr. Straus. "We must try to remove the prejudice which the small country banks already have toward the concentration of power, and therefore not curtail but encourage the number of small banks and strengthen them, so that when they reach the end of their tether they can get all the help they need from this National reserve fund."

"Is not the reason for the small banker's hoarding of money the fear that if he gives out that money he will not be able to get more?" inquired Congressman Edward B. Vreeland. "We are trying to remedy that by giving him a place where he can get cash or credit when he needs it."

Mr. Browne admitted that the Aldrich plan was by far the best presented.

"But I think it should not prohibit loans by the National Reserve Association on corporate stocks and bonds," he said.

"That prohibition," cried Mr. Straus, "is the strongest point in the whole plan. I wouldn't have that taken out for the world! I approve of the plan most of all for bearing stamped on its face absolute freedom from speculation in Wall Street, in prohibiting the use of the National Reserve fund for speculative purposes."

Mr. Browne wanted to know why something couldn't be done to utilize the billion or more of dollars lying in the Treasury at Washington, for the issuance of notes or otherwise.

"Gold is a purely mental conception, a relic of barbarism, and will disappear as a medium of exchange ultimately, replaced by credit currency entirely," he said.

"Mental?" asked Mr. Straus, "even in vaults of a bank as the basis for its paper? A mental concept? I call it sentimental!"

Mr. Vreeland asked whether Mr. Straus did not agree with him that the proposed National Reserve Association, though called by its opponents a central bank, was in fact, owing to its management which was representative of the whole country, the very reverse of a central bank such as that of Jackson's time. Mr. Straus said he agreed with Mr. Vreeland.

"I cannot tell you how greatly I appreciate the splendid work the commission has done. You have enlightened our wisest financiers with the documents you brought here after your study of the banking systems abroad," he said. "Despite possible defects here and there, you have, on the whole, outlined a basis of remedying the terrible conditions underlying our entire system. You cannot go too far in making the small banker understand that the plan contemplates above all helping him in his business rather than driving him out.

"It gives him all the banking facilities he has at present, and in addition the facilities which his central reserve agent in the panic of 1907 refused him. From the moment this plan goes into operation the United States will loom up as the world's chief trade centre. Heretofore the foreign banker has held—and rightly, too—that a time bill on the United States or on New York locked up his money until maturity; whereas a time bill on London was practically cash. From the moment this plan is adopted, that condition is eliminated. New York can never be an exchange centre until we have facilities such as your plan provides. Thereafter New York will not only equal but supplant London as the exchange centre of the world."

WORRY DROVE HIM AWAY.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Oct. 17.—Herman Keystone, who has conducted a small grocery and was Postmaster at Emerson, six miles north of Hackensack, on the New Jersey & New York Railroad, left home late last night, leaving a note for his wife to say he had gone to seek his fortune.

He was sitting in the kitchen reading a newspaper when his wife retired at about 10 o'clock. As the couple occupy different rooms Mrs. Keystone did not miss him during the night, but when she arose early this morning and found the lamp burning as she left it in the hall she became alarmed. Her husband's bed had not been disturbed. Going downstairs she found that boards had been nailed across the doors. These were soon removed, and Elsie, her 11-year-old daughter, hurried to the home of Justice M. H. Angell, one of the Postmaster's bondsmen, and told him what had happened.

Under a handkerchief on the table Mrs. Keystone found three letters, one address "To my wife" and the others to May, the aldest child, and Justice Angell.

The letter to Mrs. Keystone read as follows:

> Dear Alice: My dear, dear wife. Try and forgive me for the step I am going to take, but if I stay longer I will go crazy and might do something desperate. That everlasting worry for money drives me out of my mind. I have not enough capital to run a paying business and this is such a town, besides.
>
> I am going off trying to raise some money, and then we will have a home of our own and not depend on other people. Dear Alice, I think you will get along for a while. I left you all instructions about rent and interest. Try and sell as soon as possible. Do nothing, but take care of our children. Make them do their lessons. A good education is the best, and maybe the only thing, we can give them.
>
> Take good care of yourself for the children's sake, they only have you just now. I cannot write any more. Forgive your loving husband, HERMAN.

Part of Keystone's letter to his daughter read:

> I will try to get a home ready for you, but it is quite a distance away, and it will be in a better climate than New Jersey. I hope we will be all united again next Summer. Good bye, dear May. Always be a good girl and a help to your mamma. Kiss mamma, Elsie, and Herman for me. YOUR PAPA.

"Hard luck seemed to follow my husband since we were married," said Mrs. Keystone. "He never drank nor smoked, and always worked hard for our three children and me. His feed business failed. Last Summer the Post Office was robbed of $275, and he had to make that good. In July our horse was killed on the railroad, and a month later fire ruined his store in Hillsdale. It was no wonder that he became despondent, but I wish he had taken me into his confidence."

Justice Angell was left the combination of the safe, but it could not be opened, and until the Federal Inspector arrives to-morrow it cannot be determined whether the accounts are all right.

Keystone is 50 years old, and has been Postmaster for two years. No one knows how he left Emerson. He took no extra clothes with him.

RAILWAY FRANCHISES CUT.

Court Reduces Valuation of Manhattan Railway by $1,311,869.

ALBANY, Oct. 17.—A reduction of $1,311,869 in the valuation of the special franchises of the Manhattan Railway Company in Manhattan Borough and a slight reduction on the assessments of the company's special franchises in the Bronx Borough, is ordered by a decision of the Court of Appeals to-day.

The State Board of Tax Commissioners assessed the Manhattan Borough franchises at $75,000,000 and the Bronx franchises at $3,500,000. The lower courts ordered the former reduced to $66,661,930, and upheld the latter assessment.

The Court of Appeals determines that the rate at which the net income should be capitalized should be on the basis of 7 per cent.

Court Holds Hospital Not Liable for Ambulance Injuring Cyclist.

ALBANY, Oct. 17.—The Court of Appeals to-day reversed the judgment of the lower courts awarding George A. Kellogg $30,000 damages and costs against the Church Charity Foundation of Long Island, which maintains St. John's Hospital.

Kellogg, while riding a bicycle upon the right side of a street in Brooklyn, was run down by an ambulance owned by the hospital. He lost the sight of one of his eyes. A hospital surgeon was riding in the ambulance at the time of the accident. The Court of Appeals holds that the driver of the ambulance was a servant of the livery stable keeper where the ambulance was kept, and the driver was "subject primarily to his control."

Judge Willard Bartlett, writing the opinion, says:

"No liability for the driver's negligence toward the plaintiff can be imputed to the defendant in the absence of proof that the ambulance surgeon participated in such negligence."

The opinion, however, adds that "it must now be regarded as settled that a charitable corporation is not exempt from liability for a tort against a stranger because of the fact that it holds its property to be applied to purposes of charity."

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Pressure is low throughout the country, except in New England and the North Pacific States, with generally rain over the eastern half of the country, but with fair weather over the western half, the clearing weather extending during Tuesday into the Mississippi Valley and the upper lake region.

It is cooler from the lake region to the Gulf. In the Southwest and Central West it is warmer. There will be rain in the Atlantic States, followed by generally fair weather Thursday. Over the remainder of the country fair weather will prevail Wednesday and Thursday. Moderate temperatures may be expected.

Winds along the New England Coast will be moderate to brisk east over the north and brisk to high east over southern portion; Middle Atlantic Coast, brisk to moderate high east; South Atlantic Coast, moderate to brisk northwest, except variable on the Southeast Florida Coast.

Steamships departing Wednesday for European ports will have increasing east winds with rain to the Grand Banks.

FORECASTS FOR TO-DAY AND THURSDAY.

Eastern New York and New Jersey—Rain Wednesday; brisk to high east to south winds. Thursday fair.

New England—Rain Wednesday; brisk to high east winds. Thursday fair.

3 A. M.	57	57	3 P. M.	63	58
6 A. M.	54	56	6 P. M.	65	57
9 A. M.	60	56	9 P. M.	61	58
12 M.	65	58	12 P. M.	58

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 58; for the corresponding date last year it was 61; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 55.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 57; at 8 P. M. it was 58. Maximum temperature, 62 degrees at 5 P. M.; minimum, 55 degrees at 6 A. M. Humidity, 89 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 94 per cent. at 8 P. M.

CUMMINS ON TRIAL; SEVEN IN JURY BOX

SPECIAL PANEL HALF GONE

Effort Made by Whitman to Exclude Depositors in Banks in Which Cummins Had an Interest.

The trial of William J. Cummins, Chairman of the Executive Committee and dominant factor in the defunct Carnegie Trust Company, for grand larceny was begun yesterday before Supreme Court Justice Vernon M. Davis in the County Court House.

Cummins was indicted on March 21 on several counts, based on note transactions involving $335,000. It was charged that he borrowed this money from the old Van Norden Trust Company and the Nineteenth Ward Bank in the Spring of 1910, ostensibly for the Carnegie Trust Company, and converted it to his personal use. The count on which he is being tried relates to one of these transactions, involving $140,000. This amount was paid in four checks by the Nineteenth Ward Bank, and these checks, it is alleged, were immediately indorsed over to Cummins's personal account.

Following the exposure of the Carnegie Trust's affairs, its President, Joseph B. Reichmann, and Charles H. Hyde, then City Chamberlain, were also indicted. Reichmann has been tried and convicted, and is now out on bail pending appeal. The trial of Hyde is expected to follow that of Cummins.

After Cummins's counsel, Max D. Steuer, had asked for the dismissal of the indictment, which was denied, the rest of the day was spent in examining talesmen, of whom 150 had been summoned from the special panel. Just half of these were put through their paces, and when court adjourned, shortly after 5 o'clock, there were seven men in the jurybox. These were Estey F. Dayton, manufacturer, 371 Edgecombe Avenue; Edmund Adams, grocery salesman, 171 West Tenth Street; J. Holmes Butler, merchant, 1 Union Square; Caleb B. Hunt, advertising, 81 West Tenth Street; William Sherwood, roofing, 1,021 Third Avenue; C. P. Kay, plaster, 207 West Eighty-seventh Street, and Stuart C. Alger, granite, 250 West Ninety-fourth Street.

The questions asked by Mr. Steuer indicated that the defense would take the ground that Cummins was the victim of a "Wall Street conspiracy." They were asked if they were acquainted with any of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., and especially H. P. Davidson; former State Superintendents of Banks Clark Williams and Orion H. Cheney, Jordan J. Rollins, former attorney for the State Banking Department; Joseph G. Robin, or Bradley Martin, Jr.

For his part, District Attorney Whitman wanted to know if the talesmen had been depositors in the Carnegie Trust Company, Nineteenth Ward Bank, Twelfth Ward Bank, Van Norden Trust Company, Northern Bank, or Washington Savings Bank, and if they were ever acquainted with or had business dealings with a long list of individuals and enterprises, some in New York and some in Nashville, where Cummins's early operations took place.

Included in this list were Harry Anderson of Nashville, Alfalfa Feed Milling Company, Los Angeles; Bank, Loan and Trust Company of Alabama, David Homer Bates, Irby Bennett of Nashville, L. F. Bradshaw of Nashville, A. B. Chandler, Watkins Crockett, George C. Cummins, John D. Cummins, Cummins, Bennett & Co., Cassetty Oil Company of Nashville, Martin J. Condon, Continental Baking Powder Company of Nashville, George D. Crabbs of Cincinnati, J. L. Dibell Coal and Coke Company of Nashville, Enterprise Soap Works of Nashville, J. C. Houtz & Co. of Los Angeles, Sam H. Kress, Liston L. Lewis, Michael J. Lynam, Madison Trust Company, Merchants and Manufacturers' Security Company, Charles Arthur Moore, Jr., Nashville Union Stock Yards Company, B. F. O'Neil, Wallace, Idaho; Platt Iron Works, Dayton, Ohio; Joseph B. Reichmann, W. E. Remsbart, B. M. Robinson, Cincinnati; Ryan-Parker Consolidated Company, Tennessee Packing and Provision Company, Nashville; Tennessee Packing and Stock Yards Company, Nashville; Herbert Turrell, Warner M. Van Norden, Veta (Col.) Mining and Smelting Company, Ossie J. Walsh, W. K. Weaver, Los Angeles; Wholesale Merchants' Warehouse Company, and C. P. Wofford, Nashville.

Assistant District Attorneys Frank Moss and John K. Clark and Joseph A. Broderick, the State Banking Examiner, who is said to have discovered the involved condition of the Carnegie Trust Company and Joseph G. Robin's Northern Bank and Washington Savings Bank, will assist Mr. Whitman in prosecuting Cummins.

It is expected that the jury will be completed to-day and the presentation of the case begun.

Reports Mexican Railways Sound.

President E. N. Brown of the National Railways of Mexico said yesterday that general conditions in his country are good, with underlying factors sound. He reported that active financing and new construction work will be deferred until the Spring of 1912, but consideration is now being given a project for building two important branch lines, one from the main line to the Pacific Coast and the other to a terminus on the Gulf of Mexico. Mr. Brown said that the Mexican Government still controlled a majority interest in the railways.

FRISCO LINE INTO MOBILE.

Absorbs New Orleans, Mobile & Chicago, with 400 Miles of Road.

MOBILE, Oct. 17.—It is reported upon reliable authority that the Frisco has become the owner of the New Orleans, Mobile & Chicago Railroad Company. This is a line of 400 miles, having connections with the Illinois Central, the Mobile & Ohio, the Louisville & Nashville, the Southern Railway, and the Frisco. With the latter line it connects 375 miles north of Mobile, giving to the Frisco a direct Mobile line from Kansas City, Oklahoma, Memphis, and all territory west of the Mississippi River to Mobile.

The New Orleans, Mobile & Chicago is a reorganization of the Mobile, Jackson & Kansas City and the Gulf & Chicago, whose properties were sold under foreclosure in August, 1909. The company recently purchased nineteen acres in this city, enabling it to reach the business centre. The city has granted the company franchises to build and operate the necessary track across the streets within the property acquired. The company has outstanding $8,075,000 of common stock and $2,000,000 preferred, besides $12,000,000 of bonds.

COMMODITY MARKETS.

WHEAT.—Wheat was very dull early, but about steady, becoming strong in the late afternoon, and closed at the extreme advance, with prices ⅛c to ⅞c net higher. The principal advance was in Chicago December, said to be covering of shorts. Armour was reported a good buyer early. The advance in the face of the news of the day was unexpected by the traders, who were generally sellers, owing to the bearish reports. Weather conditions were better in the American and Canadian Northwest, with liberal receipts at Winnipeg and at American points, although the actual receipts were 600,000 bushels less than for the corresponding day last week. The increase in the visible was very large, 3,488,000 bushels in the United States and $4,550,000 bushels in Canada, a total gain of 8,028,000 bushels, following a gain of 6,453,000 bushels the previous week. The world's total gained 9,338,000 bushels. The United States' visible is 66,712,000 bushels, against 48,322,000 bushels last year; Canadian, 15,921,000 bushels, against 18,418,000 bushels, and European, 83,700,000 bushels, against 110,900,000 bushels. Western cash markets were firm, with fair milling trade. Exporters were doing very little, however, and export sales of only six loads were reported, mainly Manitoba wheat, at outports. Foreign markets were irregular, some slightly higher, others slightly lower, while the report on the new crop conditions was generally favorable throughout Europe. Cash wheat was firm, with No. 2 quoted $1.01¼, free on board; No. 1 Northern, $1.18⅝; No. 2 hard Winter, $1.10¼; No. 1 Manitoba, $1.11.

CORN.—The corn market was quiet and slightly easier early, but hardened late, closing at the best of the day. The weather map showed general rains east of the Mississippi, but there were clearing conditions west of the river and generally fair weather was indicated. The visible supply showed a decrease of 1,403,000 bushels, following a decrease of 1,203,000 bushels the previous week. The interior receipts continue fair, and in two days have gained about 200,000 bushels, compared with last week, while there has been quite a falling off in interior shipments. Cash corn, however, is very firm and is held at increasing premiums on account of the expected inferior quality of the new corn. The early movement of the new corn shows a very large percentage of moisture. Cash corn was firm; No. 2, quoted at 79½c, elevator, domestic, and 77½c, free on board.

OATS were quiet and fractionally easier at the opening, with some selling on the receipts, but later prices steadied, with some buying, on the strength of other grains and firmness of cash oats. Western receipts of oats were fairly liberal, comparing well with last year. The visible supply showed an increase of 1,963,000 bushels, including Canada, following a decrease of 425,000 bushels the preceding week. Cash oats were steady, with standards and No. 3 white, 52½c, and No. 2 white, 53c.

PROVISIONS.—Trade in hog products was quiet, with the market opening lower on a dull live-hog situation and larger receipts, the total interior movement being about 86,000. Later prices steadied. The semi-monthly estimate showed provision stocks at Chicago of 9,262 barrels of pork, against 9,093 barrels Oct. 1; lard, 52,282 tierces, against 70,730 tierces, and ribs, 8,260,000 pounds, against 10,147,000 pounds.

COTTONSEED OIL.

There is little change in the situation, with decided absence of aggressiveness among both bulls and bears. Sentiment is generally in favor of somewhat lower prices at this time, but it is apparent that offerings both at the South and in the local future market are well absorbed. There have been no tenders on October to date and it continues difficult to obtain spot oil. The decline in the cotton market to new low levels was without influence. Crude quoted at 4.20@4.27.

COTTON.

Initial gains, with October 20 points higher and other deliveries averaging 5@10 points advance, proved to be the high levels for the day, with a tremendous amount of selling encountered on the bulge. The list subsequently broke about ¼c per pound to below the 9c level, thereby establishing new low levels for several of the active options. Conspicuous in the depression was the bear leaders, with much selling by recent buyers. Demand, however, from the large shorts and prominent spot concerns seemingly was sufficient at those prices to cause a partial recovery, with claims that at around 9c some investment buying is noticeable.

The higher prices at the outset were brought about largely by the Liverpool cables, which were materially above expectations. The Continent was reported a good buyer in that market, and offerings for the actual from the South were lighter. Foreigners, however, were among the principal sellers during the progression of the downward movement, and cables were received stating that the rebellion in China was resulting in the cancelation of orders at Manchester. Other private advices were not disposed to accept so serious a view of the uprising in the Orient, but, considering the tenor of reports from the Far East, many conservative authorities were inclined to admit that a continuation of the revolution strongly suggested curtailment in the demand for cloths.

Furthermore, weather conditions were somewhat more favorable than had been anticipated. An area of low temperatures was reported in the Panhandle resulting in light frost at some points, but it was apparent that the temperatures were not injuriously low, while the official forecasts were for fair and warmer weather. Heavy rains in parts of the Eastern belt, with a local storm at Birmingham, 4½ inches of rain being reported, led to comparatively few complaints, with indications in that section also for clearing conditions. Rumors of a storm in the Caribbean Sea and the displaying of storm warnings off the Texas coast, with high winds, privately reported, did not cause much apprehension.

Movement of cotton is fairly liberal, but not extremely heavy when the optimistic estimates concerning the probable outturn this season are considered. Port receipts yesterday were about 98,000 bales, compared with 111,000 last week and 96,000 last year. Some interests maintain that, were the export demand materially above last year, this movement would be greater, while it is also believed that the holding by farmers will assert itself in the movement. Sentiment remains generally bearish, but with a disposition to observe the attitude of the South at the current levels, whether or not ability will be shown to care for accumulations as they occur. Yesterday Southern spot markets were unchanged to ¼c decline, and the local market quiet, 15c decline, with middlings 9.35c.

COFFEE.

Coffee market showed decided strength, especially for the near positions, and December again sold at 15 cents, equaling last week's high record, while the later positions were only a few points under recent high. The strength in the market is based largely on crop conditions in Brazil, where the present crop is apparently much under earlier estimates, while the prospects for the next crop are almost sensationally poor.

Prices showed a net gain of 30 to 38 points, with total sales of 168,500 bags. Havre closed at an advance of ¼@1 franc; Hamburg was ¼ to ¾ pfening lower, and both Rio and Santos were unchanged.

Spot coffee, 15⅞c for Rio No. 7.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—The Consular and Trade Report will note the following foreign trade opportunities. Further information regarding these may be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures, care of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C., giving the number of items referred to:

7,499. ELEVATORS.—An American Consular officer in a Latin-American country reports that a business man in his district desires to receive catalogues and full information regarding the following: (1) Automatic elevators, including those of the greatest possible carrying capacity; (2) hand-power elevators capable of lifting 1,000 pounds.

7,480. FRUIT JARS, BOTTLES, AND BOTTLING APPARATUS.—Communication from a business firm in Porto Rico states that it would like to enter into correspondence with American manufacturers of fruit jars, wine bottles, and bottling apparatus.

7,481. CRUDE RUBBER AND BUFFALO SKINS.—A report from an American Consular officer in Spain states that he has received a letter from a local business man requesting the names of American exporters or dealers in crude rubber for use in manufacturing rubber goods. He is also in the market for buffalo skins.

7,482. SHOE LEATHER AND SOAP.—A business firm in Spain has informed an American Consular officer that it desires to import American shoe leather and wishes to be put in touch with some large exporters of this article. The firm is also interested in American soaps.

7,483. STEEL OFFICE FURNITURE.—An American Consul in Mexico reports that the new office furniture at the Consulate has attracted considerable attention and is regarded with so much favor that it is possible that a number of sales of such furniture could be made in the near future.

7,484. AMERICAN LEATHER.—A foreign business man who is very anxious to import American leathers has expressed a desire to form connections with manufacturers in the United States as soon as possible. He is interested in all kinds of leather, such as vici, glazed kid, &c.

7,485. PERFORATING MACHINE.—An American business firm writes that it has received an inquiry from a firm in Australia for a machine for perforating paper designs used in embroidery, or for making perforated patterns or designs by perforating very fine needle holes through paper.

7,486. JELUTONG RUBBER CONCESSION.—The American Vice Consul General at Singapore, Straits Settlements, writes that he has received a [illegible] that he has [illegible] the collection of jelutong rubber from over 3,000,000 acres on the east coast of the Malay Peninsula.

BURLINGTON EARNINGS MORE

Colorado Southern, Another Hill Line, Shows Less Revenue.

The annual reports of two more Hill lines, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, which is jointly owned by the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific, and the Colorado & Southern, owned by the Burlington, were made public yesterday. The Burlington had gross earnings last year of $88,272,000, an increase of $403,000; expenses of $59,541,000 a decrease of $3,469,000, and surplus for dividends of $16,844,000, an increase of $3,535,000. The surplus is equivalent to 15.2 per cent. on the company's $110,839,000 of capital stock. Last year the road earned 12 per cent.

The Burlington was able to bring up its net earnings out of all proportion to the increase in revenues through heavy reductions in the expenditures for maintenance. From maintenance of way the company cut $3,319,000 and from maintenance of equipment $296,000. These reductions were made easy of accomplishment by the liberal expenditures of previous years.

The Colorado & Southern's gross revenues of $15,824,000 represented a decrease of $953,000 from last year, notwithstanding which expenses increased $529,000. The operating income after taxes was $4,978,000, a decrease of $436,000. The final surplus amounted to $2,298,000, out of which $1,200,000 was paid in dividends of 4 per cent. on each of the preferred issues and 2 per cent. on the common. One-half of the deficit of the Trinity & Brazos Valley, which is shared equally by the Colorado & Southern and the Rock Island Company, amounted to $482,000, leaving the Colorado & Southern with a balance of $315,000 from the year's operations.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

FRIED & BANOVITCH.—Judge Holt has appointed George C. Tuttle receiver for Fried & Banovitch, manufacturers of waists, at 23 West Twentieth Street, bond $1,000.

WILLIAM MICHELS of 1,583 Unionport Road, the Bronx, has filed a petition, with liabilities of $4,264 and no assets. He was formerly a saloonkeeper at 2,504 Eighth Avenue.

SIMON & CO.—Judge Holt has dismissed the petition in bankruptcy filed on April 29 against Kassel Simon, trading as Simon & Co., wholesale dealers in cotton goods at 62 Lispenard Street.

WILLIAM H. CLARK.—Harry and Margaret Clark, who did business under the name of William H. Clark, stationer, at 24 Gold Street, have filed a petition with liabilities of $8,259 and assets of $523.

KLEIN CLOTHING COMPANY.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Joseph Klein, who did business as the Klein Clothing Company, at 2,182 Third Avenue, and in Bridgeport, Conn., show liabilities $16,590 and assets $12,027.

MAX WIENER.—A petition has been filed against Max Wiener, wholesale dealer in ribbons and silks at 339 Grand Street, by these creditors: Herman Folk, $354; Max Kaufman, $250, and Hyman Charnay, $200. Judge Holt appointed Marcus Helfand receiver, and authorized him to continue business ten days.

AERIAL EQUIPMENT COMPANY.—A petition has been filed against the Aerial Equipment Company of 1,743 Broadway, seller of French motors and monoplanes in the United States, by Henri Ventre, a creditor, for $560 for commissions. Judge Holt appointed Robert H. Ewell receiver of the assets, estimated at $650. The liabilities exceed the assets by $2,000.

FORQUIGNON MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—A petition has been filed against the Forquignon Manufacturing Company, manufacturer of manicure supplies at 142 West Eighteenth Street, by John A. Hess of Philadelphia, creditor for $551. The assets are estimated at $5,000. A petition in bankruptcy was filed on Aug. 29 against the Forquignon Sales Company of 142 West Eighteenth Street.

ANDREW H. HOAG COMPANY.—A petition has been filed against the Andrew H. Hoag Company, manufacturer of electric and gas fixtures at 251 West Nineteenth Street, by these creditors: M. Schaffer Flaum Company, $746; Meta Warnke, $76, and Joseph Morrell, $10. Judge Hoyt appointed Henry B. Stimson receiver on application of Horwitz & Wiener, with authority to continue business thirty days. The liabilities are $14,000 and assets $4,000.

RENNER BROTHERS.—A petition has been filed against Isador and Jacob Renner, who compose the firm of Renner Brothers, jewelers, at 132 Rivington Street, by these creditors: Samuel Kaplan & Co., $700; Royal White, $66, and Charles S. Schmuckler, $229. Judge Holt appointed Edwin C. Ward receiver on application of Cass & Apfel, who stated that the liabilities are over $20,000 and assets about $3,500.

TOILETTES FASHION COMPANY.—A petition has been filed against the Toilettes Fashion Company of 238 Fifth Avenue, publisher of two magazines, Toilettes and Dry Goods, by these creditors: Alex V. A. Burlet, $5,000; Jennie T. Wandle, $1,500, and the Harding Photo Engraving Company, $2,400. Judge Holt appointed Frederic G. Lee receiver, with a bond of $5,000. He is President of the Broadway Trust Company, and his appointment was requested by the petitioning creditors and the Kiebold Press, a creditor for $12,000. The liabilities are said to be $26,000 and assets $10,000.

ST. GALLEN MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—Judge Holt has appointed John S. Davenport receiver for the St. Gallen Manufacturing Company, importer of laces at 476 Broadway, and for Morris G. Samuels of 16 West Third Street on the petitions filed last Saturday. Mr. Davenport was appointed receiver for M. G. Samuels & Co., (corporation,) wholesale dealers in hats at 16 West Third Street, on Oct. 7, and it was thought best to have the same receiver, as the affairs of the three concerns are closely connected. It was stated that the liabilities of the St. Gallen Manufacturing Company are nearly $137,000, exclusive of a contingent liability of $11,000 as indorser, and the asssets, consist of good accounts, $4,716, and merchandise, $56,535, all pledged or liened. The expert accountants reported that the liabilities of M. G. Samuels & Co., (corporation,) are nearly $175,000, and probable assets $58,095.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Frazee & Lederer Buy $500,000 Plot in Times Square Section for New Theatre—A $1,000,000 Project on Park Avenue—Quick Sales in the Midtown Section.

Times Square and Park Avenue supplied the leading features of interest in an active realty day yesterday. The Times Square deal involved the sale of the old Central Baptist Church property at 220 to 226 West Forty-second Street, having a frontage of 78 feet, to Harry H. Frazee of the theatrical firm of Frazee & Lederer and P. Chauncey Anderson. A. C. & L. A. Marks were the brokers, and the price paid was close to $500,000. The old church will be torn down and a new theatre will be erected at once.

In Park Avenue, one of the most desirable corners south of Fifty-ninth Street was sold for immediate improvement with a high-class apartment house. The deal is in line with the prediction made a short time ago, in view of the fact that the New York Central tracks from Fiftieth Street north are to be covered in conformity with the upper part of the avenue, that the blocks immediately south of Fifty-ninth Street would experience an era of improvement similar to the transformation that has remade Park Avenue above that street.

Moore & Wyckoff were the brokers in the deal. They sold for W. Emlen Roosevelt the northeast corner of Park Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street, a plot 100.5 on the avenue and 90 feet on the street. The property includes the premises at 401 to 405 Park Avenue and 101 to 109 East Fifty-fourth Street, occupied now by several old buildings used as flats. The immediate corner plot has been held at $300,000.

The new owners are having plans prepared by the architects, Cross & Cross, for a twelve-story apartment house, to be finished by October, 1912. There are to be two suites on a floor, consisting of eleven rooms, and there will also be some duplex apartments of seventeen rooms with five baths. The total investment, when completed, will represent fully $1,000,000. The rentals are to range from $5,000 to $7,000, making the proposed structure one of the highest class apartments on Park Avenue. Moore & Wyckoff will be agents for the building.

Only a few weeks ago E. Clifford Potter had plans filed for a large apartment adjoining the northeast corner of Fifty-third Street, just one block below, and in the near future he intends to improve the block front between Fifty-second and Fifty-third Streets, now covered by the old Steinway piano factory, with an apartment house to cost about $1,000,000. Mr. Potter paid nearly $1,000,000 for the block over a year ago.

In the same vicinity Moore & Wyckoff also sold recently the 75-foot plot from 118 to 124 East Fifty-fourth Street to the 118 East Fifty-fourth Street Company, and a nine-story apartment is being erected on the property.

Felix Isman Buys on 46th Street.

Felix Isman of Philadelphia has purchased for investment from Mrs. D. Wilson the four-story and basement dwelling 64 West Forty-sixth Street. The building occupies a lot 16.8 by 100.5, about 153 feet east of Sixth Avenue. Thomas L. Reynolds & Co. negotiated the sale, the parcel being held at about $50,000.

Quick Sales on East 22d Street.

A quick sale of three parcels of realty on East Twenty-second Street, between Fourth and Lexington Avenues, was reported yesterday by Bradford W. Hitchcock, attorney for the Rufus C. Read estate.

Last week the estate placed on the market the three dwellings 110, 116, and 128 East Twenty-second Street, each 20 by 98.9, which have not changed owners for close to fifty years.

Many bids were received, the successful bidders being James J. Goodwin, the owner of 108, who secured 110 for $32,500; Robert S. Minturn, head of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, who bought 116 for $30,250. Mr. Minturn has been occupying the house under lease for several years. The adjoining houses, 118 and 120, stand in the name of Susanna Minturn, so that the Minturn family now controls a frontage of 60 feet.

Adolph A. Hageman is the purchaser of 128, which adjoins the southwest corner of Lexington Avenue. This parcel was sold for $25,000.

The Private Dwelling Market.

The estate of Edward Moeller has sold 50 West Ninety-sixth Street, a four-story and basement dwelling, on lot 20 by 100.8, between Columbus Avenue and Central Park West.

Emil Frank has sold his residence, a four-story and basement private house, on lot 16.8 by 102.2, at 116 East Seventy-third Street. The property was held at $50,000 and is between Park and Lexington Avenues.

Harlem Flats Sold.

Edward W. Browning and D. H. Jackson have sold 1,497 and 1,499 Madison Avenue, a six-story apartment house, on lot 50 by 100, to Milton M. Goldsmith. The property is on the east side of Madison Avenue, between 102d and 103d Streets.

Samuel D. Cohen has sold for Dr. Charles M. Hoblitzell the tenement at 247 West 143d Street, on plot 25 by 100.

Bronx.

F. M. Weiss & Co. have sold for the Wilgus Realty Company to Emma Diemb the two-story two-family brick dwelling situated on lot 44, map of property of the Maclay Avenue Realty Company, being on the northerly side of Maclay Avenue, 25 feet east of Montgomery Place, and known as 2,523 Maclay Avenue; 25 by 100.

Alexander Selkin sold for Leo Charles Dessar two lots, 50 by 100, on Third Avenue, 89 feet north of 174th Street, to a builder, who will improve the property with stores; the same broker sold recently the adjoining plot, 150 by 100 feet.

Kirkpatrick & Urquhart have sold for Robert W. Crawford to a client 702 East 138th Street, a five-story new-law tenement, on plot 40 by 100.

Samuel D. Cohen has sold for Anna Dressler her private residence at 984 Woodycrest Avenue, on plot 37.6 by 100 feet.

Brooklyn.

E. Sharum has sold 358 and 360 East Thirty-fifth Street, Brooklyn, two two-family brick houses. Vacant lots in Jamaica were given as part payment.

Howard C. Pyle & Co. have sold for Ralph P. Hinchman 37 Monroe Place, a four-story and basement dwelling, on plot 27 by 100, to James H. Jourdan, Vice President of the Brooklyn Union Gas Company, who will occupy the house after alterations have been made.

G. W. Snyder & Son sold for Batchis & Motta 545 Tenth Street, a three-story brownstone front single flat, on lot 20 by 90, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues.

Long Island.

The Stanley Agency sold for New York & Philadelphia Associates a plot 80 by 120 feet on west side of Clinton Avenue, Jamaica, to M. L. Fretz. The plot will be immediately improved with a large dwelling.

New Jersey.

Cooper & Gerstner have sold for J. P. Yawger, a large tract on Main Street, Bound Brook, N. J., to the Pentecostal Union. The property sold has dimensions of 318 by 200 feet.

No New Fifth Avenue Apartment.

It was announced yesterday that the deal for the vacant Fifth Avenue plot adjoining the Burden residence on the south corner of Seventy-second Street has not been consummated, the firm of builders who held the option on the property owned by the Seth Barton French estate having decided not to close the deal. The plot has a frontage of 80 feet on Fifth Avenue. A syndicate a short time ago announced that the entire parcel, including the Borden house, was to be improved with a high-class apartment house, but this plan was recently abandoned. Considerable objection was raised by neighboring residents against the apartment house project.

Dwellings at Auction.

Bryan L. Kennelly will sell to-day at auction, 103 and 113 East 111th Street, two three-story dwellings; 114 West Seventy-fourth Street, four-story dwelling; 441 East Eighty-fourth Street, three-story dwelling; 358 and 360 West Eleventh Street, near Washington, plot 44 by 100.3, with tenement and stable. At absolute sale, 422 West Twenty-seventh Street, opposite Chelsea Park, a five-story tenement, and in the Borough of Brooklyn, a building plot, 100 by 125, on the south side of Sixty-first Street, near Seventh Avenue.

Leases.

Slawson & Hobbs have leased for a term of years the entire building 50 by 100 at the southern corner of 148th Street and Amsterdam Avenue to Bach & Co., for a department store.

The George Backer Construction Company, which is erecting a twelve-story store and loft building, on a plot 100 by 100, at the northeast corner of Madison Avenue and Thirty-second Street, leased from the Manice estate, has rented from the plans seven of the floors to Redlich & Co., silversmiths; "Gaben" Modiste and Weiss & Engel. The structure will not be ready for occupancy until January.

The Cross & Brown Co. has leased the entire building, 1,989 Broadway, between Sixty-seventh and Sixty-eighth Streets, for Lewis Earle, to the Hupp Corporation, for a term of years.

Pease & Elliman have leased for a client the entire upper part of the building at 447 Lexington Avenue to a Mrs. Eisenhauser; also the upper part of the building at 441 Lexington Avenue to a Mrs. Aikens for Messrs. Ingles and Smith.

Huberth & Gabel have leased for a client to Mrs. Emily Theune, the four-story house at 325 West Fifty-sixth Street, for a term of years, and also the four-story house at 327 West Fifty-eighth Street, to Thomas A. Burton.

Notes.

It was rumored in financial circles yesterday that the entire management of the Harriman railroad lines would be located in the City Investing Company Building after Jan. 1. No confirmation could be obtained.

Contracts for the sale of the property at 162d Street and Morris Avenue owned by Charles S. Ogden have not yet been signed.

Pease & Elliman have rented for Mrs. Annie P. R. Neilson her house on Central Avenue, Lawrence, L. I., to Capt. William Chappell Tremaine of the United States Army.

Plans have been filed for a fire wall of brick in the rear of the two five-story stores and tenements at 55 and 57 Spring Street, to protect the building in case of fire in the tenements in the rear. This wall will be 49.5¼ feet wide and 54 feet high. Alestino de Marco is the owner. D. Borgia, the architect, estimates the cost at $2,000.

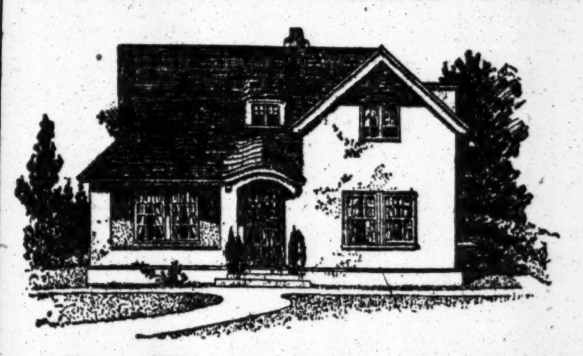
You Can Build This House for $2,500



The house shown here is one of six plans which received first, second, and third awards in the competition conducted by the Building Trade Employers' Association last Winter.

More than 200 designs were submitted in this competition and there were 176 contestants. Three of the plans are for $2,500 detached houses and the other three for houses to cost $4,500.

These six plans have been published in booklet form, with detailed specifications and estimates of cost. Free to all visitors.

Six Prize House Plans Free To All Visitors

It has taken three years to prepare this Exhibition. Call here and spend as much time as you please inspecting upwards of 200 different exhibits of building material and devices, representing an expense to collect and install of more than $200,000.00.

Nowhere can you find under one roof and in one place such a varied collection of building materials—only months of labor, of careful selection, of diligent searching make such an aggregation of displays possible.

Inspection of the exhibits here will show you how to save money in your proposed building, for it will demonstrate clearly how to make the best selection—how to choose the best methods of construction. Your home will be better, have greater value, look richer and last longer.

Not a thing in this whole Exhibition is for sale—you will not be asked to buy—there are no salesmen here. For the explanation of the various exhibits courteous attendants are provided by the management of the Exhibition.

Make it a point to visit this Exhibition Hall to-day—it is open to the public, without charge, from 9 A. M. to 5:30 P. M.

AT THE LOWEST RENT IN MANHATTAN

(The reasons, two, why the rent quoted below is the)

LOWEST RENT IN MANHATTAN

are, (1) that the St. John's Park Realty Co. purchased the entire block, 200x200 ft., bounded by Greenwich, Washington, Morton and Barrow Sts., (opposite the U. S. Appraisers' Stores) at a price which was next door to a criminal offense. (2) The contract price for the eight-story buildings covering this block, obtained at the right time last Winter when New York's best builders were falling over each other to secure work, especially of a generous size, was also akin to an infraction of the laws of the land But—

"It's an ill wind blows nobody good."

The Washington St. half of the block, 200x100, we leased from the plans to the mail order firm of Bellas Hess & Co., who have migrated from Broadway and Prince St., by which move they save $45,000 per annum in rent. If it wasn't slang we would say that is "some saving." At any rate, there is a moral attached to it. On the Greenwich St. front we built two buildings, the northerly corner of which, (Barrow St.,) 101x100, we have just leased. We now offer the remaining corner, 100x95 ft., northwest corner Greenwich and Morton Sts., at the

LOWEST RENT IN MANHATTAN

The building is eight stories and high, dry basement; 100x95 ft., containing about 82,000 square feet; splendidly planned and built; excellent light; fireproof "az iz" fireproof; equipped with the fire-preventing, insurance-saving, business-protecting automatic sprinkler system; floors have the unusual carrying capacity of 200 and 300 pounds per square foot; three large Otis electric elevators of 4,000 pounds capacity each. Outside shipping platform 200 feet long; commodious interior and exterior stairways; underwriter doors and windows; steam heat, gas, electric light and power; ideal in every way. Convenient to all North River piers and ferries; the 9th Ave. "L" and Hudson Tunnel Stations at Christopher St.; 8th Ave., 9th Ave., Houston St. and 8th St. surface lines. Firms not needing all the 82,000 square feet in this building can readily sublet one or more floors, as did the General Electric Company, for whom we built and to whom we leased a similar building diagonally opposite. Tenants are numerous for these floors separately, but we will lease the building only as a whole. We will consider the assumption of unexpired leases elsewhere of prospective tenants. The rent of the building is $18,000 net per annum, and it is the LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Use Rather Than Names Governs the Classification of Goods—Other Decisions.

In sustaining a protest filed by Pitt & Scott, Limited, the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday held that even the name of an article does not necessarily control its classification when there are circumstances to show more clearly the intent of Congress in levying duty upon an article. The case before the board calling out this ruling resulted from the action of the Collector of Customs at Boston exacting a duty of 45 per cent. ad valorem on cotton belting under the provisions in the present tariff for "manufactures of cotton."

The importers alleged that the merchandise is dutiable property at only 30 per cent., under the specific provision in the law for "belting for machinery of which cotton or other vegetable fibre is the component material of chief value." In a statement filed with the customs tribunal the Collector justifies his classification on the ground that while the article in question is used in place of a belt in transmitting power by machinery, it is not known among dealers as "belting," but is referred to in the trade as "cotton driving or transmission rope."

Judge Cooper says in his decision sustaining the protest that all of the witnesses appearing before the board admitted or asserted that the chief use of the merchandise is for transmitting power from pulley to pulley, or from the power wheel to the driving wheel of a machine, and that it is made of cotton. It is held that the use to which an article is put is controlling rather than its name. The conclusion is reached that Congress intended the classification of belting for machinery to be determined by its use, and for that reason the general description of the merchandise as "manufactures of cotton" is not controlling.

A decision was handed down upholding the protest filed by Breck & Feagans regarding the classification accruing on watch bracelets composed of gold. They were returned at 85 per cent. under the Act of 1909. It was claimed that the watches are dutiable at $1.85 apiece as "watch movements." Judge Sharretts sustains this claim, but rules that the cases inclosing the movements are a part of the bracelets, and must stand duty at 60 per cent. as "jewelry."

The board denied a claim by Albert Lorsch & Co. for a reduction in the duty assessed on agate bearings for scales. It is held that the merchandise was properly assessed at 30 per cent. The importers claimed a rate of 10 per cent.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

PUBLIC NOTICE.
BOARD OF ESTIMATE AND APPORTIONMENT, CITY OF NEW YORK.

Public notice is hereby given that at the meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, held this day, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, The Union Railway Company of New York City has under date of October 27, 1910, made application to this Board for the grant of the right, privilege and franchise to construct, maintain and operate a double track street surface railway as an extension to its existing system, from the intersection of Aqueduct and Boscobel Avenues in the Borough of the Bronx, and thence upon and over the Washington Bridge and its approaches, and upon and along 181st Street to Broadway, Borough of Manhattan; and

Whereas, Section 172 of the Railroad Law and Sections 72, 73 and 74 of the Greater New York Charter, as amended by Chapters 629 and 630 of the Laws of 1905, provide for the manner and procedure of making such grants; and

Whereas, In pursuance of such laws, this Board adopted a resolution on November 11, 1910, fixing the date for public hearing thereon as December 9, 1910, at which citizens were entitled to appear and be heard, and publication was had for at least fourteen (14) days in the "World" and "The New York Times," newspapers designated by the Mayor, and in the City Record for ten (10) days immediately prior to the date of hearing, and the public hearing was duly held on such day; and

Whereas, In further pursuance of such laws this Board adopted a resolution on March 2, 1911, entering on the minutes of the Board the proposed form of contract for the grant of the franchise or right applied for, ordering said contract advertised and fixing April 13, 1911, as the date for the final public hearing thereon; and

Whereas, This Board on April 13, 1911, at the request of the Company, adopted a resolution rescinding the resolutions adopted March 2, 1911, and

Whereas, The counsel for the Company has in a communication dated September 11, 1911, stated the terms and conditions on which the Company will accept the grant; and

Whereas, This Board has made inquiry as to the money value of the franchise or right applied for, and proposed to be granted to the Union Railway Company of New York City, and the adequacy of the compensation to be paid therefor; now, therefore, it is

Resolved, That the following form of the resolution for the grant of the franchise or right applied for by the Union Railway Company of New York City, containing the form of proposed contract for the grant of such franchise or right, be hereby introduced and entered in the minutes of this Board, as follows, to wit:

Resolved, That the Board of Estimate and Apportionment hereby grants to the Union Railway Company of New York City the franchise or right fully set out and described in the following form of proposed contract for the grant thereof, embodying all the terms and conditions, including the provisions as to rates, fares and charges, upon and subject to the terms and conditions in said proposed form of contract contained, and that the Mayor of the City of New York be and he hereby is authorized to execute and deliver such contract in the name and on behalf of The City of New York, as follows, to wit:

PROPOSED FORM OF CONTRACT.

This contract, made this day of 191 , by and between The City of New York, (hereinafater called the City,) party of the first part, by the Mayor of said City, acting for and in the name of said City, under and in pursuance of the authority of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of said City, (hereinafter called the Board,) and the Union Railway Company of New York City, (hereinafter called the Company,) party of the second part, witnesseth:

In consideration of the mutual covenants and agreements herein contained, the parties hereto do hereby covenant and agree as follows:

Section 1. The City hereby grants to the Company, subject to the conditions and provisions hereinafter set forth, the right and privilege to construct, maintain, and operate a double-track extension to its present street surface railway with the necessary wires and equipment, for the purpose of conveying passengers only in the Boroughs of Manhattan and The Bronx, in The City of New York, upon the following route, to wit:

Beginning at and connecting with the existing tracks of the Company in Boscobel Avenue, at or near its intersection with Aqueduct Avenue, in the Borough of The Bronx; thence upon and along Boscobel Avenue to Aqueduct Avenue; thence westerly upon and over the easterly approach to the Washington Bridge and upon and over the said bridge and its westerly approach to the intersection thereof with 181st Street, Borough of Manhattan, and thence upon and along 181st Street to the easterly side of Broadway, and to cross such other streets and avenues, named and unnamed, as may be encountered in said route.

The said route, with tournouts, switches, and crossovers, hereby authorized is shown upon a map entitled:

"Map showing proposed extention of the Union Railway Co. of New York City, in the Borough of Manhattan & The Bronx, City of New York, to accompany petition dated October 27, 1910, to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment," —and signed by F. W. Whitridge, Receiver; Edward A. Maher, General Manager, and T. F. Mullaney, Chief Engineer, a copy of which is attached hereto, is to be deemed a part of this contract, is to be construed with the text thereof, and is to be substantially followed, provided that deviations therefrom and additional turnouts, switches, and crossovers which are consistent with the foregoing description and the other provisions of this contract may be permitted by resolution of the Board.

Nothing in this contract shall be construed as permitting the construction of more than one double-track street surface railway upon the route hereinabove described.

Sec. 2. The grant of this privilege is subject to the following conditions, which shall be complied with by the Company:

First—The consent in writing of the owners of half in value of the property bounded on said streets and avenues to the construction and operation of said railway shall be obtained by the Company within three (3) months from the signing of this contract by the Mayor, and a copy of such consents shall be filed with the Board within such time, or in the event that such consents cannot be obtained within such time, the Company shall within said three (3) months or within one (1) month thereafter, make application to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court for the appointment of Commissioners in the manner provided by the Railroad Law, to determine if said railway ought to be constructed; otherwise this grant shall cease and determine.

Second—The said right to construct, maintain, and operate said railway shall be held and enjoyed by the Company from the date upon which this contract is signed by the Mayor until March 1, 1924, with the privilege of renewal of said contract for the further period of twenty-five (25) years, upon a fair revaluation of such right and privilege.

If the Company shall determine to exercise its privilege of renewal it shall make application to the Board, or any authority which shall be authorized by law to act for the City in place of the Board. Such application shall be made at any time not earlier than two (2) years and not later than one (1) year before the expiration of the original term of this contract. The determination of the revaluation shall be sufficient if agreed to in writing by the Company and the Board, but in no case shall the annual rate of compensation to the City be fixed at a less amount than the sum required to be paid during the last year prior to the termination of the original term of this contract.

If the Company and the Board shall not reach such agreement on or before the day one (1) year before the expiration of the original term of this contract, then the annual rate of compensation for such succeeding twenty-five (25) years shall be reasonable, and either the City (by the Board) or the Company shall be bound upon request of the other to enter into a written agreement with each other fixing the rate of such compensation at such amount as shall be reasonable, but in no case shall the annual rate so fixed be less than the sum required to be paid for the last year prior to the termination of the original term of this contract, and if the parties shall not forthwith agree upon what is reasonable, then the parties shall enter into a written agreement fixing such annual rate and at such amount as shall be determined by three disinterested freeholders selected in the following manner:

One disinterested freeholder shall be chosen by the Board; one disinterested freeholder shall be chosen by the Company; these two shall choose a third disinterested freeholder, and the three so chosen shall act as appraisers and shall make the revaluation aforesaid. Such appraisers shall be chosen at least six (6) months prior to the expiration of this original contract, and their report shall be filed with the Board within three (3) months after they are chosen. They shall act as appraisers and not as arbitrators. They may base their judgment upon their own experience and upon such information as they may obtain by inquiries and investigations, without the presence of either party. They shall have the right to examine any of the books of the Company and its officers under oath. The valuations so ascertained, fixed, and determined shall be conclusive upon both parties, but no annual sum shall, in any event, be less than the sum required to be paid for the last year of the original term of this contract. If in any case the annual rate shall not be fixed prior to the termination of the original term of this contract, then the Company shall pay the annual rate theretofore prevailing until the new rate shall be determined, and shall then make up to the City the amount of any excess of the annual rate then determined over the previous annual rate. The compensation and expenses of the said appraisers shall be borne jointly by the City and the Company, each paying one-half thereof.

Third—The Company shall pay to the City for the privilege hereby granted the following sums of money:

(a) The sum of two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500) in cash on or before the date on which operation over any portion of the route hereby authorized is commenced.

(b) During the first term of five (5) years an annual sum which shall in no case be less than one thousand dollars ($1,000), and which shall be equal to three (3) per cent. of its gross annual receipts if such percentage shall exceed the sum of one thousand dollars ($1,000).

During the second term of five (5) years an annual sum which shall in no case be less than seventeen hundred dollars ($1,700) and which shall be equal to five (5) per cent. of its gross annual receipts, if such percentage shall exceed the sum of seventeen hundred dollars ($1,700).

During the remaining term expiring March 1, 1924, an annual sum which shall in no case be less than nineteen hundred dollars ($1,900), and which shall be equal to five (5) per cent. of its gross annual receipts if such percentage shall exceed the sum of nineteen hundred dollars ($1,900).

The gross annual receipts mentioned above shall be that portion of the gross receipts of the Company from all sources within the limits of the City as shall bear the same proportion to its whole gross receipts as the length of the extension hereby authorized shall bear to the entire length of the railway of the Company in operation within the limits of the City.

The annual charges shall commence from the date upon which this contract is signed by the Mayor.

(c) For the use of the Washington Bridge and its approaches during the term expiring March 1, 1914, an annual sum of one thousand dollars ($1,000); during the succeeding term of five (5) years expiring March 1, 1919, an annual sum of one thousand two hundred and fifty dollars ($1,250); and during the remaining term of five (5) years expiring March 1, 1924, an annual sum of one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500). The compensation herein reserved shall commence from the date on which this contract is signed by the Mayor.

All annual charges as above shall be paid into the treasury of the City on November 1 of each year and shall be for the amount due to September 30 next preceding. Provided that the first annual payment shall be only for that proportion of the first annual charge as the time between the date upon which this contract is signed by the Mayor and September 30 following shall bear to the whole of one year.

Whenever the percentage required to be paid shall exceed the minimum amount as above, then such sum over and above such minimum shall be paid on or before November 1 in each year for the year ending September 30 next preceding.

The annual charges herein provided are intended to include the percentages of gross receipts now required to be paid by railway companies to the City pursuant to the Railroad Law as amended, and such charges as are required under Chapter 340 of the Laws of 1892 to be paid by the Company for this extension if said act applies to or controls the Company in relation to the right and privilege hereby granted.

The City does not and shall not demand or require the payment by the Company of a percentage of gross receipts under the provisions of Chapter 340 of the Laws of 1892 on the gross receipts earned on the extension constructed pursuant to this contract.

Any and all payments to be made by the terms of this contract to the City by the Company, shall not be considered in any manner in the nature of a tax, but such payments shall be made in addition to any and all taxes of whatsoever kind or description, now or hereafter required to be paid by any ordinance of the City, or resolution of the Board, or any law of the State of New York.

Fourth—The annual charges or payments shall continue throughout the whole term of this contract, (whether original or renewal,) notwithstanding any clause in any statute or in the charter of any other railway or railroad company providing for payment for railway or railroad rights or franchises at a different rate, and no assignment, lease, or sublease of the rights or privileges hereby granted (whether original or renewal), or of any part thereof, or of any of the routes mentioned herein, or of any part thereof, shall be valid or effectual for any purpose unless the said assignment, lease, or sublease shall contain a covenant on the part of the assignee or lessee that the same is subject to all the conditions of this contract; and that the assignee or lessee assumes and will be bound by all of said conditions, and especially said conditions as to payments, anything in any statute or in the charter of such assignee or lessee to the contrary notwithstanding, and that the said assignee or lessee waives any more favorable conditions created by such statute or its charter, and that it will not claim by reason thereof or otherwise exemption from liability to perform each and all of the conditions of this contract.

Fifth—Nothing in this contract shall be deemed to affect in any way the right of the City to grant to any individual or other corporation a similar right or privilege, upon the same or other terms and conditions, over the route hereinbefore described.

The use of the railway constructed by the Company under this contract, including the tracks, wires, and other equipment, or any structures used in connection therewith, in streets and avenues hereinbefore described, shall be permitted by the Company to any individual or corporation to which the City may have granted, or may hereafter grant, the right or privilege to use such streets and avenues for street railway purposes, upon payment of an annual sum by such individual or corporation to the Company which shall equal the legal interest on such proportion of the actual cost of the construction of such railway and structures, and additions, and betterments thereto, as the number of cars operated by such individual or corporation shall bear to the number of cars operated by the companies then using the same; and also such proportion of the cost of keeping the tracks and electrical equipment in repair, and the cost of additions and betterments thereto, such proportion of laying and repairing of pavement and removal of snow and ice, and all other duties imposed upon the Company by the terms of this contract in connection with the maintenance or the operation of said railway so used, as the number of cars operated by such individual or corporation shall bear to the number of cars operated by the companies then using the same, together with the actual cost of the power necessary for the operation of the cars thereon of such individual or corporation. Provided, however, that if, in the opinion of the Company, the legal rate of interest upon the cost of such railway shall be an insufficient sum to be paid for the use of such tracks, it may appeal to the Board and the Board may fix a percentage upon the cost to be paid to the Company, at a sum in excess of the legal rate of interest, if, in its opinion, such action is justified.

The Company shall not at any time oppose but shall upon the request of the Board, consent to the construction or operation of any street surface railway which may necessitate the use of any portion of the railway which shall be constructed by the Company pursuant to this contract.

Sixth—The rights and privileges hereby granted shall not be assigned, either in whole or in part, or leased, or sublet in any manner, nor shall the title thereto, or right, interest, or property therein, pass to or vest in any other person or corporation whatsoever, either by the act of the Company, or by operation of law, whether under the provisions of the statutes relating to the consolidation or merger of corporations or otherwise, without the consent of the City, acting by the Board, evidenced by an instrument under seal, anything herein contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding, and the granting, giving, or waiving of any one or more of such consents shall not render unnecessary any subsequent consent or consents.

Seventh—Upon the termination of this original contract, or if the same be renewed, then at the termination of the said renewal term, or upon the termination of the rights hereby granted for any cause, or upon the dissolution of the Company before such termination, the tracks and equipments of the Company constructed pursuant to this contract within the streets and avenues and upon the bridge shall become the property of the City without cost, and the same may be used or disposed of by the City for any purpose whatsoever, or the same may be leased to any company or individual.

If, however, at the termination of this contract as above, the Board shall so order by resolution, the Company shall, upon thirty (30) days' notice from the Board, remove any and all of its tracks and other equipment constructed pursuant to this contract, and the said streets and avenues and the bridge shall be restored to their original condition at the sole cost and expense of the Company.

Eighth—The Company shall commence construction of the railway herein authorized within three (3) months from the date upon which the consents of the property owners are filed with the Board or from the date of the order of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, made pursuant to Section 174 of the Railroad Law, confirming the determination of the Commissioners appointed thereunder that such railway ought to be constructed, and shall complete the construction and place the same in full operation within six (6) months from the date of filing such consents or the date of such order, otherwise this right shall cease and determine, and all sums paid, and the sum of two thousand dollars ($2,000) deposited with the Comptroller of the City, as hereinafter provided, shall thereupon be forfeited to the City; provided, that the period for commencement and the period for completion and placing the railway in full operation may be extended by the Board, but the total extension of time for either of such periods shall not exceed in the aggregate six (6) months; and provided, further, that when the commencement or completion of said construction shall be prevented by legal proceedings in any Court, or by works of public improvement, or from other causes not within the control of the Company, the time for the commencement or completion of such construction may be extended for the period of such prevention, but no delay shall be allowed for unless the Court proceedings shall be diligently prosecuted by the Company, and provided, further, that in no case shall such delay be deemed to begin until the Company shall have given written notice to the Board of any such Court proceedings or other occasion of delay, and deliver to the Board copies of any injunction or other orders, and the papers upon which the same shall have been granted, and unless upon the request of the Board the Company shall, in writing, consent that the Board, either in its own name as a party or in the name of the City as a party, may intervene in any such proceedings.

Ninth—Said railway shall be constructed and operated in the latest approved manner of street railway construction and operation, and it is hereby agreed that the Board may require the Company to improve or add to the railway equipment, including rolling stock and railway appurtenances, from time to time, as such additions and improvements are necessary, in the opinion of the Board. Upon failure on the part of the Company to comply with the direction of the Board within a reasonable time, the rights hereby granted shall cease and determine.

Tenth—Said railway shall be constructed, maintained, and operated subject to the supervision and control of all the authorities of the City who have jurisdiction in such matters, as provided by the Charter of the City.

No construction upon said railway shall be commenced until written permits have been obtained from the proper City officials.

In any permits so issued such officials may also impose such conditions, as a condition of the granting of the same, as are necessary for the purpose of protecting any structures, in the streets and avenues and upon the bridge, over which such officials have jurisdiction, and the Company shall comply with such conditions.

The electrical equipment to be installed by the Company for the operation of the railway within the limits of the City, whether the same be upon streets and avenues, or upon the bridge and its approaches, or upon private property, shall be constructed and maintained under the supervision and control of the Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity.

Eleventh—Said railway may be operated by overhead electric power substantially similar to the overhead electric system now in use by street surface railways in the Borough of The Bronx, or by any other motive power, except locomotive steam power or horse power, which may be approved by the Board, and consented to by the abutting property owners, in accordance with the provisions of law, and by the Public Service Commission for the First District of the State of New York.

Provided, however, that the Board, upon giving to the Company one (1) year's notice, may require the Company to operate its railway upon the whole or upon any portion of the route herein authorized to be constructed, except upon the Washington Bridge structure, by underground electric power substantially similar to the system now in use on the street surface railways in the Borough of Manhattan, or upon the whole or any portion of said route by any other practical motive power then in use which does not require the use of poles and overhead wires in the streets and avenues and upon the bridge and its approaches, and thereupon to discontinue the use of the overhead trolley system, and to remove its poles, wires and other structures used by it for that purpose from the streets, avenues and bridge of the City upon said route.

Twelfth—Upon six (6) months' notice by the Board to the Company, all wires for the transmission of power, except trolley wires, for the operation of the railway, upon all or any portion of the route hereby authorized, shall be placed in conduits beneath or alongside of the railway. The Company shall provide in such conduits two (2) ducts not less than three (3) inches in diameter for the exclusive use of the City. Such ducts shall be used only by the Company for the operation of its railway and by the City, as above.

Thirteenth—The rate of fare for any passenger upon said railway shall not exceed five (5) cents, and the Company shall not charge any passenger more than five (5) cents for one continuous ride, from any point on its road or on any road, line or branch operated by it or under its control to any other point thereof, or any connecting branch thereof within the limits of the City.

The Company shall carry free upon the railway hereby authorized during the term of this contract all members of the Police and Fire Departments of the City, when such employees are in full uniform.

Fourteenth—No cars shall be operated upon the railway hereby authorized, other than passenger cars and cars necessary for the repair or maintenance of the railway, and no freight cars shall be operated upon the tracks of said railway.

Fifteenth—The Company shall attach to each car run over the said railway proper fenders and wheel guards, in conformity with such laws and ordinances as are now in force, or may hereafter, during the term of this contract, be enacted or adopted by the State or City authorities, or as may be required by resolution of the Board.

Sixteenth—All cars which are operated on said railway shall be heated during the cold weather, in conformity with such laws and ordinances as are now in force, or may hereafter, during the term of this contract, be enacted or adopted by the State or City authorities, or as may be required by resolution of the Board.

Seventeenth—All cars operated on said railway shall be well lighted by electricity, or by some lighting system equally efficient, or as may be required by resolution of the Board.

Eighteenth—Cars on the said railway shall run at intervals of not more than thirty (30) minutes both day and night, and as much oftener as reasonable convenience of the public may require, or as may be directed by the Board.

Nineteenth—The Company, so long as it shall continue to use any of the tracks upon the streets and avenues or bridge in or upon which said railway shall be constructed, shall cause to be watered at least three (3) times every twenty-four (24) hours when the temperature is above thirty-five (35) degrees Fahrenheit, the entire width of the streets, avenues and bridge, except when the width of such streets, avenues, and bridge shall exceed sixty (60) feet between curb lines, in which case the Company shall cause to be watered only sixty (60) feet in width of such roadway, and the Company shall provide for such purpose at least one tank car, the capacity of which shall be sufficient to water such streets, avenues and bridge in a satisfactory manner.

Twentieth—The Company shall at all times keep the streets, avenues and bridge, upon which the said railway is constructed, between its tracks, the rails of its tracks and for a distance of two (2) feet beyond the rails, on either side thereof, free and clear from ice and snow provided, however, that the Company shall, at the option of the Commissioner of Street Cleaning, enter into an agreement for each winter season, or part thereof, to clean an equivalent amount of street surface from house line to house line.

And provided further, that the Company shall, at the option of the Commissioner of Bridges, enter into an agreement for each winter season, or part thereof, to clean an equivalent amount of roadway upon the bridge and its approaches.

Twenty-first—As long as said railway, or any portion thereof, remains in any street or avenue, or upon the bridge, the Company shall pave and keep in permanent repair that portion of the surface of the street, avenue or bridge in or upon which the said railway is constructed, between its tracks, the rails of its tracks and for a distance of two (2) feet beyond the rails on either side thereof, under the supervision of the local authorities, whenever required by them to do so, and in such manner as they may prescribe.

In case of the neglect of the Company to pave or repair the pavement on the streets after the expiration of thirty (30) days' notice to do so from the President of the Borough having jurisdiction, or in case of the neglect of the Company to pave or repair the pavement on the bridge after the expiration of thirty (30) days' notice so to do from the Commissioner of Bridges, said President or said Commissioner, as the case may be, may pave or repair the same at the expense of the Company. And the City shall have the right to change the material or character of the pavement of any street or avenue, and in that event the Company shall be bound to replace such pavement in the manner directed by the proper City official, at its own expense, and the provisions as to repairs herein contained shall apply to such renewed or altered pavement.

Twenty-second—Any alteration to the sewerage or drainage systems, or to any other subsurface or to any surface structures in the streets, required on account of the construction or operation of the railway, shall be made at the sole cost of the Company, and in such manner as the proper City officials may prescribe.

Twenty-third—It is agreed that the right hereby granted to operate a street surface railway shall not be in preference or in hindrance to public work of the City, and should the said railway in any way interfere with the construction of public works in the streets and avenues, or upon the bridge, whether the same is done by the City directly or by a contractor for the City, the Company shall, at its own expense, protect or move the tracks and appurtenances in the manner directed by the City officials having jurisdiction over such public work.

Twenty-fourth—Should the grades or lines of the streets and avenues in which the railway is hereby authorized be changed at any time after the railway has been constructed and during the term of this contract, the Company shall, at its own expense, change its tracks and appurtenances to conform with such new grades and lines, and during the construction of any public improvement upon said streets and avenues the Company shall take care of and protect the tracks and appurtenances at its own expense, all to be done subject to the direction of the City official having jurisdiction over the construction of such change.

Twenty-fifth—Upon one (1) year's notice from the Board the Company shall, if the Board shall so determine by resolution, cease the operation of the stub-end terminal at East 181st street and Broadway, and shall within sixty (60) days from the date of such notice make application to the Board for the right to construct, maintain and operate a loop terminal upon streets to be designated by the Board, and shall on or before the expiration of said one (1) year enter into a contract for such loop terminal in substitution for the stub-end terminal hereby authorized.

Twenty-sixth—The Company shall keep and maintain the tracks and the electrical equipment upon the bridge and its approaches necessary for the operation of cars thereon in good order and repair and in such manner as shall be approved and directed by the Commissioner of Bridges, and shall furnish all motive power required by the Commissioner of Bridges for the operation of its cars. If deemed necessary by the Commissioner of Bridges, the Company shall install and operate a system of signals to insure the safe and efficient operation of cars, such system to be approved by the Commissioner of Bridges. In the event of any necessity for changing the layout of tracks, curves, switches, sidings or platforms on the bridge in order to facilitate operation of cars by the Company, said Company must do all the work and furnish all the labor and tools necessary for effecting such changes, which shall all be made under the control and direction of the Commissioner of Bridges, and no such changes or construction connected therewith, or relating thereto, shall be made unless the plan or plans for the same have been first submitted to the Commissioner of Bridges and approved by him.

Twenty-seventh—Before beginning the operation of cars, the Company shall file with the Commissioner of Bridges a statement for his approval and assent as to the type of car which it proposes to operate and a sketch showing clearance dimensions, weight on axles and wheel spacing or such other information as may be required by said Commissioner. All cars operated over the bridge by the Company and all equipment and appliances relating to such operation shall be subject at all times to the inspection of the Commissioner of Bridges or his authorized representatives, who shall have power to forbid the entrance to the bridge of cars which may for any reason be unsatisfactory, and who shall have power to direct the removal of any old or inadequate appliance and the substitution therefor of appliances of approved character.

Said Commissioner may adopt rules and regulations in regard to the number of cars to be operated over the bridge, the rate of speed of said cars, the movement and headway thereof, the type and weight of cars to be used and the condition thereof, the switching of cars and the use of platforms and the control of the electrical current used by the Company, and the said Commissioner may alter and amend any such rules and regulations so as to secure the safety and comfort of persons using the bridge and preserve the purposes for which the bridge was constructed, and, upon serving notice upon the Company that such rules and regulations have been made, amended or altered, the Company shall comply with all the requirements thereof.

Twenty-eighth—Nothing in this contract shall be deemed to affect in any way the right of the Commissioner of Bridges to make any alterations or changes in the construction, operation or management of the bridge or to affect in any way the control of such Commissioner over such bridge, as provided by the Charter of the City.

Twenty-ninth—The Company shall submit to the Board a report not later than November 1 of each year for the year ending September 30 next preceding, and at any other time, upon request of the Board, which shall state:

1. The amount of stock issued, for cash, for property.
2. The amount paid in as by last report.
3. The total amount of capital stock paid in.
4. The funded debt by last report.
5. The total amount of funded debt.
6. The floating debt as by last report.
7. The total amount of floating debt.
8. The total amount of funded and floating debt.
9. The average rate per annum of interest on funded debt.
10. Statement of dividends paid during the year.
11. The total amount expended for same.
12. The names of the directors elected at the last meeting of the corporation held for such purpose.
13. Location, value and amount paid for real estate owned by the Company as by last report.
14. Location, value and amount paid for real estate now owned by the Company.
15. Number of passengers carried during the year.
16. Total receipts of Company for each class of business.
17. Amounts paid by the Company for damage to persons or property on account of construction and operation.
18. Total expenses for operation, including salaries—and such other information in regard to the business of the Company as may be required by the Board.

Thirtieth—The Company shall at all times keep accurate books of account of the gross receipts from all sources within the limits of the City, and shall, on or before November 1 of each year, make a verified report to the Comptroller of the City of the business done by the Company, for the year ending September 30 next preceding, in such form as he may prescribe. Such report shall contain a statement of such gross receipts, the total miles in operation within the limits of the City and the miles of railway constructed and operated under this contract, and such other information as the Comptroller may require. The Comptroller shall have access to all books of the Company for the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of its report, and may examine its officers under oath.

Thirty-first—In case of any violation or breach or failure to comply with any of the provisions herein contained, or with any orders of the Board or of the Commissioner of Bridges acting under the powers herein reserved, the franchise or consent herein granted may be forfeited by a suit brought by the Corporation Counsel, on notice of ten (10) days to the Company, or at the option of the Board by resolution of said Board, which said resolution may contain a provision to the effect that the railway constructed and in use by virtue of this contract shall thereupon become the property of the City without proceedings at law or in equity. Provided, however, that such action by the Board shall not be taken until the Board shall give notice to the Company to appear before it on a certain day not less than ten (10) days after the date of such notice, to show cause why such resolution declaring the contract forfeited should not be adopted. In case the Company fails to appear, action may be taken by the Board forthwith.

Thirty-second—If the Company shall fail to give efficient public service at the rates herein fixed, or fail to maintain its structures and equipment as herein provided in good condition throughout the whole term of this contract, the Board may give notice to the Company specifying any default on the part of the Company, and requiring the Company to remedy the same within a reasonable time; and upon failure of the Company to remedy such default within a reasonable time, the Company shall, for each day thereafter during which the default or defect remains, pay to the City the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars, ($250) as fixed or liquidated damages, or the Board, in case such structures or equipment which may affect the surface of the streets or of the bridge shall not be put in good condition within a reasonable time after notice by the Board as aforesaid shall have the right to make all needed repairs at the expense of the Company, in which case the Company shall pay to the City the amount of the cost of such repairs, with legal interest thereon, all of which sums may be deducted from the fund hereinafter provided for.

Thirty-third—The Company shall assume all liability to persons or property by reason of the construction or operation of the railway authorized by this contract, and it is a condition of this contract that the City shall assume no liability whatsoever to either persons or property on account of the same, and the Company hereby agrees to repay to the City any damage which the City shall be compelled to pay by reason of any acts or default of the Company.

Thirty-fourth—This grant is upon the express condition that the Company, within thirty (30) days after the signing of this contract by the Mayor, and before anything is done in exercise of the rights conferred hereby, shall deposit with the Comptroller of the City the sum of two thousand dollars ($2,000), either in money or securities, to be approved by him, which sum together with any and all sums of money or any securities heretofore deposited with the Comptroller by the Company under and pursuant to franchises heretofore granted to it by the City for the faithful performance by the Company of the several franchises so granted, shall form a fund for the performance by the Company of all of the terms and conditions of this contract and compliance with all orders of the Board or of the Commissioner of Bridges acting under the powers herein reserved, especially those which relate to the payment of the annual charges for the privilege hereby granted, the rendering of efficient public service at the rates herein fixed, the repairs of the street and bridge pavement, the repair and maintenance of tracks and equipment upon the bridge and its approaches, and the removal of snow and ice and the quality of construction of the railway and the maintenance of the property in good condition throughout the whole term of this contract, and in case of default in the performance by the Company of such terms and conditions or compliance with such orders, or either or any of them, the City shall have the right to cause the work to be done and the materials to be furnished for the performance thereof after due notice, and shall collect the reasonable cost thereof from the said fund without legal proceedings; or after default in the payment of the annual charges, shall collect the same with interest, from the said fund after ten (10) days' notice to the Company; or in case of failure to observe the said terms and conditions of this contract and orders of the Board hereunder, relating to the headway, heating and lighting of cars, fenders, wheel-guards and watering of street pavements, the Company shall pay a penalty of fifty dollars ($50) per day for each day of violation, and the further sum of ten dollars ($10) per day for each car that shall not be properly heated, lighted or supplied with fenders or wheel guards, in case of a violation of the provisions relating to those matters.

The procedure for the imposition and collection of the penalties in this contract shall be as follows:

The Board, on complaint made, shall give notice to the Company, directing its President, or other officer to appear before the Board on a certain day not less than ten (10) days after the date of such notice to show cause why the Company should not be penalized in accordance with the foregoing provisions. If the Company fails to make an appearance, or, after a hearing appears in the judgment of the Board to be in fault, said Board shall forthwith impose the prescribed penalty, or where the amount of the penalty is not prescribed herein, such amount as appears to the Board to be just, and without legal procedure direct the Comptroller to withdraw the amount of such penalty from the security fund deposited with him. In case of any drafts made upon the security fund the Company shall, upon ten (10) days' notice in writing, pay to the City a sum sufficient to restore said security fund to the original amount, and in default thereof this contract shall be canceled and annuled at the option of the Board, acting in behalf of the City. No action or proceeding or right under the provisions of this contract shall affect any other legal rights, remedies or causes of action belonging to the City.

Thirty-fifth—The words "notice" or "direction," wherever used in this contract, shall be deemed to mean a written notice or direction. Every such notice or direction to be served upon the Company shall be delivered at such office in the City as shall have been designated by the Company, or if no such office shall have been designated, or if such designation shall have for any reason become inoperative, shall be mailed in the City, postage prepaid, addressed to the Company at the City. Delivery or mailing of such notice or direction as and when above provided shall be equivalent, to direct personal notice or direction, and shall be deemed to have been given at the time of delivery or mailing.

Thirty-sixth—The words "streets or avenues" and "streets and avenues," wherever used in this contract, shall be deemed to mean "streets, avenues, highways, parkways, driveways, concourses, boulevards, bridges, viaducts, tunnels, public places or any other property to which the City has title or over which the public has an easement," encountered in the route hereinabove described, and upon or in which authority is hereby given the Company to construct a railway.

Thirty-seventh—If at any time the powers of the Board or any other of the authorities herein mentioned or intended to be mentioned, shall be transferred by law to any other board, authority, officer or officers, then and in such case such other board, authority, officer or officers, shall have all the powers, rights and duties herein reserved to or prescribed for the Board or other authorities, officer or officers.

Sec. 3. Nothing in this contract shall be construed as in any way limiting the present or future jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission under the laws of the State of New York.

Sec. 4. This grant is also upon the further and express condition that the provisions of Article 5, and the other provisions of the Railroad Law pertinent hereto shall be strictly complied with by the Company.

Sec. 5. The Company promises, covenants and agrees on its part and behalf to conform to and abide by and perform all the terms and conditions and requirements in this contract fixed and contained.

In witness whereof, the party of the first part, by its Mayor, thereunto duly authorized by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of said City, has caused the corporate name of said City to be hereunto signed and the corporate seal of said City to be hereunto affixed; and the party of the second part, by its officers, thereunto duly authorized, has caused its corporate name to be hereunto signed and its corporate seal to be hereunto affixed, the day and year first above written.

The City of New York,
By [Corporate Seal.] Mayor.
Attest:
City Clerk.
Union Railway Company of New York City,
By Receiver.
By President.
[Seal.]
Attest:
Secretary.

Resolved, That the results of the inquiry made by this Board as to the money value of the franchise or right proposed to be granted and the adequacy of the compensation proposed to be paid therefor, and of the terms and conditions, including the provisions as to rates, fares and charges, are as hereinbefore specified and fully set forth in and by the foregoing form of proposed contract for the grant of such franchise or right.

Resolved, That these preambles and resolutions, including the said resolution for the grant of a franchise or right applied for by the Union Railway Company of New York City, and the said form of a proposed contract for the grant of such franchise or right containing said results of such inquiry, after the same shall be entered in the minutes of this Board, shall be published for at least twenty (20) days immediately prior to Thursday, October 26, 1911, in the City Record, and at least twice during the ten (10) days immediately prior to Thursday, October 26, 1911, in two daily newspapers to be designated by the Mayor therefor, and published in the City of New York, at the expense of the Union Railway Company of New York City, together with the following notice, to wit:

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, before authorizing any contract for the grant of the franchise or right applied for by the Union Railway Company of New York City, and fully set forth and described in the foregoing form of proposed contract for the grant of such franchise or right, and before adopting any resolution authorizing such contract, will, at a meeting of said Board, to be held in the Old Council Chamber, City Hall, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on Thursday, October 26, 1911, at 10:30 o'clock A. M., hold a public hearing thereon, at which citizens shall be entitled to appear and be heard.

(The New York Press and The New York Times designated.)

THEY TOLD ANOTHER STORY

Sure of Their Case, They Didn't Press Grand Jury to Indict for First Offense Against Sopano Girl.

With the young giant, Frank Brach, securely shackled and handcuffed to one of the strongest detectives in Brooklyn, the police spoke with greater freedom yesterday about the case of Agnes Waugh, the nineteen-year-old daughter of George A. Waugh, who could only remember, according to the story given out by her father and the police after she had been assaulted just at nightfall on Wednesday that "the fingers she felt against her throat and the hand she felt upon her mouth were very, very large."

The police spoke yesterday with delight of the manner in which this story had served their purpose of throwing off his guard the man of whom they had the gravest suspicions until detectives could fraternize with him and determine that he was surely the man they wanted.

Brach, so large-appearing as to look abnormal, was up in the Fifth Avenue (Brooklyn) Court yesterday on a charge of assault. He was held without bail for forty-eight hours by Magistrate Hylan, the purpose of this proceeding being to allow Miss Agnes Waugh time to recover from her terrible experience of a week ago, so that she may face Brach in the courtroom and tell what she may know of him. The police now assert that she gave the detectives, on the morning after the occurrence, a full description of her assailant, and they also say that they have had the man she described constantly under surveillance for four days.

Shortly after Brach appeared in the Fifth Avenue Court a King's County Grand Jury met to hear the testimony of Miss Alma Sopano, who is employed as a maid in Lexington Avenue, near Fifty-sixth Street, Manhattan. Miss Sopano told the Grand Jurors that she was attacked last August while on her way to visit a friend living at 1,168 Thirty-eighth Street, Bay Ridge, and that thereafter Brach was arrested and held without bail for the crime, but later got bail through the intercession of his mother. The Grand Jurors failed to return an indictment against Brach, but for this an explanation was brought forward by the District Attorney's office and the police.

The law provides a maximum penalty of twenty years' imprisonment should Brach be convicted of the crime against Miss Waugh. It is feared by the police that if he were indicted upon the charge brought by the Sopano girl, he would have the status in court of a first offender and would be subject to the clemencies extended in such cases. However, if he should be indicted for a second and more serious crime in addition to the first indictment, they argued then he would likely receive a long sentence.

It was to win all the possible advantages for the prosecution out of the situation that the indictment on the first case was withheld pending the hearing of Miss Waugh's testimony.

Dr. David Livingstone said yesterday that he thought it would be ten days before Miss Waugh would be well enough to leave home.

An unsuccessful effort was made to have the Magistrates Court case against Brach postponed for ten days instead of forty-eight hours, but Magistrate Hylan could not see his way clear to do this under the law. When Detectives Henne and Geisler led their prisoner into the courtroom his lawyer, Martin T. Lynch, was on his feet almost instantly with a demand that he be tried without delay. He said that the dramatic situation created by the fact that Miss Waugh was assailed within a stone's throw of her parents' home had aroused intense antagonism toward any person suspected of the crime. He declared his client was a victim of police persecution, and ought to be set at liberty.

"I will hold the prisoner for forty-eight hours," said the Magistrate, "but if at the expiration of that time an affidavit from the girl's physician is presented I shall extend the time forty-eight hours and repeat that long enough to give Miss Waugh time to recover."

Brach was led to a cell in the Fort Hamilton Police Station.

At the Waugh home yesterday George A. Waugh said he found himself incapable of great resentment against the prisoner. "I recognized as soon as I saw him," he said, "that I was dealing with a brute who had no mental powers. Were it otherwise, I don't think I could have restrained myself when they brought him to my home."

Brach wore a soiled serge suit and a slouch hat and presented an extremely unkempt appearance. His only employment has been as a roofer in the vicinity of his home at 1,131 Thirty-sixth Street, Brooklyn. In the Rogues' Gallery his picture is No. 37,000, according to a statement made by Inspector Hughes of the Detective Bureau last night.

Inspector Hughes talked about the case after reports from his subordinates had been placed before him. He said that on Aug. 25 Magistrate Reynolds held Brach without bail, committing him to the Raymond Street Jail, and that he would be there now except for the activities of his mother, Emily Brach, in his behalf.

Mrs. Brach appeared before Judge Dike in Brooklyn with an offer to put up a house in Twelfth Avenue, at Thirty-sixth Street, worth $10,000, as bail for her son. Judge Dike accepted this bail, Inspector Hughes, said, and released Brach on Aug. 31. The offense for which Brach's picture was placed in the Rogues' Gallery was an alleged assault upon Samuel Cohen of 1,153 Thirty-ninth Street, Brooklyn, on Aug. 13, 1908. The case, after lingering in the courts for two years, ended in the dismissal of Brach by Judge Kelly in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn. The enormous strength and overdevelopment of Brach was a matter of which the police made note on his arrest in 1908.

DIX OUSTS PRISON BOARD.

Four Commissioners Removed and One Resigns, Owing to Wingdale Contract.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Failing to comply with the demand of Gov. Dix for their immediate resignations, four of the five members of the State Commission on New Prisons have been removed from office by the Governor. They are Elisha M. Johnson, Olean, President; John C. West, New York; Cornelius V. Collins, Troy, and Dr. George Skiff, Gainesville. William J. McKay of Newburg, the fifth Commissioner, offered his resignation a few days ago. The Governor to-day certified to Secretary of State Lazansky that he had taken such action.

Just before the Governor formally assumed the duties of his office this commission awarded to the P. J. Carlin Construction Company of New York, for over $2,000,000, the contract for the construction of the new Harlem Prison, at Wingdale, Dutchess county. The Governor contends that the site selected for the new prison is not suitable for prison purposes, and, in addition, there is no immediate need for a new prison. He is negotiating with the Carlin Company for the abrogation of its contract, in return for which the State is to pay $125,000 for the preliminary construction work done by the company

A New ARROW Notch COLLAR

Cluett, Peabody & Company, Makers, Troy, N. Y.

HISS MAYOR'S NAME.

Taxpayers in Convention Express Derision When Speaker Praises Him.

The Taxpayers' Convention, under the auspices of the United Real Estate Owners' Associations of the City of New York, met for its first session in the New York Turn Hall, Lexington Avenue and Eighty-fifth Street, last night. The hall was crowded to capacity. Among the real estate organizations sending delegates were the House and Real Estate Owners' Associations of the Twelfth and Nineteenth Wards, the Taxpayers' Associations of the Tenth, Eleventh, and Seventeenth Wards, the West Side Taxpayers' Association, the Taxpayers' Alliance of the Bronx, the Bedford Park Taxpayers' Association, and similar organizations in various sections of the city.

The convention will be in session again to-day.

The speakers last night were Thomas Krekeler, President of the United Real Estate Owners' Association; Michael J. Horan, the Chairman of the convention; Edgar J. Levey, Dr. Henry W. Berg., Louis Schrag, and Ira J. Ettinger.

Dr. Henry W. Berg said passingly in his speech that he considered Mayor Gaynor to be one of the greatest, whereupon his audience broke into laughter, howls of derision, and hisses. The speaker, with hand upheld, waited vainly for a full minute and went on saying:

"I do consider him a great man; to have given up the position of dignity and honor to fight your petty and dirty battles in the City Hall."

Mr. Levey, who made the principal speech, said that the rights which people have hitherto possessed in the fullest and freest enjoyment of their own liberty and property have now become the subject of a most malignant social warfare.

Mr. Levy denounced the Sullivan-Shortt bill, which, he said, was almost certain to be revived again, next year. This bill provides that the tax shall be decreased on improvements on real estate and the tax correspondingly increased on land. He characterized the bill as nothing less than the "Single Tax Confiscation" advocated by the late Henry George.

RODGERS AT FORT WORTH.

Completes Flight from McAlester, After Delays, in Nearly Nine Hours.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Oct. 17.—Aviator Rodgers arrived here at 4:17 P. M., after having gone about 50 miles out of his course in to-day's lap of his trans-continental flight.

The distance is 191 miles. He left McAlester, Okla., after making a circuit of the city, at 7:30 o'clock this morning and following the tracks of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad, started south at high speed.

Rodgers flew over Denison at 9:25, and alighted at Pottsboro, seven miles south of Denison, at 9:30 A. M., owing to a lack of gasoline, and inability to get any there kept him on the ground for two hours.

Rodgers left Pottsboro shortly before noon, having obtained gasoline from his special train, and for a time afterward lost his way, heading for Wichita Falls, Texas. Towns along the branch line of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway between Whitesboro and Wichita Falls tried to attract the aviator's attention.

He expects to fly to Dallas to-morrow morning. Returning to Fort Worth on Thursday he will resume his trip toward the Pacific Coast, Waco being the first stop.

ROBINSON FLIES 110 MILES.

Damages Air Craft in Mississippi River—On Way to New Orleans.

Hugh Robinson's hydroplane drifted helplessly over a hidden wing dam in the Mississippi River, thirteen miles north of Winona, at 10:40 o'clock to-day, one hour and nine minutes after the aviator left Minneapolis on his flight to New Orleans. The distance covered was 110 miles.

Robinson, after a flight in which he outstripped a sixty-mile an hour train, sought the river only when his gasoline had run out. His plan had been to stop at Red Wing. More than 1,000 feet high he passed over the town without seeing it. He kept his course, following the river below him.

In going over the hidden dam at Whiteman the covering of the aeroplane's pontoon was ripped and one of the wings was sprung. The craft was brought to the pier at Winona. When Robinson sought to resume his journey he discovered a leak. After an unsuccessful effort to get on toward La Crosse the aviator announced he would remain in Winona to-night.

AUTO TIRE COMPANY LOOTED.

Employes Charged with Working with Outsiders—Five Arrested.

The United States Tire Company of 1,789 Broadway has been systematically robbed of automobile tires within the last few months. It was said yesterday that the amount of the loss had not yet been determined, but that it might reach $20,000. The company learned that it had been robbed when collectors tried last week to collect from persons whose names appeared on the books as purchasers, but who said that they hadn't bought any tires.

The company learned, it is said, that most of the tires disappeared between its storehouses and its retail store. Transfer slips, it is charged, were made out by certain of their employes, but the tires, instead of being taken to the retail store, were transported to another distributing agency, where they were disposed of at a reduced cost.

Detective McMahon of the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station was put on the case, and within a few days arrested three men on charges of grand larceny, one man for receiving stolen goods, and a fifth for being the go-between. Among those arrested are Thomas J. Farrelly of 359 West Fifty-fourth Street, Joseph Hall of 433 West Forty-ninth Street, Frank Grace, and William Jude.

NAMES A STREET COMMITTEE

Twenty-two Against County Collector Egan for Loans to Robert Davis and Others.

JERSEY POLITICIANS HIT

Padded Payroll Also Charged in First Return from the Elisor-Drawn Grand Jury.

More than sixty indictments were handed up to Supreme Court Justice Swayze in Jersey City yesterday by the new Hudson County Grand Jury which has been investigating conditions in Hudson County with the assistance of James Cameron, the investigator who disclosed the Harrisburg (Penn.) capitol scandal. The Grand Jury was named by two elisors at Justice Swayze's direction after he had dismissed the Grand Jury selected by Sheriff James J. Kelly, following that official's action in releasing four proprietors of alleged disorderly resorts from the Hudson County jail.

Twenty-two of the indictments are directed against County Collector Stephen M. Egan, charging him with high misdemeanor for loaning county funds aggregating $200,000 to the late Robert Davis, Democratic leader, and other officials. With the exception of some interest this money is now all back in the possession of the county.

Other indictments charging conspiracy were found against John Zeller, President of the Hudson County Board of Elections; Robert Wiencke, his son-in-law and a clerk in the Surrogate's office; Joseph O'Donnell, clerk in the Board of Elections, and August Metzinger, whom, it is charged, was on the payrolls of the Board of Elections as a clerk but never actually performed any labor.

It is charged that Metzinger was appointed by Zeller, and that the warrant for his monthly salary was signed by Wiencke in the name of Zeller, who collected the salary, thus taking funds from the county which had never been earned. O'Donnell's part in the conspiracy is said to have been to certify to Metzinger's having performed work entitling him to the salary.

Metzinger gave testimony first to District Attorney Pierre Garven, and later before the Grand Jury, that he had never earned the salary allotted to him and had never received it. Zeller is said to have made the explanation that Metzinger actually earned his salary and that he (Zeller) had received part of it each month in repayment of a debt owed to him by Metzinger.

The number of indictments, coupled with their character, startled politicians in Hudson County by the light which was thus thrown on the probable thoroughness of the investigation. That the inquiry is not to be a whitewashing affair, but will be made as thorough and as deep as can be accomplished seemed to be evidenced by this first batch of indictments.

Metzinger was in court yesterday when the indictments were found and immediately appeared before Justice Swayze to plead not guilty. He was held in $500 bail for trial, and this was provided. Justice Swayze will sit to-day to receive the pleas of the others indicted. No bench warrants have been issued, as it is known that they will appear voluntarily.

ACTOR LOSES $30,000.

James O'Neill Invested in a Metal Novelty Company.

It developed yesterday, as a result of the petition in involuntary bankruptcy filed in the United States District Court on Monday against the Anchor Metal Novelty Company of 342 West Fourteenth Street, that James O'Neill, the actor, who for two generations has played the part of Monte Cristo, is heavily interested in the concern, and at a recent meeting was elected President.

Mr. O'Neill is now in Cincinnati where he is appearing in his old rôle in vaudeville. He has retained William H. Baker of 149 Broadway to look after his interests in the bankruptcy proceedings.

The petition was filed by three of the Novelty Company's creditors, Hannah Levy with a claim of $153; John Sanborn & Son, $147, and Frederic Persky, $222. William S. Creevey was appointed receiver by Judge Holt and his bond fixed at $3,000. The liabilities of the company were given as $20,000 and assets $6,000, consisting of a plant valued at $5,000, and stock worth $1,000.

According to Mr. Baker, Mr. O'Neill became interested in the company a little more than two years ago, and altogether has put about $30,000 in the business.

"He made the investment to help a friend," said Mr. Baker last night, "and as far as I know took no active part in the management. If he was elected President it was simply as a figurehead.

"I am hoping that it will be possible to bring about a reorganization of the company and that Mr. O'Neill will not lose any money. I believe he is comfortably off, but no one wants to lose $30,000 or more if he can help it. This trouble was brought about, as I understand it, because the company failed to meet its pay roll and could not produce cash to satisfy some small claims. Further than that I don't want to discuss the proceeding just at present."

James O'Neill is now in his sixtieth year and has played the role of Monte Cristo more than 6,000 times. He has been on the stage since his fifteenth year and during his long career has accumulated a considerable fortune. He was at one time interested in the actors' mine known as the Uncle Sam, at Bodie, and purchased a large farm in Maryland.

FOR INFLUENCING A JURY.

Court Reproves Friend of Prisoner and Demands an Explanation.

Immediately after sentencing Max Aronson, a chauffeur of 119 East Fifty-fifth Street, to the Hart's Island Reformatory yesterday for impairing the morals of a child, Judge Swann of General Sessions called Edward C. Shapiro, a real estate agent of 1,137 Washington Avenue, the Bronx, to the bar and told Shapiro that the court had learned that he had attempted to sway the talesmen of the panel in favor of Aronson. Judge Swann gave Shapiro until Monday to confer with counsel and make a statement accounting for his action in the Aronson case.

Aronson was put on trial before Judge Swann last Thursday for abducting fifteen-year-old Anna Sutherland of 220 East Fifty-seventh Street on July 28. He announced at the close of the People's case that he desired to plead guilty and Judge Swann accepted a plea to a misdemeanor. When Aronson was in court yesterday for sentence his wife appeared to plead for him and Judge Swann said:

"It seems in this particular case that the wife should not be present. This defendant was accused and indicted for abduction. I was satisfied when I heard the evidence that he was guilty. This defendant is a taxi-cab chauffeur and I am perfectly satisfied that he picked up this little girl and gave her a ride in his cab. When I heard the case against him I suggested that he take a plea to a misdemeanor. He has no previous record and such a plea limits me to the imposition of a year's imprisonment. This is much less than the public demands, but I am going to show him extreme leniency, despite the fact that it will not meet with popular approval, so I will send him to the City Reformatory, where, if he is good, he will get out in six months. This is contrary to the wishes of the Children's Society, which protected this little girl."

COMMITS IDA VON CLAUSSEN.

Court Sends Her to Asylum on Hearing She Has an Exaggerated Ego.

Mrs. Ida von Claussen was committed to the Bloomingdale State Hospital for the Insane yesterday by Supreme Court Justice McCall on affidavits from doctors in the Bellevue Hospital psycopathic ward declaring that she is suffering from paranoia.

The doctors found that Mrs. von Claussen had the exaggerated ego and was threatening in her demeanor. She told them, they said, that she had occult powers, that she had talked with the dead, and that the German Emperor would send a gunboat up the East River to Bellevue Hospital for her protection.

Mrs. von Claussen has figured in several sensational episodes, including an attempt to get the United States Minister to Sweden removed for failing to present her at court, an attempted suit for $1,000,000 against Theodore Roosevelt, and an attack on clerks and officials of a trust company in the Wall Street district after a refusal to allow her advances from a trust estate.

The circumstance which resulted in a judicial inquiry into her sanity was a telegram she sent to Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum, before whom she had an action pending, which contained this sentence, "If foul play marks your decision, God help you!" This action, in which George Robinson of 99 Nassau Street was her attorney, was brought to set aside her South Dakota divorce from Dr. William Francis Honan, so that she could bring a suit in New York. Robinson consented yesterday that his client be sent to Bloomingdale.

Justice McCall told Mrs. von Claussen that she might have her commitment tested at any time by a writ of habeas corpus and a jury trial of her mental condition. Before she is pronounced insane in this way she will still have control of her yearly income, said to be $7,500. Mrs. von Claussen said she wolud remain at Bloomingdale for a few weeks' rest before bringing further proceedings.

THE THIEF
"She fairly electrified her audience. She showed herself a virtuoso of frenzy. She carried every one away on a turbulent stream of emotion. She made us believe we really saw a woman fighting for her happiness. There seemed to be no limit to her range; there was no premature climax. Her performance was one steady crescendo. Other actresses have attempted the same thing, but the result they achieved was harrowing, an indecent display of vociferous violence. Mme. Simone never gave this impression for an instant. The effect she made was moving, astounding, cyclonic."—Louis Sherwin in The Globe.

The Man in the Tower Presents Winter Silk Socks

THEIR premier appearance, not merely unusual, but absolutely new.

The FIFTY CENT "Onyx" pure silk sock idea, just perfected in a heavy, comfortable winter weight.

More than an innovation—a triumph in high class silk knitting.

Make their bow in New York at the eight Weber and Heilbroner stores.

The same shops in which the popular "Onyx" Summer Silk Socks at Fifty Cents were first introduced.

In black and a dozen modish colors—admirably cast to play the heavy part in the show of fashionable foot-wear.

These new socks have all the customary character and sturdiness of the "Onyx" goods which have revolutionized the hosiery business.

It has been no small undertaking to produce them.

If they were made abroad instead of in America, one would expect them to be priced at $1 to $1.50.

The Man in the Tower notices that men who dress with care have learned to avoid the flimsy spun silk socks presented at preposterously low prices.

We patiently waited for the FIFTY CENT mark to be legitimately reached in the pure, heavy-weight goods.

Then we placed the introductory order.

During the past two Summers men have learned the superior comfort of the silk hosiery sold at the Weber and Heilbroner stores and its unquestioned wearing quality.

We present these Fifty Cent Winter Silk Socks in the full belief that they represent the most advanced point yet reached.

Last Night

Today

Marguerita Sylva in her own songs from Gypsy Love on Edison Phonograph Records at all Edison dealers.

Never before has a great musical artiste made records of her own songs from the opera in which she is the star so that the records could go on sale simultaneously with the first performance of the production.

In two of the records Madame Sylva is assisted by Arthur Albro and Carl Haydn, principal tenors in Gypsy Love.

Louis F. Gottschalk, director of the Gypsy Love orchestra, conducted the orchestra which accompanied Sylva on these records.

Madame Sylva makes records only for the Edison Phonograph, which is only one of the many reasons why you should have an Edison Phonograph.

A list of the Sylva Records at all Edison dealers or by writing.
